McGregor-Manderson Wedding Held At Central, Lot 16

A wedding of much interest was solemnized at the Manse, Central Lot 16, on Friday, Nov. 12th at 5 o'clock P.M., when Eva Mabel second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Manderson became the bride of James Albert, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. McGregor of Central Lot 16. Rev. G. A. Christie performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was charmingly attired in a turquoise chiffon velvet afternoon gown with white fox neck piece, and matching accessories, was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Manderson, who wore a recedea green afternoon dress with accessories to match. The groom was supported by Mr. Alvin H. Webb of O'Leary.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party, motored to the home of the bride's parents where a reception was held for the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

Later in the evening a band of serenaders appeared on the scene to offer their congratulations.

After receiving the hearty congratulations and best wishes of all present the young couple left on a honeymoon trip to points of interest in the eastern part of the Island.

On their return they will reside in their modern, newly completed home in Central Lot 16, where they will be followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

"One In A Million" At Capitol Theatre Summerside

"One in a Million," opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside and attracted large crowds with its sensational ice reels and a dazzling winter wonderland with lovely Sonja Henie, the Queen of the Silver Skates, Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ned Sparks, Don Ameche, the Ritz Brothers, Arline Judge, Borrah Minevich and his gang, Dixie Dunbar, Leah Ray and Shirley Deane, all doing their part in the star-radiant, laugh-snow-silvered settings, to make it the most sensational and spectacular musical smash of the season.

The daughter of a Swiss innkeeper, Sonja Henie is being trained by her father, Jean Hersholt, to capture the Olympic figure skating championship.

Sonja attracts the interests of Ameche, young American newspaperman investigating a neighborhood mystery, who sees in her unusual material for a human interest story for his paper.

Sonja also interests, professionally, the fun-loving, but glib-tongued manager of a vaudeville troupe, Adolphe Menjou, stranded in Hersholt's hostelry.

Menjou induces Sonja to join his troupe and arranges a contract in St. Moritz for the dazzling ice ballet he has envisioned. Realizing that such an appearance will disqualify her for the Olympic title so close to her father's heart, Don Ameche flies to St. Moritz, arriving in the middle of the ballet, which he disrupts by abducting its star.

Sonja wins the Olympic title, but when Hersholt hears that she has skated professionally, he realizes she has been deceived. He turns the medals to the committee. Don Ameche, with the assistance of his dead-pan assistant, Ned Sparks, is able to prove that Sonja is guiltless. The resourceful young reporter further proves to Sonja's satisfaction that they were meant for each other.

Lauds Efforts To Improve Silver Fox Industry

Dr. Archibald Of Ottawa Stresses Value Of Illustration Stations In Address To Foxmen.

Dr. Archibald, superintendent of the Experimental Fur Division, Ottawa, was the chief speaker at the evening meeting at the Fox Educational headquarters last night. Mayor B. W. Robinson presided.

Dr. Archibald in his opening remarks gave a review of the fox industry. He brought greetings from J. D. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, who, he said, felt the need for some assistance in the fox industry in the same manner as in other agricultural lines. Dr. Archibald said it was a great thing this gathering of foxmen for the purpose of finding what value is placed on such demonstrations along these lines of agriculture. He has been found to be 50 to 60 per cent in improvement. The fox industry has now become Dominion wide and the time has surely come for more research work in this particular industry.

Fact-Finding Institutions

Describing the methods of the illustration stations as applied to other agricultural products, Dr. Archibald said, these stations are owned by individuals and are used more as fact finding institutions.

They are situated all over the country and have proved of great benefit to the farmers as a whole. Hon. A. C. Taylor, minister of agriculture for New Brunswick, had made the suggestion that some such illustration station could be of much assistance to the fox rancher. Dr. Archibald said that he approved of the suggestion but it would be left to the ranchers themselves to see to what extent it would be of use. He was pleased to see a group of men such as are here on the Island willing to solve problems for themselves without any government aid.

In the matter of experiment and research work, the Department felt that experimental farms are needed in other parts of the Dominion. It was proposed to have a special department for fur bearing animals and estimates have been carefully prepared. It was thought to have a central research division with laboratory and library. It was thought the Central Experimental Farm would be the right location for the central division with one other station in the western part of Canada.

Broadening Industry

Dr. Archibald pointed out the advantage of raising other fur-bearing animals as a companion industry to the silver fox industry; in other parts of Canada it was practiced quite extensively. Even in the raising of silver fox there was plenty of room for careful study and development in the various color phases. Dr. Archibald expressed pleasure at the work carried on at the Fox Experimental Station. Ranchers required more knowledge on the basic foods and the percentage of digestibility and usefulness of certain classes of meats and cereals. There seemed to be a wide diversity of ideas even among intelligent breeders as to the value of certain meats and cereals. The research work at the Experimental Station is giving valuable assistance along these lines but these things take time and ranchers must not be impatient.

Drought Problem

Dr. Archibald also spoke of the drought areas in the west and their reaction to the feed problems of the rancher in the east. The west, however, is capitalizing from its disaster and he predicted a return to normal next year at least to some extent. Here again the value of the illustration station had proved most useful. Dr. Archibald closed his remarks by assuring foxmen of his assistance in every way possible.

Mr. F. Burke, fox field man for the Island then outlined the work of the past few weeks which has brought about in some measure the success of the meeting.

Tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock Hon. A. C. Taylor would be the speaker. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Reagh Tinney gave a talk and demonstration on the correct method of pelting a fox. On Wednesday a demonstration of pelting will be held at 3.30.

touch with the latest developments in rearing the silver fox and that much benefit would be derived from this educational week. Citizens of Summerside were showing their appreciation of what the fox industry has meant to them by getting behind this new movement.

Mayor Robinson laid emphasis on the fact that one cannot stand still. Any business must go either forward or backward. The idea behind this educational feature is progress. He congratulated the Provincial Government on the initiative they have taken in organizing the fox study groups. In closing he extended a hearty welcome to all and particularly to representatives of the study clubs.

Hon. W. H. Dennis congratulated Mr. Arnett and his committee in their foresight and vision they had displayed in arranging the feature which would be beneficial to foxmen in years to come. Speaking of the work his department had undertaken in organizing study clubs, he said the government realized that there is keen competition in the fox industry and close cooperation among foxmen is needed if we are to hold our place in the fox world. He appreciated very much the assistance given the department from the fur houses and prominent ranchers in helping them put over the program they had undertaken in assisting the fox industry.

Premier Campbell was then called upon to officially open the show. He congratulated the fox committee on the widespread interest they had created and the ready response to the movement by foxmen from all parts of the province. It was fitting that Summerside should be the centre chosen for the first demonstration of this kind on a large scale. The Board of Trade had taken the initiative in this instance because they realized the great impetus the fox industry had been to business generally. The fox business had a stabilizing influence during the years of depression. The government had come forward when they realized that the field service would help to keep the quality of foxes on a high level and that week's educational features, with competent men to discuss the various problems with the rancher, will help along the same lines. The Premier felt that the government and fox ranchers are indebted to these men for the constructive assistance in the way of demonstrations and lectures.

Hon. Dr. MacMillan added his congratulations to those of the previous speaker to the Summerside foxmen and to the government for the work they have undertaken in organizing the fox field service and bringing about this fox demonstration week. It was something well worth while, he said, for the fox industry was one of the greatest in the province.

Messrs. Murley, Dr. Archibald, A. E. Maclean, M.P., George Mayers, and Senator MacArthur all added their congratulations upon one of the biggest features ever put on for the benefit of the fox industry.

CONSTITUTION

ilities if services now accepted as part of normal government function of the Dominion were not to collapse financially.

The government asserted emphatically Canada should be able to amend her own constitution as a self-governing democracy. It asserted certain amendments were obviously within Dominion jurisdiction national services like unemployment insurance, old age pensions, wage-and-hour legislation.

So Manitoba might extricate itself from its own financial morass, direct result of the depression, the government cancellation of $22,000,000 relief loans to the province; capitalization by the Dominion at 3 1/4 per cent of subsidies annually paid the province; and conversion of the remaining provincial debt at the same interest rate.

The province proposed the Dominion Government should assume full responsibility for unemployment relief and old age pensions and 50 per cent of the cost of other social services.

The province undertook to give up succession duties and its annual subsidies and to increase its financial aid to the municipalities.

Attorney-General W. J. Lester, presenting the section of the provincial brief dealing with the constitutional situation, claimed the British North America Act had "ceased to be an effective instrument of government."

In the original intention of the Fathers of Confederation the Central Government would have administered all matters not specifically delegated to the provinces, he said, but the courts had interpreted the act in exactly the opposite direction.

Powers of the provinces had been steadily enlarged while, paradoxically, their revenue sources remained strictly limited. An impasse resulted.

"The act should be amended so it will meet the needs of today and cease to be an obstacle to social progress and national development," he said. It had served well the time for which it was enacted but 70 years evolved a new orientation of the rights of citizens in relation to government.

The Manitoba Government believed the problems facing the country today were no greater than those of 1867, he said. Sectional and political differences could again be overcome so necessary changes could be made to make the constitution meet modern problems.

Prof. A. R. Uppgren, University of Minnesota economist, dealt with federal monetary policy, particularly as it affected Western Canadian grain growers.

In Memoriam

MRS. CHRISTINA MACDONALD

The death occurred in Edmonton, Alta., Saturday of Mrs. Christina Macdonald, 82, mother of the wife of Hon. W. A. Fallow, Alberta Minister of Public Works. The funeral services were held from her late residence in Edmonton on Sunday. The late Mrs. Macdonald was the widow of Mr. Roderick A. Macdonald, Bellevue, P.E.I., and leaves besides her brother Angus Macdonald on the old home-stand at Bellevue, P. E. I., the following family: John R. and Alexander Macdonald, Edmonton; Daniel Macdonald, Prince Street, Charlottetown; and her daughter, Mary, wife of the Hon. W. A. Fallow, Edmonton. Another daughter, Katie, predeceased her. Mrs. Macdonald was a daughter of the late Mr. Roderick Lamont of Victoria Cross and will be kindly remembered by her relatives and friends.

Babel. He comes away from his study feeling that he is as well equipped with the heros of industrial warfare as he would have been had he been reading mythology or the ancient sagas. These text-books need a thorough revision.

We have been practising false economy; and therefore a body of false principles—the opposite of the intentions above stated—has become an integral and readily accepted part of our artificial existence. And here again the means used are also the characteristics of the age; indifference, ignorance of right and wrong, and above all improvidence.

The personal credit exhibits in its completeness the utter failure of the principles employed.

We can boast of the fact that King Henry I, was made to acknowledge the supremacy of innumerable customs and laws; that Magna Charta that jurists like Coke and Blackstone confirmed the limitation of sovereignty; and that the foundation of democracy was explicitly declared in the Bill of Rights as the possession and preservation of certain rights with which man was endowed at birth, and which no government could legitimately destroy, viz., the right to life, the right to liberty, the right to property, the right to the pursuit of happiness, and the right of man was made to serve the State, but that the State was made to serve man. We can boast of all this, but how can we do so in the presence of millions of ill-fed, ill-dressed, and ill-housed families?

The truth of the matter is: the huge economy the secret springs of which we failed to perceive, has been working for the past seventy years towards the complete nullification of all our democratic principles. There only remained for us the psychological moment to give democracy the coupe-d'etat, and then all but a small group would become bond slaves, forever committed to paying interest, a debt so great that nothing more than the interest can ever be sweated out of the tax-payers.

Yet it will be here observed that the above credit items are of a moral nature, and that it is, if he wills to use them, no one can prevent him from doing so. This fact accompanied by the light of spiritual wisdom makes him invincible. If he so wills it he can begin right now to make the abundant life a reality.

FUR MARKET PROSPECTS 1937-1938

Sir, Now that the new fur season is upon us it is useless to disguise the fact that it has started in very difficult circumstances. The results of the Autumn Auctions were very disappointing to all concerned and in contrast with the optimistic spirit that prevailed a year ago the consensus of opinion in the Raw Fur Trade is that trading operations during the coming year can only show a profit if prices at the opening of the season are on a decidedly lower basis than at the commencement of the season last year. This applies particularly to most North American fine furs and staple lines, with the possible exception of Silver Fox which is in a category of its own.

As is well known the annual production of Silver Fox pelts goes on increasing from year to year and unfortunately the average pelt has not maintained its quality, so much so that last year it was estimated that about 75% of the total collection coming to the European market comprised pelts of indifferent character and lacking clarity of colour. This situation has been stressed so frequently that special steps are now being taken in most Canadian Provinces to eliminate undesirable stocks and concentrate on producing a higher standard of pelt. This may of course result in a larger proportion of the undesirable types being pelted and shipped to market, so that the case may have to be worse before it can get better. To add to all these disabilities, it now appears that extremely mild weather has prevailed in most producing areas throughout the months of October and November, thus interfering seriously with the pining of the Foxes. In this connection it may be stated that skins now being received for the London November Auctions appear to be definitely inferior as a whole to those received for the corresponding Auctions last year. In this connection it is worth noting that at the Oslo Auctions prices ruled from 15% to 20% below those obtained in November, 1936, and moreover not more than about 40% of the total offering was sold. Buyers appear for once to be holding off, partly no doubt on account of the uncertain economic situation reflected in the universal weakness on the Stock Exchange, and also because they are disappointed with the quality of the goods offered. It may be remarked here that the neglect of unprime skins may tend in the long run to be a blessing in disguise, since fully prime and attractive pelts should command the premium to which their better quality and clearness of colour entitles them.

The next most interesting item, at any rate to fur ranchers, is Mink. With regard to this, the trade is unanimous that prices rose to absurd heights at the beginning of the past season and this undue inflation has caused endless difficulty ever since. For this reason mainly it is expected that Mink prices will have to be very considerably modified if the skins are to be absorbed by the fur trade. The same arguments apply with more or less force to most other articles in the Fur Trade Catalogue. Owing to the slackness of retail sales, Stores, Manufacturers and Merchants have all found themselves in possession of larger stocks than they usually have at the beginning of a new fur season. This naturally interferes with buying of the new season's goods and it is probable that there will have to take place a general and very material reduction in prices to facilitate the recovery of more normal activity.

I am, Sir, etc., J. P. M.

Help Appreciated

The following letter received by Mrs. James Lanigan, Cambridge, speaks for itself. It was received from Sam and John Davis, brothers, Box 871, Weyburn, Sask.

Dear Madam:—This car was unloaded at Grassdale on the 1st of November and we were very pretty serious. We had about 200 acres of crop in but did not have enough to feed one animal off it. What the heat and dry weather did not kill, the grasshoppers did. We had no garden, as it was a complete failure. We had about half an acre of potatoes in the field but the grasshoppers cleaned them off completely. Quite a few people didn't plant gardens at all—even the rhubarb did not grow. We had about two bags of potatoes in the garden. The grain came up good in the spring but in two weeks everything disappeared with dry weather and grasshoppers, nothing but Russian thistle, and the stock was starving. For about 2 1/2 months it will be hard times on the poor stock. We are given four or six bales of hay at a time, but I guess it will be hard time getting the stock through the winter. Some people never think of the poor animals so long as they get along themselves. We have six horses, two cows, two calves. We sold one cow and bought feed with the money. We sold most of our hens to buy feed.

Most of the animals are starving right now. We are allowed only six horses, two cows for 480 acres, but they only just gave us a little feed a week ago. They tried to make us send most of the horses away to Manitoba but a lot of the horses are dying there, so we might as well keep them here. Thanks for the Swede turnips; we found the letter in the sack. It is certainly good of people to help us out, as we have had only one crop since 1930. Last year we had a little feed, but we did not thresh any this year. Five years ago we had lots of straw. We threshed 300 bushels and got 23 1/2 cents a bushel. Goodbye and good luck with thanks.
