MONKEY AND SQUIRRELS
 Shaver, the green monkey from West Africa, could not get along with any of the other monkeys in the zoo. If he was put into the same cage with another monkey there was always fighting going on, and Shaver usually started the battles. Alone, however, his disposition is gentle, so Shaver had to be put into a cage all by himself.
 In the next cage were two squirrels, one red and one gray. They liked Shaver, and, strange as it may seem, Shaver appeared to be most fond of them. He pushed part of his dinner, usually grains of corn, through the bars to the squirrels, and they in turn gave him nuts. That is how the strange friendship started.
 Tex Clark, chief keeper at the zoo, noticed Shaver reaching his arm through the bars one day and patting a squirrel on the head. Tex decided to try putting the monkey in the same cage with the squirrels. He did, and everything turned out fine.
 It was a happy family from the start. The monkey, Shaver, rocked the squirrels to sleep each night in his arms, after they have played with him all day. They never quarrel with each other; just pale and a squirrel, a gray squirrel and Shaver. And Tex is happy because he does not have to use a whole cage any more just to keep Shaver from scrapping with the other monkeys.

 A tailor was sending an order by mail for two of those small ironing boards termed "gooses."
 "It didn't look right so he rewrote it." "Please send me two geese."
 Reading it over, he decided that it was worse than the first so he finally wrote:
 "Please send me one tailor's goose."
 P.S. "Send another one just like it."

STRAIN ON YOUR EYES
 Eyes used for close work—particularly if lighting is not correct — are subject to a greater than normal strain. This brings the patient discomfort if there is present any appreciable refractive error and shows itself in headaches, sore eyes, etc. A person has no way of knowing the degree of strain on the eyes until they are examined.
