"Operation Unforgetting"

A Commando "raid"—their last—was recently launched in Britain. It has been given the title "Operation Unforgetting," and Captain John Birkbeck, one of the original members of the Commandos, described it in an overseas broadcast the other day.

Ordinary men with "that extraordinary streak of idealism which rebelled against iniquity" was Captain Birkbeck's thumb-nail sketch of the Commandos. They had a love of adventure, naturally, but of adventure "with a high purpose".

Owing to the great scarcity of laundry soap, a lady suggests that the soap which would ordinarily go to Stems Laundry should be distributed among local grocers so that housewives might benefit.

Now the last Commando raid is in progress. It has been called "Operation Unforgetting" because every Commando was given this solemn pledge that should he be killed, those of his comrades who survived would stand by the widow, the orphaned, the dependants, as well as the more seriously disabled among the men themselves.

President Roosevelt left sufficient funds to keep his widow from want. His net estate, subject to New York State taxation, amounts to $1,085,486.80.

Here dead we lie, because we did not choose To live and share the land from which we sprung. Life, to be sure, is nothing much to lose But young men think it is, and we were young.

Jurked For Good

Present plans before the Allied Control Council in Berlin relating to the final disposal of the giant Krupp works mean the definite end of the world's biggest armament combine, notes the Montreal Gazette.

In the case of many of the giant factories this will not be difficult. In Essen, where the Krupp works covered miles, there is building after building that is nothing but a mass of twisted girders and piles of unshifted rubble.

For there is determination that the Krupp works will not be permitted to operate again. After the First World War a disarmament commission was put into the Krupp works to keep an eye on production.

This time destruction is to be complete. The only shops that are to be left are three locomotive-repair shops, which are badly needed, and a few departments such as the gas and electricity plants that service the city of Essen.

No Strife In Canadian Legion

An article in an American magazine on the organization and methods of the American Legion—how it is run and who runs it—comes as an interesting contrast to the methods and structure of its opposite number in Canada—the Canadian Legion.

Veterans' organizations are moulded in accordance with their needs and with the political systems of the countries in which they live. Dictation of policy by a small group at the top may in some instances be productive of the best results—or at least the best results financially. The Canadian Legion, in contrast to its counterpart in the United States, notes the Ottawa Journal, has no such "inner ring" to control policy and shape election of officers.

The Canadian Legion is an organization for all veterans of all the Services. Far from attempting to retain control of its policies and voting power, older Canadian veterans are training their successors of World War II to hold high office, and in time to assume charge of its policies to meet best the needs of Canadians who have lost years in the service of their country.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Has Stalin put another one over the Mother Country? He has sent as Ambassador to London Georgi Zarubin, who was ambassador at Ottawa during the period the spy ring was operating.

As the result of disclosures in the House of Commons, the Governors of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation have withdrawn the free privilege given Toronto Daily Star to broadcast its own news service.

The Boards of Trade of Saint John, N. B. and Summerside secured interviews with and addresses from Transport Minister Chevrier. In Charlottetown, the Minister of Transportation was unusually interview-shy and reserved for a man hoping to make good in public life.

Mr. John R. MacNicol, M. P., is highly enthusiastic regarding the tourist prospects of this Province. Nowhere has he seen finer scenery or experienced more friendly reception from all classes from Wood Islands to Borden.

White canes should be devoted solely to use by the blind. It is a merit consideration if not a pity. It is not for a beggar to carry a cane. It is for a man who is blind to use a cane.

A new system of high-speed press building, which enables houses to be completed within one week, has been introduced by a Sheffield, England engineer-builder. Technique involves use of moulds of steel casting cellular concrete sections faced with imitation brick stone chippings or pebbles.

It was said of William Wordsworth that he set the best of his creative powers to work in the year of 90 George Bernard Shaw seems to be well in line for the same achievement. He finds that people are being taken to the wards him, even to the extent of wanting to celebrate his birthdays with a lot of hubbub.

Announcement is made of the offering of a new issue of $7,000,000 in Province of Nova Scotia 2, 2 1-2 and 2 3-4 per cent non-callable serial sinking fund debentures. A syndicate headed by the Bank of Montreal submitted the highest tender and was allotted the issues on an overall price of $99.19.

Changes in headquarters of Maritime Military districts are in contemplation. Saint John Telegraph-Journal says headquarters of Military District No. 7 (New Brunswick), which has been located in Saint John ever since the district was organized as such 30 years ago, is to be transferred to Fredericton, and in future the army's permanent staff in that province will be located there and all military administration in the province will stem from that city.

Notes By The Way

To take television from London to the provinces at a rate of $10,000 a mile to run from London to Birmingham, is now being made by The London Daily Mail. Amplifying apparatus will be necessary every seven miles.

The London Zoo has received news that Mr. O. S. Webb, the Zoological Society's collector-curator, now in East Africa, has captured the longest snake the Zoo has had for some years.

In Oklahoma City a kissing club has been organized by the "New Times-Journal" reporter. Married men, pledged to kiss their wives once a day, compliment them on their cooking and other household duties, and tell them they love them.

In London a reporter looking for spots started following Gandhi at four a.m. during his early morning walks. Gandhi changed his schedule to three a.m. So did the persistent reporter. He greeted Gandhi with the question, "Mr. Gandhi do you believe in the hereafter? Being a saint, of course you must be destined for Heaven."

A new device that should commend itself to household efficiency is the electric mousetrap. It is the invention of a Canadian, and is being marketed in production across the border.

PUBLIC FORUM

This column is open for the discussion by correspondents of questions of interest. The Charlottetown Guardian does not necessarily endorse the opinion of correspondents.

NEW LIQUOR PREMISES

Sir.—In Thursday's Guardian I note that the temperance people of Charlottetown and all residents of Prince Edward Island, and especially the returned men who are finding it impossible to do this, are being "brought down" by the Government.

Only recently I heard of a discharged veteran, a veterinary doctor who with his wife and child were forced to live in a cabin out of town, and this man is only one of the many!

Is this what these men deserve? Not even an adequate shelter, to say nothing of their old jobs "back" as they were promised? Is this promise just another "scrap of paper" similar to that given the temperance people to respect their wishes as recorded by the plebiscite?

The German people are criticized because they did not object to their leaders (those that did come at the Government) persons with no home and not even sympathy from us) but are we not as much to blame as they if we take everything "lying down"?

I am, Sir, etc. MIDDLETON, P.E.I.

PUBLIC FORUM

Sir.—As this course of strong drink is growing to such vast proportions, our minds are powers that be have to enlarge their premises and replenish their stocks of increasing quantities. It is beyond the ken of men and women what the end will be.

A few days ago there was a white scolded out from Fourth Prince holding the corner of the store where more standing room is provided and a larger stock on hand. According to Mr. Bentley's letter, I would conclude that about one-third of the homes on the Island are contributing to this method of paying off the Province.

On September 18th a letter came out by man naming himself a three-lip-picker, in reply to a letter by Teetotaler of the 12th and 13th, telling Teetotaler what he thought of his letter. He said "My advice to Teetotaler is to join with the thousands of other Islanders who are clamouring for the return of the Government to other parts of Canada."

Settlement at St. Peter's Harbor

(John Caven in the P.E.I. Magazine, 1901) The most flourishing of all the French Island settlements was St. Peter's Harbour. The village on the present day still beholds the impetuous waters from the Gulf forcing their way through the huge fissure of sand that stretches out either shore as if to forbid passage; he still sees the waters, after passing the barrier, rushing and spreading in inland miles bordered with green fields, by many a wharf and snug farm steading he still sees looking seaward, with the pressure of his fingers, the fragments of an old-fashioned pottery rivetly coloured, the broken earth with pieces of charcoal, where probably once stood a house and hall-filled cellars over which once blazed the family logfire, are all the memorials he meets with of a community that has been torn apart, whose place knows them no more.

When Francis Donville and Charles Carver in 1719 found their way to this stormy inlet, two considerations may have brought comfort to them in their solitude — the fertile and arable land, and the harbor was unprotected from the sea, swarmed with fish. Dense forests, however, occupied the land, and the harbor was unprotected from the sea, swarmed with fish. Dense forests, however, occupied the land, and the harbor was unprotected from the sea, swarmed with fish.

The settlement was named after the Count of St. Pierre, the French nobleman who had established a company that made the first attempt to establish a permanent colony on this Island. The disaster which befell the settlement in 1726, struck a fatal blow at the prosperity of every settlement.

market, not in Europe, but in the West Indian Islands. The fishermen of St. Peter's and indeed of every settlement on the Island, where fishing was carried on, labored under a severe disadvantage in the prosecution of their calling. Once or twice only we have had to record the arrival in Island ports of ships direct from France freighted with such supplies as fishermen needed.

On the crest of the eminence, a few yards from where now stands the church, a square plot of land carefully fenced in, is preserved by the reverential owner from all intrusion.
