GLADYS GETS HER HAND IN Chapter 20

Dora was completely puzzled as to why Gladys should want to go for a walk with a man whom she frequently said was tiresome and whom she seemed to dislike. But, of course, she promptly told Gladys she would be glad to have her go. "I think she's tired of just the family," she told her father when she spoke of the walk later. "She doesn't like Morton but anyone's better than no one."

COCONUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly, and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multifid coconut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure you get Multifid. Beware of imitations. Look for the name WAKINS on the package.

Stubborn Cases of Stomach Trouble Yield Promptly to TANLAC 25,000,000 Bottles Sold

"I knew if you were reciting to Dora, Jesse says you can recite—come on, Mortie, give us a selection!" Morton flashed and evaded, but Gladys kept up her teasing and insisted until, to quiet her, he read to them from his book. But Gladys laughed uproariously at the one attempt at reading tragedy, and spent the whole distance home imitating him. "It wasn't a comfortable walk!" "Coming out next Sunday?" Gladys asked when he was ready to go. "I think I'll be away then," poor Morton answered. "Come Saturday night then?" "Without waiting for an answer she went on. "Come Saturday and I'll ask a lot of the crowd. Come on or I'll be cross!" Before her insistence Morton was completely crushed. But no one ever accepted an invitation to a festivity in a more disconsolate manner. That night, as she lay awake, Dora tried to see her cousin's motive. "For some reason which she could not comprehend as yet, Gladys suddenly liked Morton. Or was she only being attentive to him to tease him?" Or there was another possibility. She might be cross at Jesse, or she might wish to tease Jesse and intended to use Morton to make him jealous. But as she analyzed all these reasons in turn, each seemed more absurd than the other. Finally she talked it over with Jim. "Jim began it by saying sardonically, 'So she harried in on your party Sunday, didn't she?' 'I wonder why?' Dora asked to return. 'She's being awfully nice to Morton.' Then she gave him her possible reasons. But Jim said finally, 'Women are supposed to see through each other. But in this case you can see as much as your old father, who is not supposed to have any interest in such matters.' 'I know I'm stupid,' said Dora, who said this often. 'Well, then, she's after Morton because he's the only one of the lot that never paid any attention to her. That hurts her vanity, so she's going to show him she can make him get attentive to her if she wants.' 'I don't see how any woman can make a man attentive to her if he doesn't want to be,' answered the man's competitor, Dora. 'Nor I, but they do,' said Jim, with the air of one who is old and wise to the mysterious ways of women. 'Anyway, that's her game. Besides, it hurts her vanity to see any man pay any attention to her.' Dora didn't believe this. She thought it was her father's prejudice. She couldn't stop long to talk anyway, because she was on an errand to the barn, and her aunt always counted the minutes she took to her duties. 'When she does make him attentive as you call it, then what will she do?' Dora queried. 'To which the cynical Jim answered, 'Wait and see.' Tomorrow—Two Wills
