

ANNOUNCEMENT

THE ANNUAL DRIVE FOR FUNDS

In Aid Of

Protestant Orphanage

Opens In

CHARLOTTETOWN

MONDAY OCTOBER 6th

WILL CONTINUE

(Continued from Page 1)

both Mr. Bradley and Mr. King stressed the need for "very careful exploration" of the possibility of union.

The sub-committee was appointed to draft these possible workable terms. Justice Minister Hiley and Revenue Minister McCann were appointed to represent Canada.

The sub-committee report will be submitted to a plenary meeting of the two delegations on Sept. 11.

SEEK APPOINTMENT

(Continued from Page 1)

that we apply for Government consultation in our present dispute," Dowling wrote.

ALBERTA MEAT PLANT DESTROYED

VANCOUVER, Sept. 9 (CP)—The meat supply situation in Vancouver was struck a further crippling blow early today when fire destroyed the Alberta meat company's plant on nearby Lulu Island.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, DEATHS

BIRTHS: At the P. E. I. Hospital, on September 1, 1947, to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hickox, Hunter River, a son, Kevin Francis.

DEATHS

McKENZIE—At the P. E. Island Hospital on Tuesday, Sept. 9, Alexander McKenzie in his 22nd year. Remains were forwarded from the McLean funeral home yesterday afternoon to the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George I. McKenzie, Dover, funeral tomorrow, Thursday. A short service at the home at 1 o'clock then to the Church of Scotland, Murray River for funeral services at 2 o'clock. Interment Murray River Cemetery.

N. D. MacLean

UNDERTAKER EMBALMER

Charlottetown and North Westshore Phone 143

Fear-Simmonds Nuptials Yesterday

The marriage took place at Trinity United Church yesterday afternoon at 4.30 of Miss Pauline Dixon Simmonds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Simmonds, Charlottetown, and Mr. Cyril Joseph Fear, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Fear, Moncton. Rev. T. E. McLennan officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white broad-cloth gown with sweeping train, her veil falling from a coronet of seed pearls and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and ferns.

The groomsmen were Mr. John Wilnot of Moncton. The ushers were Mr. Robert Fear of Moncton and Mr. Percival Simmonds of Moncton.

The bridegroom was Mr. John Wilnot of Moncton. The ushers were Mr. Robert Fear of Moncton and Mr. Percival Simmonds of Moncton.

Suggests Bishop For Native Indians

(By Douglas Green, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

SASKATOON, Sept. 9 (CP)—The Church of England should think about appointing its bishop for native Indians, a joint session of the executive council and board of management of the missionary society was told today.

The suggestion came from Canon L. E. Davis, clerical representative of the diocese of Ontario, during a discussion of the work of the church among Indians.

A recommendation that an advisory board on work among Indians be set up and a field secretary be appointed for three years with special responsibility for this work aroused vigorous debate.

"Our primary job is the evangelizing of the Indians, not the multiplication of the secretaries," said Rt. Rev. W. R. Wragg, Bishop of Calgary.

NEW HALIFAX

(Continued from Page 1)

which will be contested by Canada's new Fisheries Minister Brigadier M.F. Gregg, Mr. Dickey said that from comments he had heard in Ottawa and Hamilton the campaign should be "very interesting."

The new member said his recollections of Prime Minister Edward Heale, who spent some months in 1938, were most pleasant and that he was looking forward to meeting Prime Minister Edward Heale members of the Commons and Senate.

Fur Prices Show Three Declines

MONTREAL, Sept. 9 (CP)—Only three declines from June fur prices were recorded today in the five-day autumn fur sale of the Canadian fur auction here.

Shipping Company Fined

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP)—Convicted of selling beer on Sunday aboard the pleasure steamer Pelee and of permitting gambling, the Pelee Shipping Company today was fined $1,000 by magistrate Arthur Hanrahan.

CENTRAL GUARDIAN

This column is reserved for news of local interest, and advertising of a variety nature may be inserted at five cents a word strictly payable in advance.

CRAWSWELL for Photographs.

CONFEDERATION LIFE INSURANCE

CHARLES THE RITZ powder and cosmetics for fresh, smooth, clear skin. S. A. McDonald's.

PHONE SAUNDERS 1806 for group and wedding pictures on location.

TO HALIFAX in 55 minutes. The Martin's Central Airways Phone 3061 or 340.

ATTENDING CONVENTION — Mr. H. B. Chandler, Director of Adult Education for the Province left yesterday afternoon for Quebec City to attend a conference of the Canadian Education Association. Mr. Chandler will address the conference on the subject of "Visual Education."

VISITING CHURCHILL — Among those visiting Churchill at present are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hood, of Ewen E. Lamont and Mr. Warren, of Beverly, Mass. Mrs. Hood and Mrs. Lamont are guests of their sister and brother at Churchill.

FROM LADY PENTLAND — News from the London Times relating to the death of Viscount Bennett and to the funeral and memorial service in Westminster Abbey have been received by Miss Lena McLure from Lady Pentland.

BURIAL YESTERDAY — The funeral of Mrs. McKelvan was held yesterday morning from the residence of her father John McKelvan, 51 Water Street to St. Dunstan's Basilica where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Kenneth MacMillan who also conducted services at the grave.

PERSONALS

Miss F. A. Robertson of New York, daughter of the late Mr. W. B. Robertson, is visiting Mrs. W. A. Smith, McGill Terrace.

Mrs. Doris Proud and little daughter Gail are visiting in Summerside, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Longphore.

Mr. Francis Bolger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bolger, Hope River, left Monday morning for St. John's where he will enter the Grand Seminary.

Mrs. Robert MacNeil and daughter Betty Ann of Dalhousie, N.S., are visiting Mrs. MacNeil's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carter, Suffolk.

Mrs. C. E. Kraemer and two children of London, Ont., have arrived in Charlottetown to visit to Mrs. Kraemer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Wisner.

Mr. David Peters of St. John's, Newfoundland is visiting Prof. A. Roy Kendall and Mrs. Kendall, Student Street. Mrs. Peters is a student in dentistry at Dalhousie University.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Boyles recently returned from a motor trip to Quebec and Ontario. They were accompanied home by Mrs. E. C. Duff, Montreal, who is paying a brief visit to her parents Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Ayers, City.

Recent visitors by motor to the island were Mr. J. Lloyd MacDonald of Montreal, formerly from Cardigan, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. M. G. MacDonald and sister, Mrs. Estelle Sutherland. They had a most enjoyable visit the first in fifteen years with their friends in Borden, Charlottetown and Cardigan and are driving home via Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

FUNERAL SERVICES — The funeral of Mrs. Edward Llewellyn, who died in the bus-train accident at Wilnot Crossing, P.E.I., last Saturday, was held from St. Andrew's Church, Pictou, on Thursday afternoon, Rev. W. H. Brown officiated and interment was in the Wilnot cemetery. Mrs. Llewellyn was one of four persons to lose their lives in the accident, which occurred at a level crossing, 40 miles from Charlottetown. At the time of the accident, Mrs. Llewellyn was returning to her home in Pictou after spending some time with relatives on the island. She was eighty-one years of age and a native of Gaspareau, P.E.I., but had lived in Pictou since 1905, following the death of her husband, Benjamin Llewellyn. She is survived by three sons, Herbert of Murray Harbour North, Charles of Lower Montague, and George H. Pictou, and by one daughter, Mrs. Allen Hunt, of New York. New Jersey—New Glasgow News.

TEACHERS FETED — Several members of Queen's School were thoughtfully entertained by fellow teachers at a delightful luncheon held Monday at Dalvay. L. Col. Leo F. MacDonald, Principal, who has resumed teaching in the school after an absence on leave for eight years, was presented with a beautiful desk set. Mrs. Charles McQuaid (formerly Miss Mary MacDonald) a member of the staff, who distributed the gift of a coffee table as was Mr. Thomas Bradley whose marriage took place two weeks ago. Mrs. George McCormack, a former teacher in the school was also remembered by her associates on rejoining the staff. All the recipients thanked the teachers for their thoughtfulness. Wives of the staff members were also in attendance. Supper was prepared in the Community Kitchen and all did ample justice to corn, hot dogs and the other tasty eatables.

Promoted To Vice-Chief Of Naval Staff

OTTAWA, Sept. 9 (CP)—Commodore P.L. Houghton, Vancouver, assistant chief of the naval staff, has been appointed vice-chief of the navy and is graduating as a Midshipman Rear-Admiral, it was announced today.

Commodore Houghton, who will continue to hold the post of assistant chief as well as that of vice-chief, succeeds Rear-Admiral H.G.W. Grant, who recently was appointed chief of the naval staff.

The appointment is effective from Sept. 1. Rear-Admiral Houghton was born in England and came to Canada in 1908, entering the Royal Naval College of Canada at Halifax in 1915 and graduating as a Midshipman two years later. He served in several ships of the Royal Navy.

In 1924 he returned to Canada for service in the destroyer Patriot and in 1926 went to England to specialize in communications. He commanded the destroyers Vancouver on the West Coast and "Saguenay" on the East Coast and was promoted to Commander in 1930.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

Promoted To Vice-Chief Of Naval Staff

OTTAWA, Sept. 9 (CP)—Commodore P.L. Houghton, Vancouver, assistant chief of the naval staff, has been appointed vice-chief of the navy and is graduating as a Midshipman Rear-Admiral, it was announced today.

Commodore Houghton, who will continue to hold the post of assistant chief as well as that of vice-chief, succeeds Rear-Admiral H.G.W. Grant, who recently was appointed chief of the naval staff.

The appointment is effective from Sept. 1. Rear-Admiral Houghton was born in England and came to Canada in 1908, entering the Royal Naval College of Canada at Halifax in 1915 and graduating as a Midshipman two years later. He served in several ships of the Royal Navy.

In 1924 he returned to Canada for service in the destroyer Patriot and in 1926 went to England to specialize in communications. He commanded the destroyers Vancouver on the West Coast and "Saguenay" on the East Coast and was promoted to Commander in 1930.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada's first atomic carrier, the H.M.C.S. Warrior, was commissioned in January 1946, he became her first commanding officer and brought her to Halifax in April to join the R.C.N.'s growing fleet.

At the outbreak of war, he was serving as director of plans and communications at the Naval Headquarters and was also secretary of the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee for two years. Promoted to acting Captain in June 1941, he assumed command of the auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert and later became chief of staff to the flag officer Newfoundland forces.

In October 1943, he went to the United Kingdom as senior Canadian naval officer in London and later became head of the Canadian Naval Mission Overseas. When Canada