G-Man

One of Hoover's hand-picked hand-tailored, soft-spoken, Rhodes scholars, about the slickest, surest, fastest worker in the whole F.B.I. And Bates always teams up with him. The third man must be a driver they've picked up locally. You don't happen to know him, do you?"

"Yes. He operates the village taxi."

"I thought so. Then Thirkell came on the train and hired him at the station. It all fits in."

"What's Thirkell doing here?"

"I should think a bright girl like you might guess. The game's up, Jenness. The F.B.I. never makes an arrest until the evidence is all in."

"Do you mean that Thirkell's followed Lentz all the way from Washington? That's he going to arrest him here?"

"He had gone out already having arrested him before I can get there to see it, if I'm not quick about it. He had gone out driving fast, incidentally observing the lay of the land while he was talking. Now instead of following up the other car, he drove the one he had hired through the open gate of a large barnyard, and brought it up to a swift stop at the farther end of the barn, out of sight from the house."

Lucky Break

This time I am going to take the keys," he said. "I've got to leave the car. And it's your only chance as well as mine. If you don't keep out of sight now, you're a goner. Of course you may be anyway. No I can't stop to explain. I'll do that later. But you better believe me when I say you've had a lucky break."

He plunged away into the snow pulling the collar of his thin overcoat up around his ears and pulling down his slouch hat. After he turned the corner of the barn, Jenness could not see him, and presently she could no longer even hear his crunching footsteps.

The barnyard was empty, as the cattle throughout the region were now kept inside because of the cold, and the only sounds that came from the barn were those of muffled munching and the occasional creak of a stanchion. She unfastened the nearest door from the inside, but before she had stepped out into the snow herself, she had realized the futility of attempted flight. If she wanted down the road, Peter would overtake her. If she hid in the barn he would find her and drag her out of it. If she tried to get into the house by a roundabout way, she might be intercepted and questioned.

She was not so far lost to logic that she did not sense the danger which the appearance of Thirkell and his associate might mean to her personally, and she actually saw her on the Hellman's property; their probable knowledge that she was staying in the vicinity, their possible suspicion that she might have an ulterior motive for doing so, were menacing enough.

Relief

"Now, now," he said quickly, Jenness instantly caught the bantering note in his voice, mumbled a lighter and stiffer than the satirical sternness with which he had previously spoken, and knew at once that he must have succeeded in his purpose and that momentarily his relief and elation had submerged every other sensation. But he did not put his arm around her, as she hoped against hope he would do next, and he did not stare at her; he immediately switched the engine on and began to turn the car around. Instead of crying, you better say a little prayer of thanksgiving," he went on. "You've had a narrow escape. It may be only a reprove at that, I can tell better when I see where the other car's going next."

"What's—what's happened?"

"I'll tell you that in a few minutes. Don't bother, talking to me now. Blow your nose and put some powder on it."

He steered the car expertly through the bumpy barnyard, bringing none of the heat which he had forged through it before; then he swung it up into the road again. But he made no attempt to catch up with the other automobile which now contained a fourth occupant; in fact, Jenness thought he was deliberately delaying in spite of the excitement with which he was watching.

When it took the left-hand turn south toward the long stretch of lonely road where the deserted houses stood, instead of going straight ahead toward Farmington Hill, he gave a brief profane exclamation of satisfaction, and began to talk rapidly and eagerly.

"Look they must be going straight back to the station. That means they're taking Lentz somewhere for detention before they take him to Washington. Where's the nearest airport?"

Defense Hdqs. Official List Denies Story of Casualties From Toronto

OTTAWA, Jan. 22 (CP) — Defense Headquarters tonight issued a statement denying a Toronto report that five-year army personnel home on rotation leave are being returned overseas without proper medical examinations.

Saturday's Toronto Globe and Mail said in a newspaper story that a number of general service personnel on rotation leave are "vigorously protesting their expected imminent return to the battlefields."

The paper said many of the men termed their pre-embarkation medical examinations "a joke." The soldiers were some of the overseas veterans permitted to leave the battlefields before Christmas and return to Canada for a 30-day leave, exclusive of traveling time.

The Defense Headquarters statement follows:

"An army routine order says: 'This return overseas of this personnel will be by the rotation in which they arrived in Canada, a date being fixed by National Defense Headquarters for the assembly of each category.'

"So far Defense Headquarters has not fixed such a date for rotation. The personnel are, therefore, no personnel is due as yet for return overseas.

"In amplification of the above, an instruction was issued by Defense Headquarters, Jan. 10, 1945, that all personnel would be medically examined on their return from leave.

"The Defense Department said that the orders, which had been issued early in January, required that every man be given a thorough medical examination. If he is found to be in a medical category lower than the standards required for overseas service in the job he was doing, he will not be ordered to return overseas.

"In addition, the army routine order also provides that if urgent special circumstances arise which appear to justify the retention in Canada of any individual on compassionate or other grounds, the individual's written application will be considered. In all cases, such applications receive most sympathetic consideration.

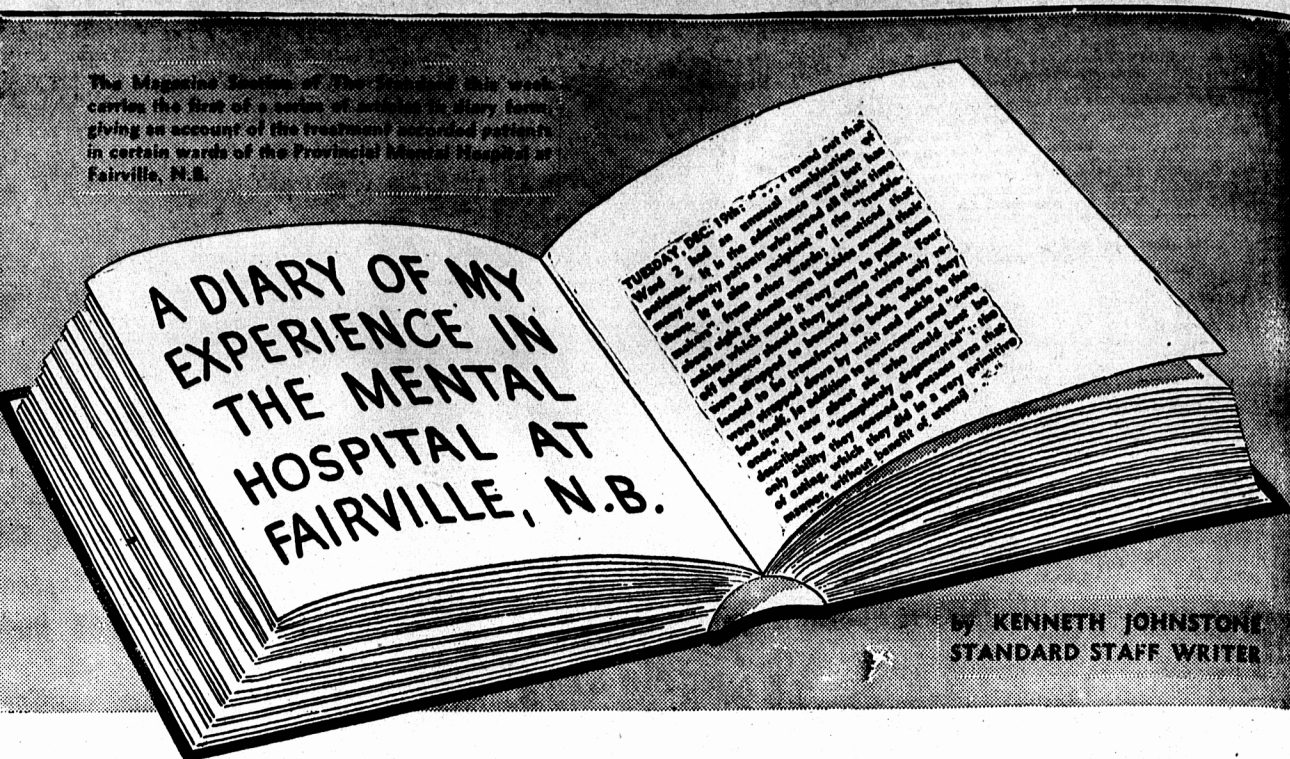

"Furiously she admitted to herself that Peter was right, that her best, perhaps her only chance of skimming through to safety lay in non-discovery. She slid back into the seat, shutting now with a gasp as well as a gasp, and closed the door again, her frenzy mounting, as it had in the house, with every moment of Peter's absence she had been crying so hysterically that she had not even seen him coming, when he unlocked the door and got in beside her."

- Receives Son's Medal
- The following letter will be of interest to friends and relatives in the province as Mrs. Mackinnon was formerly of Lunenburg and her two daughters are Mrs. Hector MacNeill, Charlottetown and Mrs. Gordon, Montgomery, R.C.A. G.S. Mrs. Mackinnon, 65 Langdon Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts.
- Dear Mrs. Mackinnon: By the authority of the Congress of the United States, it is my honor to present to you, the mother of Arthur Owen Mackinnon, the Mariner's Medal in commemoration of the greatest service any one can render to his country.
- Mr. Mackinnon was lost when his ship the SS Colobee, was torpedoed by the enemy, March 1942. He was one of those men who today are so gallantly upholding the traditions of those heavy Mariner's who defend any shore of the American flag from sailing the seas in the early days of this republic.
- He was one of those men upon whom the Nation now depends, to keep our ships afloat upon the perilous seas to transport our troops across those seas; and to carry to them the vitally needed material to keep them fighting until victory is certain and liberty secure.
- Nothing I can do or say will, in any sense, requite the loss of your loved one. He has gone, but he has gone in honor and in the good company of patriots. Let me, in this expression of the country's deep sympathy, also express to you his gratitude for his devotion and sacrifice.
- Sincerely Yours

Swift's Baby Chicks

Now is the time to order your baby chicks. Our chicks are bred for high egg production and meat quality. Breeder flocks are blood-tested twice and approved by the Government Poultry Services. We have erected a new modern hatchery this year, which will be one of the most up to date in Eastern Canada, being entirely free of any contact with poultry or poultry products, thus safeguarding our chicks from any source of disease infection. Now is the time to decide how many chicks you require. Order now for delivery at any time during the hatchery season.

A DIARY OF MY EXPERIENCE IN THE MENTAL HOSPITAL AT FAIRVILLE, N.B.

By KENNETH JOHNSTONE
 STANDARD STAFF WRITER

In view of the urgency of the problem of providing adequate hospital care for the mentally ill, especially now when many returning servicemen will require treatment, The Standard decided to investigate whether mental hospitals were making the most of the opportunities present circumstances afforded them in caring for their charges. Mental diseases are amenable to medical treatment, and in many cases curable just as physical ailments are.

The Provincial Hospital at Fairville, New Brunswick was chosen for The Standard investigation, as disquieting reports had been received of conditions there. Standard staff writer Kenneth Johnstone obtained a post as attendant in the admission ward and worked there for eight days.

His report, which starts in this week's Standard, unveils a situation which is of interest to every Canadian, and of special interest to residents of New Brunswick. Specifically it reports brutality practiced upon patients, the indiscriminate use of drugs without medical supervision, and of the lack of any constructive program to help patients in certain categories to recovery.

Johnstone's diary will be followed by authoritative articles outlining the measures needed generally to raise the standard of our mental hospitals and which would prevent abuses in any institution which might be run on lines similar to the Provincial Hospital.

Other Features This Week:

BRITAIN FIGHTS THE FLYING BOMB. An informative Magazine article that explains "V-1", how it was discovered, and the elaborate defense put up by Britain.

THEY TALK AGAIN. Another in the rehabilitation series, telling of just one of Canada's medical therapy methods—teaching wounded servicemen to talk and read and write again. In this week's Magazine, by Gerald Waring.

FIRE WILL FREEZE. A chilling mystery by a renowned Canadian author set amid the decayed elegance of a Quebec chateau. Complete in this issue of The Standard.

THIS IS ARTILLERYTOWN. A photostory by Standard staff photographer Lawrence Earl, now in Holland, showing how some of our boys are living in dugouts built and furnished by themselves.

MR. EWEN MACDONALD

In the passing of Mr. Ewen MacDonald the community of Brantford has lost an esteemed resident. He was a veteran of the world war and a member of the old 10th Battalion. Although not in robust health for a few years, it was only a few weeks before his death, that his condition became serious, and although everything that loving hands could do was done, he gradually became weaker and passed peacefully away in the early hours of December 22nd at the age of 80 years. The late Mr. MacDonald was a genial, kind hearted citizen, a friend to the needy and many will remember his kind acts and his sympathy with the unfortunate and distressed.

He served on the board of Managers of the United Church for a number of years and always had a keen interest in the work and at the time of his passing was also Secretary Treasurer.

The funeral was held on Christmas day. After a private service at the home, the remains were taken in the United Church which was held in the presence of a large number of where further service was held, conducted by his pastor, Rev. D. J. Minion. The hymns sung were "The Lord My Shepherd," "Oh God Our Help in Ages Past" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

The sympathy of all goes out to the bereaved wife, formerly Miss Beatrice Matheson, of her three sons and one daughter. Clarence with the R. C. A. P. at present at home; Blair with the C. Army stationed at Hamilton, Ont.; Gertrude and Basil at home. (Two infants predeceased him). Also his aged mother, two brothers and two sisters, Alex G. Bradburn; Hugh

Banquet Enjoyed

The social evening committee of the Benevolent Irish Society was tendered a banquet Friday evening at the Queen Hotel, sponsored by the Society in appreciation of their work. The invited guests for the evening included the wives and lady friends of the members and also the orchestra which furnished the music for the Tuesday and Saturday night dances. Master of ceremonies for the evening was Mr. J. W. Hogan who is also chairman of this committee. He took this opportunity of thanking the other members for their splendid support and cooperation. Each member in turn in a brief speech thanked the Society and expressed their willingness to render their services on its behalf. The president, Mr. L. O. Kelly, on behalf of the officers and members of the Society thanked the committee and the orchestra for their contribution to the success of the social evenings for the past year. A very pleasant feature of the evening was music furnished by the orchestra.
