SMILES

"Did you go to the De Swells afternoon reception?"

"Yes, frightful jam. Mrs. Heavyweight had her arm broken."

"Dear me, how?"

"She happened to get in the way when the refreshment-room door was opened."

"Aren't you glad that there won't be any more coal bills?"

"I didn't have any. I kept warm trying to dodge the man with last summer's gas bill."

"Papa says I must marry a man of will and determination."

"Well, tell him I have firmly determined to marry you."

What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

"When did you ever know Bill Pelham to do anything really foolish?"

"He acted the part superbly, it fooled me completely."

"I don't mean that exactly. It seems so stupid to imagine that anyone could be scared away from a house by vague talk like that. Hil, do verify the names Smucker gave you—Mr. Seymour and the others. Promise me!"

"Probably all names that Reggie thought up on the spur of the moment; but I'll ask the agent I bought the place from, that will satisfy you."

Adolf Smucker was always earlier at the office than the other employees. It gained him a reputation for punctuality, and enabled him to learn much of the firm's business that would otherwise be kept from him.

He was nervous on this particular morning. He had gone home the night before, and had told his family of all the daring and splendid things he had said and done. Mrs. Smucker, usually so admiring and reassuring, had remarked:

"Dolf, you've fired yourself. You might have waited till the two girls was out of school!"

Smucker's father had listened rapturously to the account of the planked steak.

"Real beer!" he said many times. "Not in this life shall I taste real beer again!"

"Nor in the life to come," said his daughter-in-law. "Turn your thought from your sinful appetites." She looked at the clock. "It's time you went to the docks."

Assuredly Adolf Smucker was unhappy. He was filing letters industriously when Hanby sent for him.

"No," said Hanby, as Adolph unsheathed his newly pointed pencils, "I'm not giving you any letters today. I'm getting rid of you. The cashier will pay you a month's salary."

The Adam's apple tried to burst its bounds.

"I'm sure I've worked long and faithfully for you," Mr. Hanby," Smucker cried. "I don't deserve this!"

"You don't returned Hanby. "Two weeks' salary would be quite sufficient. Listen to me, Smucker. You've never been either faithful or efficient. God knows why I didn't fire you years ago. I suppose those hard-luck stories you used to spring whenever you were in danger saved you. You told me less than a month ago the same old yarn about paying installments on your house and looking after an old father. Don't interrupt! Your house was paid for three years ago, and your old father is night watchman on some docks near where you live. Your three elder children keep themselves and help support the home. Probably you are comfortably fixed."

Smucker raised his voice.

"Mr. Hanby, I won't be fired without a reason!"

"You've not even been honest," continued Hanby. "There are petty cash irregularities that can be gone into if you wish it, and certain losses of postage stamps. Ifyou are wise, you won't irritate me any longer."

Smucker withdrew. So they had found out about him! What a trick for a rich man like Hanby, to be waiting when an old employee used an office stamp for his private correspondence!

When he was much excited, there were noises in Mr. Smucker's head as of things about to burst. What a day there would be when the intellectuals controlled the workers and enslaved the capitalists! He had been one of those who believed that Lenin was to be the savior of America. Lenin had died, but others would be raised up. Smucker's visions of vengeance were stupendous. They died down a little when he reflected that he must face that sound domestic economist, Mrs. Adolf. He drew his month's unearned salary vindictively.

At eleven o'clock Bill Pelham, summoned by telephone, sauntered into Hanby's office. He was a slight man, above middle height, with dark hair and eyes. His was a tired, lined face—the face of a man to whom success has not come. No man was closer to him than Hanby.

"How's the dog market, Bill?" Hanby asked.

"I don't know; but my business is going to the dogs, if that's what you mean. We can't all guess where the wheel is going to stop Sorry I couldn't get to your dinner party last night. Dina rang me up and told me my absence was the only blemish."

"That's a fact, Bill." Hanby looked at him keenly. "You don't relish this country life idea?"

"It's a tragedy to me," Pelham groaned. "Your home is my home. You let me come when I want to and leave when I want to. You ask no vain questions, and my grouches never make you angry. I don't know what the devil I shall do. You've been blessed above all the men I know. Your girls are pretty an popular, and yet they don't go guzzling gin with chauffeurs. Your boy is popular, and yet he keeps clean. I've often thought the Hanby family was sent to show that decency was possible even in this jazz life we lead. Do I relish your going? Don't make a jest of it!"

"You'll be at the Gray house, too. You can't drop out of our lives, so don't anticipate it. Funny place, the Gray house! I suppose you read that my caretaker was murdered last night?"

"Haven't seen the morning papers. Tell me about it."

"A puzzling crime," commented Pelham, when he had heard all that his friend knew.

"I may be next," Hanby said, wondering how long Bill could maintain this air of complete innocence. "Poor Dina a widow, with the chance of marrying a better man!"

"Don't!" said Bill, frowning. "I don't like to hear you make a joke of that sort of thing. If Dina died, could you ever marry again?"

"Good G—d, no! Of course not!" replied Hanby, startled.

"She couldn't either. Hil, old man, don't you know that every now and again in this human family two people are born like Dina and you—two people whom nothing can separate but death? I've watched you with other women and I've watched her with other men—pretty women, too—and better-looking cusses than you. Tell me, have you ever seen a woman you care a d—n for since you met Dina?"

"No."

"And she's seen no other man. You two are marvels. That family of yours is what it is because of its parents."

MALPEQUE

The services in Princetown United Church on Sunday deserve more than a passing notice. The Rev. D. M. Grant of Westville, N. S. A former pastor here gave practical and inspiring addresses at both services. The large congregation present added to the interest, the music was good and the weather was all that could be desired—making the day one to be remembered.

The text at the morning service was taken from Isaiah 9. 6 an "His name shall be called wonderful." the evening address was based on the words "And took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men" Phillipians 2. 7.

A pleasing feature of the evening service was the duet "It was for Me" given by Mrs. Wallace MacNutt and Mrs. Chester Simpson. The music was as follows:

Morning Service.

Prelude. "No II Nachtgeana, T. Clowe,

Offering. "ha Cleanson" Hoffman.

Anthem "In Vacation" M. Moore.

Postlude, "Allego Con Breo" Shephard.

Evening Service.

Preludes "Fontasia," "Spring Song" Lemmens. Lemare.

Duett "It was for me", Blount. Mrs. Wallace McNutt, Mrs. Chester Simpson.

Offering "A Shephard's Ideyl," Gaibre.

Anthem "Come unto me" Moore.

Postlude "Marche Des Girondins" Scotson Clark.

Mrs. James A. Campbell B. A. Organist and Choir director.

The following were among the recent guests registered at the "MacDougan House" Malpeque Corner:—Miss Hawker, St. John, Miss Gladys Coleman, Summerside, Miss Constance Burrows, Summerside, Miss [illegible] Summerside, Mr. C. E. Farrow, Yarmouth, N. S.

POWNAL

The many friends and relatives of Mr. Frederick Praught will learn with regret of his passing. The late Mr. Praught had been in failing health for some time and after ten days treatment at the hospital was removed to his home where he was tenderly cared for by his faithful wife, during his last days. He was a man of sterling qualities, a good neighbour and a kind father. He was a farmer but he has taken his last appeasing look at a meadow, field and glen. He has forever closed the gates of his manor and lies sleeping in the beautiful Cemetery at Vernon River, until the day dawns and the shadows flee away. The following are left to cherish his memory. The widow, his daughter, Annie Mrs. V. Curley, Village Green, Jack in U. S. A., and Bernard at home, two sisters are also left to mourn, Mrs. Young, U. S. A. and Mrs. P. Sherry, Fort Agustus, and one brother Father Bernard, Oregon, U. S. A. The funeral which was very largely attended was conducted by Father Bowlin of Winnipeg, who is spending some time here due to the illness of his mother. The pallbearers were George Carver, Arthur Jenkins, Peter MacKenna, Dan Cannon and Jack Cannon.

Miss Muriel Jones who spent a pleasant week with her Aunt, Mrs. Geo. Stewart, Bellview has returned home.

Miss Christene Bruel, Milltown Cross is visiting her sister Mrs.. A. G. Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Coady, Charlottetown were recent visitors here the guests of Mary, A. MacMillan.

West Roland MacDougall son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter MacDougall of Bangor is spending his holidays here.

Miss Rheta Ray, spent a pleasant holiday in Vernon with her Aunt Mrs. Colin Bruel and Mr. Bruel M. P.

Mr. H. Gay Judson and bride of Alexander and Mrs. (Dr.) Harry Pierce of Morgan Town, Virginea, were visitors in Pownal on Sunday.

The United Church S. S. picnic which was held at Waterside on Wednesday was a big success there was a large number of kiddies present and they did enjoy themselves as did the grown ups.

Mr. and Mrs. Layton Jones and family accompanied by this scribe were among those who attended the Circus on Monday evening.

Mrs. W. H. Edmonson, Tacoma, Wash., who has been absent from the Province for twenty-eight years and is now visiting her sister Mrs. George Carver and brother Mr. Nathaniel Gay, Pownal Village.

Mr. T. K. Burhoe of Providence R. I. accompanied by his niece Mrs. Richardson and her daughter Hazel of New Bedford, Mass, and Mr. Reuben Enman and young son of Westford, Mass., are spending a pleasant vacation on the Island. The latter is visiting the old homestead here after an absence of fifteen years. Naturally he sees many changes. Some have gone and some of us have come. Mrs. Richardson was formerly Jennie Judson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Judson, Alexandra, she with her parents having moved to the United States when she was but four years old.

A musical program which was very much enjoyed was given in Pownal Hall last week. The leading artist was Miss Renie Wood, pianest, formerly of Alexandra. Miss Wood has spent some time in U. S. A. pursuing her music, she is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music. The audience was delighted with her reditions. She was assited by local talent—P

JUBILEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Jubilee Women's Institute Albany Village was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas E. Noonan on June 3rd. The meeting opened by singing Its a good time to get acquainted, and Old Virginy. In the absence of the President, the Vice-President assisted by Mrs. Sterling McKay, occupied the chair There was 7 members present and five visitors. The minutes of last meeting was read and signed. The roll call was answered by signing your name with your left hand while blind-folded. The school committee visited the school and the teacher Wilfred McCardle suggested that a Book-Cases be purchased and a school day library installed in the school. The school grounds have been cleaned and the men of the village planted trees around the grounds and if they grow will add much to the beauty of the school. The sick committee visited the sick and fruit was sent to Miss Annie Cameron who was a patient in the Prince County Hospital.

A letter was read from Dr. Helen McKerchey on Maternal Care. It was decided to hold the annual school picnic on June 23rd. The next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. W. P. Carver. After the business was settled the evening was spent in conservation and jokes. Lunch was served and a good time was brought to a close by wishing the Host and Hostess good luck for the use of their home. The national Anthem finished the meeting and all departed with the glad thought they would soon meet again.

MOSCOW, July 22—Ancient regime photographers in Russia will be obliged to revolutionize their old technique if they are to keep in stride with Communist life and society. The proletariat does not wish to be photographed with a carnation in his buttonhole against palace gardens and steamships.

As a result of a campaign the Artists' Guild have launched against the old time photographer, workers homes are now being plastered with pictures of proletarians playing cards, drinking vodka and feasting on sacred Easter cake, and children smoking cigarettes and dogs wearing horned rimmed spectacles.
