CONQUERING STUMPS.

An ingenious man who had been baffled in his efforts to clear land that he had taken up, on Puget Sound of the enormous pine stumps with which it was covered at last hit upon the plan of burning them out by forced draft. According to the Popular Merchandise Monthly he finally got a four-horse-power donkey-engine, attached a six-inch blower, and over this he fitted a tin case with twelve tubes leading from it. To these he attached pieces of garden hose, and to the ends iron pipe. Then he bored a hole in a stump, and dropping in a live coal, inserted a pipe and started the engine. In a few moments the hole was aflame, and soon a dozen stumps were blazing, although it was the wet season and the monsters were sodden with water. This was the beginning. The inventor soon found that his garden hose was not large enough to burn out a big stump with reasonable rapidity, so he inserted inch and a half rubber hose. This worked better, but still the process consumed too much time; besides, the hose buckled and cracked. Then he resorted to wire center two-inch hose and two-inch iron pipe, and replaced the six-inch blower with a twelve-inch one. With the old method of dynamite and donkey-engine, the destruction of twenty-four stumps ranging from five to eight feet in diameter would cost about $125. If consumed by the new process, the cost should not exceed ten dollars. Even with the present arrangement of twelve pipes, the cost has been reduced about three quarters. Besides the reduction in the cost of clearing the land, the soil is left in much better condition by the new method. Bulky, firm rooted in the earth, and so saturated with pitch that it will not decay, the stumps in the region have defied everything but dynamite, and that costs about three dollars a stump, with an equal amount to cover the expense of the donkey-engine necessary to remove the roots, when the main body of the stump has been shattered. Clearly such a costly process cannot be used for agricultural purposes in a heavily timbered country. With a chain of cities running right through the timber belt from Portland to British Columbia, the food question west of the Cascades is rapidly becoming a serious one, the need of adjacent farming land is more and more urgent. And indeed the land is there, within a few minutes' ride of either of these centers; but the firm stump stands guard and warns the farmer off.

WHAT MEN DO IN THE RAINSTORMS

The Man in the Rain. "Men," said a fashionable tailor, "are much more particular about their clothes than women, though few people realize this fact. Take a man in a light gray suit caught in a shower. Does he go blithely on, heedless of the elements? No. He seeks the nearest shelter and remains there till the downpour has stopped absolutely. But it is his straw hat that a man takes most care to preserve. I have seen men in pouring torrents hurrying along bareheaded, their straw hats carefully concealed beneath their coats. Did you ever see a woman go to those lengths? Often a man caught in a shower carries his hat sort of casually at arm's length at his side, as if he was doing it unconsciously, don't you know. And how often do we see them holding newspapers over their hats. Ever see a woman do that? No. Somehow women seem to be able to go through a shower without making conspicuous figures of themselves. They are always serene, never troubled, and they never seem to get as wet as men do."—London Answers.

A Household Necessity

Father Morrissey's Liniment Should be in Every Home. How seldom a week passes without some member of the family suffering from a sore throat, chest or back, a burn or a cut, a sprain, strain or ache. Such troubles will come, but there is no need of suffering much from them. Keep a bottle of Father Morrissey's Liniment in the house, use it freely, and the pain has little chance. During his lifetime Father Morrissey prescribed this Liniment regularly, and it proved very effective in relieving all sorts of pains and aches. AN ADVENTURE WITH A COBRA The Lady and the Cobra. An Englishwoman residing in India one evening found to her horror that a huge cobra had coiled itself about her veranda rails, near which she sat playing the violin. She was too near the snake to run with safety, so she continued playing while she gradually edged away. At first her only idea was to keep the creature thus engaged while she escaped, but when she had gained a safer distance and perhaps fascinated by the unwonted sight a strange inspiration seized her. She played air after air of different characters. The effect was magical. That snake behaved like an ardent, hot blooded disciple of Paganini. Every variation in the music, whether of volume or of tone, produced instantly a corresponding change in the attitude of the cobra. If she played a lively dance it swayed its body sideways in quick time and yet in graceful curves. Once she struck a number of false notes in rapid succession on purpose. The cobra winced and writhed in pain, as if suddenly struck with a whip. Thus the creature behaved like a mad musician till the lady, getting tired of the sport, gradually moved herself farther and farther and then made a sudden bolt into her room and banged the door, leaving the cobra to wander disconsolate to its lair in the fields.—London Chronicle.

CHINESE EXPERT AT FLYING KITES Chinese Kites. Great ingenuity is displayed by the Chinese in the manufacture of kites. Kites of the angular shape, common among ourselves, are never seen, the designers representing at their own sweet will flowers, birds, fish and in fact anything that may be found on the earth or in the waters under the earth. Many of them are extremely beautiful and do infinite credit to the artistic tastes of the people. Human figures representing historical or mythical events are very commonly used, while emblems such as the double fish and characters of felicitous import, such, for example, as shou (longevity) and ci (good fortune), are favorite subjects. On some of them musical strings are so arranged that they emit sounds of melody as they fly aloft. The first ones so constructed are said to have been instrumental in saving an army when in dire distress. The general commanding this unfortunate force, being hemmed in by the enemy, resorted to the stratagem of flying in the dead of night a number of kites with musical strings so arranged as to emit sounds resembling the words, "Beware of Han." Like the Syrians, the contending host took flight at the sound and were destroyed—horse, foot and dragoons.
