Lightning And Downpour of Rain Cause Death And suffering

CORBERRE, France, Sept. 30—A terrific thunder storm raged for twelve hours and spread death and ruin through the city. Fourteen were killed and thirty injured.

The stream which passes through the city soon overflowed its banks and flooded the streets. In a hardware establishment where large quantities of gasoline, petroleum, alcohol and other inflammables were stored with a cask of calcium carbide the water dissolved the chemical and enormous volumes of gas were formed An explosion occurred which wrecked two buildings and enveloped two others in flames. Three persons passing at the time were killed. Five families are buried in the ruins and nearly every house in Corberre was flooded, most of the provisions have been spoiled. In answer to an urgent appeal from the mayor, the Prefect at Parpinion despatched several tons of bread to meet the pressing needs of the inhabitants. A company of the 53rd infantry rushed from Collidre to assist in the rescue work and search the ruins. Floods also carried away the greater part of the Pauline dynamite factory and caused tremendous damage throughout the neighborhood. The railroad has been washed out in several places a train was derailed and this crowded passenger train is imprisoned in a tunnel at Canules-Sur-Me.

FUN GALORE AT THE OPERA HOUSE

The Klark-Urban Company were greeted with another large audience at the Opera House last night. The play presented was Clyde Fitch's greatest comedy "Girls" and it proved to be one of the best comedy dramatizations ever put on in Charlottetown, It was a laugh from start to finish showing that true bachelordom never did run smooth, even when the bachelors were maids. The fun begins when Edgar Holt, a young lawyer Mr. Harden Clark, breaks into the "girls" studio just as the occupants, three men haters, were about to retire. The intruder escapes without injury and takes a trip to the country. Two of the men haters, Miss Pamela Gordon, and Miss Violet Landsdowne, obtain positions in the law office of Messrs Sprague & Holt. The senior member Mr. Sprague, becomes infatuated with the females of his staff and advances them over, Mr. Frank Lute, a woman hater, who has been in the firm's employ for ten years. Mr. Lute does not hesitate to express his opinion of the action of the senior member of the firm. or to voice his opinion of women, and in so doing he holds up his end of the comedy. Miss Pamela Gordon, who has become private secretary for the senior partner resents his familiarity in attempting to make love, and is just about to leave the employ when the junior partner returns from his vacation. The latter proves to be the intruder of the 'Girls" studio, two weeks before, and Miss Gordon, who has taken a great liking to the adventure, reconsiders her resignation and decides to retain her position. The play progresses filled with sparkling humor and clever situations until it ends up with the three, woman haters succumbing to the irresistable darts of cupid. Mr. Lute, the woman hater, is married to the second of the man haters, Violet Landsdowne, while Mr. Edgar Holt, and Miss Gordon, in the matrimonial line. came second, The third of the band of women haters also deviates from the path and marries a show manager. The play was well staged, with beautiful and appropriate scenery, while the acting of the different members of the cast, showed them to be artists of finished order. The excellent specialties between the acts were pleasing features of the show.

On the whole the performance was of a first class order and the audience showed their appreciation by rounds and rounds of applause.

The following is the cast of characters:—Pamela Gordon, a man hater Maisie Cecil; Violet Lansdowne, a man hater, George Lee; Kate West, man hater, Georgie Lee, Kate West, Purcelle, elocutionist Fannie T. Heath; Mrs. Dennett, wanting a divorce, Marie Fountain; Edgar Holt, a young lawyer, Harden Klark; Frank Lute, a woman hater, George Brown; George Sprague, Holt's partner Frank Urban; Mr. Dennett, wanting a divorce, Leroy Kenneth; The Janitor, who demands respect Frank Field; The Postman, a married man Fred Schreiber; Messenger Boy, who does his duty, Billy Webb. The play for tonight is a lively melodrama with mystery galore, entitled "The House of a Thousand Candles."

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 30.—The international missionary convention of the Disciples of Christ which opened here today with about 5000 members in attendance is the first convention of its kind ever held in Canada. All sections of Canada and of the United States are represented by delegates, especially the States of the Middle and Central West, which are the stronghold of the sect.

According to the reports submitted the sect is in a flourishing condition and is steadily gaining in membership. During the year Sunday schools have been established in many places in the middle and central West and in the northwestern provinces of Canada. There is now a Sunday school at Ponoka, Alberta, probably the most northerly point where a Sunday school is maintained by any religious organization. An effort will be made to draw Disciples from the middle western States to the Canadian Northwest, where the sect has gained a strong foothold.

The Rev. Dr. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore, who spent the summer in England in the interest of the church unity movements, delivered an interesting address giving an account of his experiences. There was also reports on home and foreign work and on the work carried on by the women.

BANKS MUST OPEN REGISTRY OFFICE

OTTAWA, Sept, 29.— When the Bank act was adopted by the house of commons last session it contained a provision that the banks must open in several provinces in which shareholders resided share registry offices where the shares of such shareholders were transferable. The intention was to enable estate of deceased shareholders to escape being taxed under the present system both by the province in which the shareholder resided and by the province in which the head office of the bank was situated. The senate, when the bank act was under consideration by that body, made this section permissive., instead of mandatory. The minister of finance, Hon. W. T. White, is now taking up the question with the banks with a view to seeing if arrangements can be made permitting the local transfer of shares.

IS THERE DISEASE IN SOLID BANK NOTES ?

The finance department, under the direction of Hon. W. T. White is making an interesting test of a new method for the sterilization of bank notes. The new Bank act provides that the treasury board may make regulations providing for the disinfection and sterilization by the several banks of Bank notes and Dominion notes which have come into the bank's possession before a reissue of such notes to the public. After the close of the session, the minister of finance, with a view to ascertaining whether bacteria likely to injuriously affect the public health were to be found on the notes, instructed the officers of the laboratory of the department of agriculture to make an examination of notes chosen at random, from a number which had been returned by one of the banks as being unfit for further circulation. The report from the laboratory has not been received.

LIVING AND DEAD BACTERIA WAS FOUND.

It reveals the fact that a large number of living and dead bacteria were present on each note. Detailed examinations were made to determine the presence or absence of tubercle baccilli and while certain acid organisms indistinguishable microscopically from those of tuberculosis were found, it was impossible to produce lessions in susceptible animals. No organisms similar. to those of diphtheria were found, nor was it possible to recover diphtheria-like organisms from the cultures. The presence of fatty extract was demonstrated and this material would enable the easy retention of any bacteria coming in contact with a note.

AN INTERESTING COURT DECISION.

ST. JOHN, Sept. 29.—An interesting decision was given in the probate court this morning by Judge Armstrong on the will of the late Elizabeth McGoldrick, involving the disposition of an estate of $58,000. The will had been contested on the ground that it was typewritten and that there was no authority under the law for the purpose of a will in this form. The Judge's decision was to the effect that the general use of typewriters had given documents prepared in this manner the same standing before the courts as those written by hand. The will was accordingly admitted to probate in solemn form.

THE DIVIDEND OF THE PRODIGAL

Rev. Dr. Fullerton's Powerful Address on Parential Responsibility.

Eighty per cent. of the moral delinquents to-day are traceable to diseases that come from the parents. This quotation from Professor Tait's lecture to school teachers last week, formed a striking illustration for Rev. Dr. Fullerton's address last evening, in St. James Hall on the "Gospel of Consequences." There was a large attendance, and the service was taken part in by His Honor, Governor Rogers, and the Rev. D. McLean. Professor Watkis presided at the organ, and the singing was hearty and revivalist.

Rev. Dr. Fullerton, who has a rich, resonant voice, heard distinctly in every part of the large hall, is an eloquent, impressive speaker. He feels impelled to deal with this important question of the welfare of youth in our midst from a deep conviction that Christian parents require to be awakened to the grave peril to their children if the present spirit of indifference is not checked, and a return made to the practice of Christian example in the homes and attendance on Christian instruction in the Church.

The subject of his address last night was the "Gospel of Consequences." He reminded his hearers that a prodigal was not confined to sex or years. That man was living in "a far country" in the very centre of civilization, nominally attached to a Christian Church, who in thought revelled in ideas of riotous living.

We do not need to believe in the rubric that every man has been in the far country and can only be saved by the swine trough.

It is our duty as members of the Church of Christ, as elder brothers in the household to do what is in our power by forewarning to forearm the rising generation of the fearful consequences of sin, of the terrible resiliency associated with evil.

There is no man, preacher or otherwise, who understands humanity, will deny that the prodigal when he went out to see life, when he cut the ties that bound him to his home and to the Church, had a good time, according to the standards of the world and the flesh.

But what was the cost of that enjoyment? What did he pay for the few months or years of revelry? When we think of what he had to pay, or what must be paid, for living in "the far country," we are forcibly reminded of the lines of Kipling,

"Sins we do two by two,
Must be paid for one by one."

Not in New York, not in Montreal, not in London, but in this very Charlottetown, in the province in which we dwell, are hundreds of instances of men and women who are even now paying the penalty of squandering their substance in riotous living.

Oh! that we could show to those young people in the flower of their youth, going open-eyed into the path of evil the tremendous consequences of transgression.

The young man who chooses the broad way goes out into life looking for a dividend of happiness and gets a dividend of misery.

How many young people by their utter carelessness and criminal wastefulness, by their misuse of the vitality God has given them, find themselves in a few brief years, shattered and broken in health, ministered to by strangers in the almshouses and hospitals of our country.

Society, the jovial friends of his conviviality and pleasure have no further use for him. "Poor fellow! they say, "what a pity he should sink so low, but that is none of our business." People with whom he foregathered in riotous living have no element of pity and charity such as we find in the gospel.

The ambulance wagon for those who fall in its service does not belong to society.

In the parable of the Prodigal Son Christ gives a true example of the life of everyone who has turned his back on God, turns his back on things that are spiritual.

There is only one power can break the fetters of sin, the power of God Himself.

The consequences of such a life, what are they?

In the new theology there is no turning back; sin is negation.

In science the result follows the cause.

In nature there is no forgiveness.

In human society as at present constituted there are certain offences that cannot be forgiven in the sense of being wiped out.

In the gospel of Christ the Father's door is always open to those willing to return—but we may overestimate the grace of God. All the grace of God will not wipe out the remembrance of the past. And while we ourselves may be saved, we cannot blot out from our memories that we may have driven others by our folly to eternal ruin.

The grace of God cannot restore ruined health.

It is our duty as parents and guardians to remember this.

The grace of God cannot baptize memory so that it will refuse to resurrect the past.

All the evangelical welcome to a father's home will not make up for the years of wanton wastage wallowing in the mire of a far country.

Professor Tait's statistics given in Prince of Wales College last week showed that 80 per cent. of the moral delinquents to-day are traceable to the diseases that come from the parents. The children born of those who have wasted their substance often became hopeless wrecks morally and physically, and do what we would they become denizens of the penitentiary.

This was a matter for grave reflection for members of the Christian Church, and it was our duty as citizens as well as Christians to pause and think what must be done to deal with the problem.

To-night's subject will be The Return of the Prodigal and his Welcome Home.

WOMAN SHOT DIVORCED HUSBAND

(Canadian Press)

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—Rising from the breakfast table to answer the door bell, Frank Ivy, a real estate dealer, was shot and probably fatally injured to-day by his first wife in the presence of his second wife and two babies.

After firing two bullets into her divorced husband Mrs. Ivy dropped the revolver.

Ivy picked it up and fired after her as she ran down the street the bullet striking her on the leg.

She is now in jail.

The shooting was the result of a quarrel over the couple's fifteen-year-old daughter who at the divorce proceedings, nine years ago, was given by the court to the mother.

Recently she was taken from the mother and sent to a reform school.

Mrs. Ivy blamed her husband for this and now has a suit pending against him in the Supreme Court.
