WEDDING BELLS—A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Francis de Sales Cathedral, Toledo, Ohio, Tuesday morning, June 14th, at 9 o'clock, when Margaret Ada eldest daughter of Mrs. Theresa Murphy, Chelton, Prince Edward Island, became the bride of John W. Holmes, Winnipeg, Manitoba. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frances McKeoughan in presence of immediate friends. The bride was charmingly attired in bouffant costume of peach taffeta and georgette with picture hat to match of transparent mohair and georgette. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and ferns. Miss Marguerite Haynes was bridesmaid and wore a pretty yellow satin and chiffon gown with large picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses and ferns. The groom was attended by Lyall J. Haynes. After the ceremony a dainty breakfast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Haynes, 1520 Superior St. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, D. SURPRISE PARTY—A surprise party was given to Mrs. William Frazer at her home in San Pablo, Calif., on Saturday evening, July 8th, by a number of her friends from San Pablo, Richmond, Oakland and San Francisco. The evening was spent in the playing of games, dancing and music, ending in the "wee small hours with a splendid lunch. Mrs. Frazer left on July 12th for Boston, Mass., where she will visit her relatives, on her return she will be accompanied by her sister. Those present at the party included Mr. and Mrs. F. Blume, Mr. and Mrs. Olof Owen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Blume, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. M. Bouchard, Mr. and Mrs. William Larimer, (San Francisco), Mr. and Mrs. George Gasner, Miss Alice M. Owen, Miss Anna M. Frazer, Misses Annie, Olive and Carmelita Bouchard, Messrs. Carl Blume, William Blume, George Gallant, Lawrence Bouchard and William Frazer. SUSPECT ARRESTED—A bold and daring robbery, on perhaps a rather small scale, occurred Monday night when a young man rifled the money drawer in the store of Miss Sadie Huestis, Great George Street. The man in question came in, alone, and asked for a bottle of spruce beer. Miss Huestis went to the cellar for it and as she returned to the cellar steps she saw the customer reaching over the counter to the drawer which is under the shelving of the store. She immediately seized the man's wrist but he endeavored to hold on to a small amount of cash and wrench himself clear. Miss Huestis at once notified the police, giving a good description of the man and with this description Police Officers Watson Higgins and Dominic Doyle took in a suspect at 2.30 yesterday morning whom they found in a vacant lot on Upper Queen Street. He will probably appear before His Honor this morning.

Reception To New Pastor

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. C. A. McDonald on Wednesday evening when the members and adherents of the United Church gathered to tender a reception to Rev. C. G. and Mrs. MacKenzie, the newly arrived pastor of the church, and his wife. During the evening a splendid musical program was given, contributed to with solos by Mrs. Law, Miss Harmer, Mr. Gard and Mr. Thorpe. Short addresses of welcome were given by Rev. W. J. James of the Anglican Church, and Captain Lock of the Salvation Army, as well as by the chairman of the evening, Mr. D. W. Patterson. Mrs. F. B. Smith assisted as accompanist and also gave several well appreciated piano solos. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the church.

Mr. MacKenzie comes to Grande Prairie from Ogema, Sask., and the United Church News of Saskatchewan published in the New Outlook, says: "He is generally recognized as one of the ablest of all the younger men in Saskatchewan." Mr. MacKenzie completed a three-year course in Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, P. E. I. in 1912 and graduated from Dalhousie University in 1915 with a B. A. degree. He went overseas with the Nova Scotia Highland Brigade in 1916 and after the armistice spent some time with the occupation troops in Germany. In 1919 he entered Union Theological Seminary, New York, receiving his B. D. Degree in 1921. After graduation he spent one year as assistant to the professors in theology and philosophy of religion. In 1924 he accepted the pulpit of St. Andrews, Moosomin, and on the consummation of union he went to Ogema United Church which he has just left to come to Grande Prairie.—From the Grand Prairie Herald, Alberta, July 15th, inst.

(The Rev. C. K. MacKenzie mentioned above is a son of Mrs. Barbara MacKenzie, Sydney Street, Charlottetown.)

Mt. Stewart Notes

We've always heard that anything postponed never turned out the success it would have been if held on its original date. But the festival held by the ladies of the Presbyterian Church last Tuesday evening proved otherwise as it was a grand success, the sum of seventy-five dollars being realized.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Corlis motored from Somerville, Mass., arriving here Wednesday morning to spend some time with Mrs. Corlis' parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Cooke.

Mr. Clarence Coffin, Pisquid, recently had a new floor laid in his kitchen. Mr. Ira Clark the carpenter.

A very painful accident happened to Mr. Jonathan Birt, Fanning Brook, last week when riding his horse home from the field. Mr. Birt was carrying an axe and a hoe and leaned over to pick up his milk can. The horse bolted, knocking him to the ground and causing him a bad shaking up necessitating the doctors' attention.

Mrs. W. D. Coffin is spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Glover, Mount Stewart.

Mr. Robert MacKenzie mechanical blacksmith, is spending some time with relatives and friends in Greenwood.

Regular Presbyterian service was held at three o'clock Sunday, conducted by Mr. Merle Rannage, Student Pastor. Immediately after the sermon a beautiful duet "In Jesus" was sung by Miss Crawford and Miss Kelly, accompanied by Miss Hartshorn.

Regular United Church services were held at the usual hours of 11 a. m. and p. m., conducted by Mr. Hollis P. Tupper, Student Pastor in the absence of Rev. M. K. Charman.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Douglas, Head of Hillsboro, spent Sunday in Suffolk the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. Birt.

Mr. John McAskill has just completed painting his house which makes still another improvement to the already pretty Riverside Drive.—F.

free from all discomorts and annoyance; and those who enter its portals must be prepared to encounter difficulties, discouragements, and sometimes defeat.

Opportunity for public service is great, notwithstanding its troubles; and on the whole it is an honourable calling, well worthy the best that is in any man.

Probably the most momentous time in the life of a public man is when Mr. Speaker of the House says, "Let the honorable member to his seat." They all come in at the same door, and the types are many and varied: the poor man and the millionaire, the minister of the Gospel and the ordinary layman; the man who will be Prime Minister and the private member in the government or opposition. They all subscribe to the principles of their party—they take their seats, and the session begins.

Every Parliament is different from the other in party complexion, in personnel, in the vocational calling of its members, in average ages, and in its governing atmosphere. Nevertheless, the vital fabric is much the same, and it is after all a group of men and one lady bound together for the purpose of governing a great nation.

The old timers tell me that the make-up of parliament has changed quite a lot in recent years. There was a time when lawyers predominated, easily outnumbering the others. The gentlemen of the flowing robes are not so much in evidence now although there were more of them in the last parliament than there were a few years ago, when the agricultural constituencies had such a large representation. As a rule the members who represent the farming communities are among the most industrious in the House, and are never neglectful of their duties no matter how dull the session or committee may be.

The House is now composed of much younger men than formerly, and grey heads and bald heads are not as prominent as they once were. The whiskered type once so much in evidence is now almost obsolete. There is not a really good crop of whiskers in the whole House, although there are some fairly decent, bald heads. The average age of the members is about forty-eight.

Disraeli once described the Commons as the most chilling and nerve-racking audience in the world. We agree with him. To the untutored, preparing to make a maiden speech, the effect is nerve wrecking in the extreme. To stand up and address men of long experience and great wisdom in Parliamentary procedure with varying views, of intense passion and prejudices, and with a coldly critical inclination, is a feat which requires to say the least, well fortified nerves. Many of the hearers are Parliamentarians well versed in old time political history, and if one makes a break it betokens disaster. Fortunately, however, the House is indulgent and always tolerant with the new member.

The member who is able to his work has much visitation to make around the Departments to secure local adjustments and concessions, or to get this or that for his constituents. And the amount of correspondence which must be attended to makes it busy for a member who takes his work seriously.

The House may be some time criticized for its seeming waste of time over things that do not count, for the stubbornness it often displays, less some party advantage be yielded and for the tendency to delay at the end, but broadly speaking, its degree of industry is remarkable.

The new rules that come into force next year, without infringing upon the rights of the individual member, should tend to facilitate and abbreviate the proceedings.

40 minutes is the longest any member may speak, and 11 o'clock will be closing time.

Utlimacy in the House is very much a matter of degree. Every party, of course, knows its own, because they meet together in their lobby or caucus, and the comradeship in a common cause suggests in itself a relation that is close. But the mixing of different groups is not extensive. Any member who speaks often becomes known to everybody else by sight; but the silent backbencher may be in the House for years before some outside his own group even know him by sight.

Parliament is a place of strong likes and dislikes, and though there are friendships that are close and unswerving, there are occasions when a party adherent will speak of a colleague in the cause without even a suggestion of elementary respect.

Of all the jobs in the House, that of the Chief Whip is probably the hardest. To satisfy the dissatisfied, to have everyone in his place on the night of an important division, to arrange pairs for the absentees, and to maintain at all times a quorum and a battery in reserve, is a laborious contract, devolving with a special difficulty on the shoulders of the Government Whip.

Some one has asked me. Is it difficult to interview a Minister.

For the individual, as distinguished from a delegation, "seeing the minister" is often a difficult proposition. Much depends upon who you are and what you want. If you are a personal friend, access is not attended by any particular difficulty. But if you are someone looking for a government job, or a contract, or some favour to which your claims are doubted, you may have to wait for hours and hours; and then, like as not, be told that the minister had to go to council and will be unable to see you.

The Private Secretary, who knows his business, is an effective buffer without offence, he can often step aside would-be interviewers by promising to take up the matter himself, or by directing the suppliant to some subordinate who, in the end, would probably have to deal with the request anyway.

Departmental administration may be delegated largely by a minister to his subordinates, or he may choose for the minister. Diplomatically and to exercise a personal supervision over everything. In the latter case, he finds himself continuously occupied, but nevertheless, the better
