Spring Wheat Production In Eastern Canada

(Experimental Farms News) As a feed for poultry, wheat ranks high and more and more is being consumed. Poultrymen, therefore, have been following with much interest the progress being made in recent years by plant breeders in developing highly productive types of wheat capable of resisting all attacks of that ancient scourge, wheat stem rust. They have noted with satisfaction the forty bushel yields which many farmers have been realizing from certain new rust resistant varieties which have been under test at many points. And many are predicting that very soon an acreage at least sufficient for the farm flock over may be found on most eastern farms. Such a programme has much to commend it, especially in these days of uncertainty when the policy of self-sufficiency is being urged wherever practicable.

Success in the growing of spring wheat in Eastern Canada, its acreage, depends upon a number of factors. In the first place, the soil must be in a good state of fertility and rich, and at least reasonably clean. The variety used must be productive and able to resist rust. The seed must be good and must be sown as early as possible after the land dries in the spring.

The variety recommended for this part of Canada at present is known as Coronation. This is a rust resistant type developed at the Rust Research Laboratory, Winnipeg, and named in Coronation year, hence the name. It has been tested extensively at many points throughout Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces where it has made an excellent showing. In years where rust has been serious, this variety has been quite outstanding. In other years, when rust disease has not been a serious factor, it still has given an excellent account of itself.

The supply of seed of Coronation is substantial and widely distributed. Information as to sources of supply may be had by applying either to the Provincial Government or to the Plants Production Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The latter Division has a list of all farmers whose fields were inspected and approved for certification, last year.

Nazis Lose More Than British

LONDON, April 13 (CP)—Germany will suffer more fundamentally from loss of Swedish iron ore than Britain will from the loss of Denmark's bacon and butter, economic experts said here tonight.

Loss of the high-quality ore from Sweden's mines will force Germany to collect every scrap of metal it can spare from its own plants and railroads. Machines may have to be broken down, rails torn up and buildings razed for their girders to retrieve metal for the war machine, British economists said.

Swedish ore represents only one-fourth of Germany's needs, but it is the most important fourth—the proportion of high-grade ore that has to be compounded with the lower-grade German ores to produce the best steel.

Difficulties created for Britain by German occupation of Denmark in the Baltic, are a secondary order and have already been largely overcome. According to a spokesman for the Food Ministry supplies on hand in refrigerated storehouses are sufficient to exclude any disquiet for the immediate future. Steps have been taken to replace stocks counted on to come from Denmark.

Imports from Canada, Eire and other sections of the Empire have already begun to increase, it was stated.

If 100 per cent replacement is not possible, there is assurance, the spokesman said, that supplies will be available to keep the entire population, civil and military, in good health.

In 1938 Denmark and Sweden supplied Britain with 32 per cent of her bacon and 26 per cent of her butter. Norway provided Britain with 46 per cent of her fish. Prior to the German invasion of Scandinavia, the exports of these countries to Britain were scheduled during 1940 to total 60 per cent of the 1939 figures. This is the quantity that will have to be replaced.

Scout News and Notices

Cochin China Boy Scouts have started a "Handicapped Scout Troop" at the B. and Dumb school at Kunnakulam.

There are 18,100 Boy Scouts in Denmark, and the fact that this organization is a great public asset, by collecting in a most efficient and thorough manner the election results from polling booths in Hallifax in Nova Scotia. As far as we have been able to ascertain, in not one instance did the Boy Scouts fall down on their duty in consequence of their efficiency and devotion to duty the general public were able to receive the results of the polling throughout this province much sooner than would otherwise have been the case. M. Mackay, General Commercial Manager, Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Co.

"The principles of the sanctity of a promise, carrying out one's undertaking, preserving the rights of our fellow men, tolerance and free thought are the pillars of a true and noble life, and youth will suffer more from this retrograde step in the morals of the world than those grown up. Our only hope of countering these evil influences is to train the youth of this country, and to this work the Boy Scout Association has set itself. It is our creed to teach them to be tolerant of the beliefs and ideas of other fellow men. We teach our boys to draw no distinction between language, race or creed, but to respect the rights of their fellows."—Dr. Hans Pirow, Divisional President for Transvaal, speaking at Krugersdorp.

When a fire at Bhonker, Jaipur, India destroyed 150 houses, leaving hundreds of homeless, the Boy Scouts were quickly on the job. They made the homeless people comfortable for the night and organized measures for obtaining food and other relief.

The Scouts of Creston, B.C., are assisting the local Lions Club in keeping school children to the regular railroad schedule instead of time-saving short cuts down the tracks. The Scouts patrol the tracks at school opening and closing hours.

When a small baby left in a carriage disappeared outside a Toronto store, Police Inspector Greenwood added to his own searchers the might of the Boy Scouts. Patrol of the 24th Toronto Boy Scout Troop. It was the Panthe's discovered the baby, being wheeled away by a small girl.

Eighty-six Scouters from many parts of India have just completed a Scoutmasters' Training Course. Despite the fact that they were of different castes and religions and lived together in complete harmony for ten days. So Scouting, with its law that a Scout is a brother to every other Scout no matter what his caste, creed, or religion, is a great factor in bringing Indians of all castes together on a common footing.—Hong Kong Scouting Gazette.

Norway Gives Resume Of Nazi Demands

STOCKHOLM, April 13 (AP)—The Norwegian Government has published a resume of Germany's initial demands for the complete submission of Norway, which it said were first made to the German minister several hours after Germany had started her invasion. The demands listed were:

1. A proclamation to be made to the people and the army ordering no opposition to Germany.

2. The army to be ordered to establish touch with the advancing Germans and give them loyal collaboration. The army to be allowed to keep its weapons if its conduct proved all military buildings to host a white flag beside the Norwegian flag as a sign of their collaboration.

3. The military buildings needed by Germany to secure Norway against the foreign enemy to be delivered undamaged, especially coastal fortresses.

4. Detailed charts of Norwegian mine fields to be delivered to Germany.

5. Norwegian territory to be completely blacked out from the day of occupation.

6. All communications to be maintained at Germany's disposition.

7. No ships to be permitted to sail to foreign ports and no air service to be permitted, with the understanding that maritime commerce would be permitted later to German and neutral Baltic ports.

8. Norwegian pilots to be instructed to obey German orders.

9. Meteorological service to be continued at Germany's disposition but all telephone service, cables and mail to foreign countries to be stopped and traffic with Baltic states to be reduced and controlled by Germany.

10. The press and radio stations to be ordered to carry information as directed by German military authorities, and to collaborate with the military authorities; all radio stations to be turned over to Germany.

11. The export of war materials from Norway to cease.

12. Any proclamations and instructions issued by wireless to be sent only in a cipher unknown to Germany's enemies.

These demands were presented to the Norwegian Government at 5 a.m. on April 9 to Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht.

At the same time, the publication said, German warships already had invaded Oslo Fjord, Bergen and Trondheim and had fought with coastal batteries.

The German demands said that Berlin had come into possession of documents showing that Britain and France intended to invade Norway in a few days and that Norway would not oppose them and could not oppose them successfully.

The German minister was quoted as saying that Germany therefore had opened certain military

When the war started Great Britain was producing 400,000,000 tons annually, but much more is needed to satisfy home and export demands.

Germany and Poland were exporting 350,000,000 tons the year before the war and it is estimated that nearly half this trade is strangled by the blockade. Countries deprived of German supplies, including France, Italy, South America, North Africa, Egypt and Portugal, are now looking to Britain to make good the shortage.

Plans are expected to be drawn up to reopen idle mines and establish reserve dumps. Union leaders are understood to have proposed that all mine-workers should be placed on the reserve list of occupations. In North Wales it is estimated that 20 per cent of the men will be taken from the mines unless they are reserved.
