

Mister Santa Claus When She Says She Wants Stockings She Wants KAYSER

Your Lady Fair is just as particular about the brand of her stockings as you are about the brand of tobacco or golf ball you use! Ever since she was a little girl Kayser stockings have meant something very special. Take our tip and give her SHEER ones. They spell L-U-X-U-R-Y. The heavier, more practical kind she'll buy for herself. If you want to be rated as a smart man, give her a half dozen pairs of different weights. Women wear a heavier kind for shopping and so on.

About that sheer stocking—we have a pip! It's the finest we know of—and the women here are going for it $1.15 a pair in a big way

SHE BROUGHT THE RAIN

LAKELAND, Fla., Dec. 5 — Miss Lillie Stote, who claims she can bring rain by sitting on the shore of a body of water, was headed for her Oxford, Miss., home today, after Lakeland had had its best shower in weeks.

The "rainmaker" ended an eight-day vigil beside Lake Mirror yesterday. Aside from the farewell showers, there was an 87 inch of rain a few days ago.

Miss Stote said she had kept her promise to the berry growers of the Plant City section who brought her here. Heavy rains were reported yesterday in the Plant City area.

GERMANS DENY PRISONERS MAIL UNTIL JAN. 1

VICHY, France, Dec. 5 — The head of the postal service of the German Army explained to the Paris press that "military necessities" handicap the transmission of mails. He confirmed among other things that between Dec. 6 and Jan. 1, no parcels may be sent to prisoners of war.

From a statement by Georges Ripert, Minister of Education, it is confirmed now that Parisian students demonstrated on Nov.

11. Various versions are current here of these demonstrations; none may be mentioned which fact naturally gives rise to many rumors. It is known also that unemployment in Paris causes anxiety, as does also the scarcity of victualling. Meat is scarce, coal is reduced to 100 pounds a month for each home, and supplies generally are lacking. As the Temps says, "All this creates a moral condition which might have grave consequences if it were not taken into consideration."

ABANDONS SHIP

Four persons, including the woman mate, of the coastal auxiliary scow, Jean K., arrived at St. John, N. B. Dec. 1 after abandoning the scow in shallow water off West Beach, on the Bay of Fundy. Captain Paul Kool, his seagoing daughter, Molly (ABOVE), 24; her brother, John I. and Edgar Stone, 22, reached shore in a small boat after beaching the Jean K., which had become disabled in rough weather.

A MAGICIAN IN THE PULPIT

CHICAGO, Dec. 5 — A young theological student, John Booth, 28, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., is performing magic in St. Paul's Congregational Church.

He stepped before a gathering of young people yesterday with an empty cylinder which he called "your life." Into it he placed ribbons of multicolored silk. He flipped his wrist. A bouquet of genuine roses bloomed from the mouth of the vessel.

"As you sow your good deeds, so shall they blossom," he declared. Booth, who has spent six years as a magician in hotels and night clubs, now is devoting himself to the ministry.

Rev. Grant A. Butler, pastor of St. Paul's has appointed the magician assistant pastor to give him a practical field for the application of his studies at the Unitarian Theological School of the University of Chicago.

A year ago Booth told Mr. Butler he wanted to undertake something more constructive "than just entertaining people." He was thinking of the ministry or the diplomatic service.

Mr. Butler persuaded him to choose the former, and last winter he began a three-year course of study. Arrangements have been made for Booth to direct young people's work at St. Paul's and deliver one sermon a month. He preached his first sermon yesterday. Later he gave his demonstration of legerdemain. In addition to the trick of the roses there was another illustrating "clear understanding" and "true friendship"—a ribbon divided, then made whole again.

Gestapo Would Find Starters of Landslides

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 5—Extensive raids by the Norwegian secret police in Western Norway—in the region where, on the night of Nov. 25 and 26, landslides destroyed roads and railways—are being reported by the Swedish press.

The Gestapo of Major Vidkun Quisling, head of the Nazi-controlled Government, was said today to have held a great number of Norwegians allegedly belonging to the British Intelligence Service. Several secret radio transmitters are supposed to have been seized.

(Quisling himself had a narrow escape from death recently during a visit to Kristiansund, where a bomb was hurled at him, but missed according to an A.P. despatch from Sweden. Whether any one else was injured was not stated.)

The correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Nyheter said that since the beginning of the occupation the German military authorities had known that the British received secret information from Norway about the movements and disposition of the German troops. Lately British raids against military camps and harbors have been carried out just at the moment when they could cause the greatest destruction. Thus, in spite of reported round-ups and arrests, Norwegians continue to help their British allies.

The fact that the aforementioned arrests all happened in the region of the landslides can possibly be interpreted as confirmation that the landslides were actually caused by the dynamite of patriotic Norwegians and not, as was said later, by accident. As a matter of fact, the first reports of Swedish correspondents from Norway declaring that the landslides were due to sabotage have not yet been officially denied, and it does not seem impossible that agents of the British Intelligence Service now reported arrested not only have been sending information to London, but also used the dynamite.

The latest reports from Norway also state that, coinciding with the visit of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Reich Minister of Propaganda who, incidentally, lives in Oslo's royal palace, the Norwegian censorship has become more stringent than ever. For instance, it is now announced that no Christmas cards except a few of standard type, will be allowed to be sent to foreign countries, and the sending of Christmas presents of books and newspapers is equally prohibited.

Bacon Exporters Maintain Quality

All connected with and interested in the Canadian swine industry during the last quarter of a century recall with painful memory the aftermath that developed from the quality of bacon exported during the last war. It is now generally resolved that this experience shall not be repeated and one major objective must be to maintain quality in supplies sent to the United Kingdom during the present war.

The accumulated effect of the improvement policies adopted in 1922 in respect to swine improvement are now proving of value. This does not mean that the job of the producer is completed, since increased exports will require increasing number of hogs suitable for export, and further improvement both in respect to type and quality must be energetically continued. This only requires the determination to do so, since suitable breeding stock and ample feed supplies are available.

High quality hogs, however, do not necessarily ensure good bacon. After the farmer produces his hogs, the product has to be processed and transported to Britain, and the efficiency with which this is done determines to a marked degree the quality of bacon that the British consumer will receive. Radical changes have taken place in the processing, curing and handling of bacon during the last 20 years. During the last war, bacon was given a much longer cure and was heavily treated with borax which was considered an effective preservative. Later, borax was discontinued, and the length and strength of the cure were reduced to produce a milder cured bacon to meet the requirements of taste of the British consumer. It is this milder cured bacon that the British consumer wants, and, if it is to be supplied, greater care in the handling of the Canadian export bacon is essential.
