HERO OF BAGDAD DIES IN MESOPOTAMIA

LONDON, Nov. 20.—General Maude, British commander in Mesopotamia, died in Baghdad after a brief illness. An official announcement issued today says General Maude died in Mesopotamia after a brief illness. After a series of British defeats in Mesopotamia, General Maude was placed in command last year and won an unbroken series of successes. Advancing from the Babylonian plains he captured Kut-el-Amara, where General Townsend's army had been compelled to surrender. He continued his drive up the Tigris, advancing ninety miles in two weeks, and last March captured Bagdad.

and popular in Canada, where he resided from 1901 to 1904 as military secretary to the governor-general. He had been private secretary to the secretary of state for war. He had held other responsible positions and since the present war had commanded the 14th Infantry brigade, the 13th and 14th divisions. His home was at Martdale, Walford, Herts, England. Gen. Maude accomplished splendid work when he reorganized the army and re-established British supremacy in Mesopotamia after the General Townsend disaster at Kut-el-Amara. This made his name a household word. In the capture of Kut-el-Amara he showed brilliant generalship, while his advance to Bagdad and his more recent exploits in pushing northward and destroying the immense stores of supplies accumulated for a Turco-German effort to recover the ascendancy added to his reputation. Gen. Maude's name will go down in history as one of the successful generals of this war and his death will be sincerely mourned. His famous manifesto to the people of Bagdad at the time of its capture is one of the notable documents of the war. In this document he informed the people that the British did not come as conquerors but as protectors.

Gen. Maude was married in 1893 to Miss Cecil Cornelia Marianne St. Leger, daughter of the late Col. Rt. Hon. Thomas Edward Taylor, M. P., of Ardglisan Castle, County Dublin.

U. S. CANNOT TAKE DEPOSITS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Recurrence in many sections of the country of the old rumor that the government intends to seize bank deposits caused Secretary McAdoo to issue this statement tonight: "Among the many absurd and vicious rumors which are being put in circulation these days, probably through pro-German influences, is one that the government proposes to confiscate the money on deposit in the banks. The absurdity of the statement is obvious on its face, but I have received letters from several parts of the country which indicated that this rumor is being circulated for an evil purpose. Of course these rumors are wholly without foundation. In fact, the government has no power to confiscate the money of depositors in banks."

1,000 AUSTRIAN OFFICERS WILL ACT AS SPIES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—"Uncle Sam must guard against at least 1,000 former officers of the Austrian army who entered the United States on forged passports between the time that the European war began and the time that the United States joined the conflict." This statement was made by Theodore Hajeck, who as a former member of the Austrian and German secret military organization in Japan declares he assisted in providing 600 of these Austrian officers with passports. Hajeck left China eighteen months ago, and coming here told his story to the Federal authorities and has been of material assistance to them in fighting the German spy system. "About 600 officers in the Austrian army," he said, "who had been taken prisoners by the Russians, escaped singly from Siberia. Their escape was facilitated by Austrian and German agents in China. Many of the officers were supplied with declaration of intention citizenship papers which were obtained from soldiers serving with the American forces in China, sometimes by actual theft and at other times by misrepresentation. With one of these declarations an Austrian officer, properly coached, could get across the border from Siberia to China, for the Russian authorities were always ready to show their respect for any official United States document. Dr. Hugo Schumpeter, head of the Austrian Intelligence Bureau in Tientsin, had a supply of paper with the American eagle and the United States watermark. "Austrian officers who escaped from Siberia were provided with foreign passports in Tientsin, and as fast as they received these doctored Italian, French or English documents they went to Japan, where they embarked for the United States. Each of these officers received $1,000 in Mexican money at the German isters publicly opposing one another on a vital question which, above everything else, calls for national unity. The operation of the measures and the machinery of the law should be in sympathetic hands. The doctors of Canada will have an opportunity to pronounce upon it in less than four weeks. From all appearances, there will be no need of consulting them again.

ESCAPING FROM THE TURKS Manchester Guardian: An enterprising story of the experiences of three British officers who escaped from the Turks is told by a member of the trio. Eluding their guards, the three officers made their way across the desert. Their first adventure came the day following their escape when they suddenly came upon 13 Turkish soldiers. The officers resigned themselves to capture, but were astonished and delighted to discover a clever ploy that the soldiers were deserters fleeing from the hard grips of the Turkish army to some unknown destination. The two parties thereupon joined forces, and proceeding amicably on their way when a Turkish patrol appeared. There was no doubt of the hostile intentions

Sir Wilfrid's announcement that it returned to power he will not proceed with the Military Service Act unless authorized by a referendum destroys the illusion of his admirers who have been proclaiming that the Military Service Act was an accomplished fact and therefore not an election issue. Those who are still disposed to follow him on personal and party grounds in the hope that the referendum would nullify compulsory service are clinging to cold comfort. Even if the referendum is held, it will be several months later the people voted affirmatively on the Military Service Act a Government formed of anti-conscriptionists or divided on that principle would not be likely to enforce the Act vigorously and wholeheartedly. During the referendum campaign there might be the spectacle of Cabinet Min

DONS SKIRTS IN HER CELL. BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Catherine Bowdewitz, dressed in male attire and fixed up like a circus jockeysmith in khaki trousers, black coat, green vest, red necktie and a kossuth hat, created an uproar on Causeway St. and about the thoroughfares at the North station on Thursday. She told the court she was out to see where her husband kept himself and what he was doing. Before the court session opened her husband smuggled to her cell a suit of women's clothing which she substituted for the fantastic uniform which had pleased her fancy on the preceding day. She will be tried on a charge of drunkenness.

Make Your Bookkeeping Department Pay You a Profit You can do it with Burroughs Direct-to-Ledger Posting. A few years ago all bookkeeping was done by the pen-and-ink method. Time is saved, accuracy insured and a much neater ledger page is obtained, because the figures are printed with the steel-face type of the Burroughs Machine. You don't have to change your system to apply a Burroughs Machine to your work. It can be adapted to any style of ledger form, and operated equally well with either loose leaf or card ledgers. Mechanical bookkeeping affords you an opportunity to organize your bookkeeping department on a really systematic basis.
