NEWSY FARM NOTES

A Difference

An illustrated magazine gives a picture of the meet of the famous Old Berks Hounds "at Squire Easton's place, Hendred House." The house itself is an unpretentious building, built, it would seem, more for comfort than appearance, but at the meet the grounds were gay with the presence of huntsmen (and women), horses and dogs. There is an unprotected tennis court or lawn in front and the dogs have all crowded on to it; the horses, men, women, and children, and parked cars, are on the road which runs round the lawn.

For about ten years I lived opposite an Island farmer who had a driveway of perhaps one hundred yards from the main road to his house. On each side of the driveway was a wide stretch of grass which was kept short by the simple expedient of occasionally turning the cows on it. A thorn hedge which had been allowed to grow up to almost tree shape, backed and protected each side, and was redolent with perfume in the early summer, and a rare feasting place for migrant birds in the fall. My friend had gone to some expense in putting up a fancy gate and palisade on the main road, and that driveway always satisfied my "artistic eye." But alas, there was ever a fly in the ointment, as the classics say. Every Spring, when the land was soft and the roads muddy, visitors would drive through his gate, turn off on the grass (which was firmer) and leave wheel and hoof marks that lasted all the rest of the season. I take it if he had remonstrated with them they would have supposed him to be unduly finical. I happened to mention this to a friend in town and found that he also had the same experience. Delivery boys, he said, were apt to leave the proper road and "cut the corners" of his lawn with their teams.

Recently a party of holiday makers—the first of the season—asked leave to go down to my shore. They had a large truck, and varied the entertainment by driving round a hayfield, leaving tracks three inches deep. Last year a party collected large stones and built a fire-place in the middle of a pasture field and when it is ploughed this fall, the stones must be carted off. These, of course, are only thoughtless acts, but then "Evil is wrought from want of thought as well as want of heart." There is something to be learned from the picture of "Squire Easton's place!"

Poultry House Construction

It is now fourteen years since Mr. F. C. Elford, the Dominica Poultry Husbandman, brought out his original bulletin with the above title. Poultry at that time were not realized to be of such importance as there are at the present day, yet Mr. Elford, with a fine prophetic eye, saw the possibilities of the poultry business and put his best into his book. But the passage of the years has brought changes, and improvements too, and the author, assisted by W. S. Gutteridge, has prepared a revised edition, which we may take to be the last word in its own particular line. That such a work is needed is shown by the fact that ten thousand applications for copies have already been received at the Publications Branch, Ottawa, each applicant will receive his copy free of charge.

Plans and specifications of all classes of houses are given, and the chapters on the internal fittings leave little to be desired. As befits the present stage of poultry keeping the new bulletin includes the construction of incubator and brooder houses, and trap nests.

Migratory Birds

The season during which the game warden has been active is drawing to its close and the geese and ducks have been adequately cared for. This is well, for these game birds are important, yet they are not of the major importance. We may sometimes have goose or duck for dinner, but what of our feathered allies who help us to have dinner every day in the year by fighting our insect foes, and who cheer our hearts by chanting of the coming spring. Little is done for them; they are left to the mercy of the crows and grackles which become more numerous every year.

Some of the Provinces, with a president eye, have instituted campaigns against these rascally birds, but so far we have been acting on the time-honored principle of "letting George do it," and so may come to the time when, if we have any insectivorous birds at all, it is because the other provinces have been alert in doing their duty.

Honesty in Business

I have read in some old history that the principal exports of P. E. Island in pioneer days were lumber and oats; and that the market for oats in the Old Country was spoiled by unscrupulous persons who freighted stones in the oat-sacks as make-weights. Years ago I remember hearing a sermon by an Island minister in which he made mention of buying some baled-hay—good on the outside and poor in the centre; he used it as an illustration, in a homely way, of some folk's characters. I write of long years ago, yet today (so slowly does the elementary truth that "honesty pays" gain ground), there are people who practice the same tricks and who assume, as Barnum is said to have done, that a sucker is born every minute.

Last year there was an exhibition at the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, a crate of cranberry boxes, each box of which had been filled with rubbish and a thin layer of cranberries spread on top. And now the Department warns purchasers of unlawful tags which have been found on potato shipments. These resemble the official tag in size and color and even have an outline of the special government stamp, the wording used is "selected," "inspected" or "disease-free potatoes." It is desired that these imitation tags be immediately reported.

The Government Inspectors issue the one authentic certificate for Certified Seed Potatoes in Canada, and such certificates bear the grower's name and number and the official seal of the Plant Diseases Inspection Service. And so caveat emptor!

MR. AND MRS. THOS. B. REED

"SARGON has brought health, strength and happiness to both my wife and me and I would not take all the money in the world for the good it has done us," declared Thomas B. Reed, well-to-do farmer and lumberman, residing at 919 Holmes street, Kansas City, Mo.

"Five years ago when on the train going from Bonanza, Canada, to Calgary, I had a severe attack of acute indigestion and nobody thought I would live to reach my destination. When I came to myself I was in the hospital at Calgary.

"Since then I have suffered constantly from bilious attacks and splitting headaches that lasted for days at a time. Everything I ate disagreed with me. I had smothering spells that made me think I would die. I would get so dizzy I could hardly stand up, and I was contipated all the time. I was nervous and did not get a good night's sleep for years. Many nights I would get up and sit in a chair for hours.

"Sargon made a well man of me. My nerves are steady as a die and I sleep like a boy. My old-time strength has returned and I have gained 15 pounds. I feel fine all the time."

"Sargon helped my wife, who is the mother of 13 children, the same way. She has actually gained 15 pounds in weight and feels better and stronger than in many years.

figures, plus some other allies of Sir Herbert Holt—the man these Beauharnois people had set out to fight—and without any Government conditions imposed upon them respecting either regulation of rates or the capitalization of their enterprise, the Beauharnois Power Corporation launched out upon a campaign of high finance probably never paralleled in the country's history.

Space does not permit a detailed examination of the almost staggering financial operations engaged in, but the extraordinary character of what has been done may be gleaned from one statement of fact. It is that for a power enterprise which, on the estimate of engineers, will not cost in excess of $50,000,000, the Beauharnois people have securities outstanding which, placing their common stock at a value of $90 a share (a value placed upon it by certain bond houses) total the gigantic amount of $380,000,000. Taking account of their 30-year bonds, upon which they have guaranteed 6 per cent., and their Class A common shares which are now selling for $14, they have securities outstanding sufficient to finance their power scheme three times over.

The financial methods resorted to by the Beauharnois Power Corporation, were placed fully upon Hansard by Mr. Gardiner, the U. P. A. leader. The following brief summary was given by Mr. Geary, Conservative member for Toronto:

"Now, Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a word or two about the capitalization of the power corporation. I do not intend to go over the ground covered by those who have preceded me. It originated in a very small way by certain gentlemen owning this small development. Then in some way Mr. Swezey got it into his own hands and afterwards into the hands of his syndicate. Having got in touch with the Beauharnois Corporation—which was not difficult, seeing that he made it—he said to them: 'I will hand you these rights. What did he get for them? He got $4,750,000, plus a sum sufficient to wind up his syndicate, plus a sum sufficient to pay off the original owners. Of that $4,750,000 in cash he agreed to use $1,000,000 to pay for 1,000,000 shares of the Beauharnois Power Corporation Limited at $1 per share. It was a pretty tidy piece of work up to this point. He had in his pocket $3,750,000 in cash and the 1,000,000 shares for which he had paid, and there were no liabilities, the property was all paid for. But that was not sufficient. A subsequent transaction was entered into and that is where purchasers come in composed of Newman, Swezey and Company, Limited and the Dominion Securities Corporation, Limited. These purchasers took over from the Beauharnois corporation $30,000,000 worth of bonds. Those bonds have been issued to the public at par, plus interest. But Mr. Swezey and his friends did not pay par to the corporation for them, they paid $27,000,000 and got $30,000,000 of bonds. But that was not enough. They said: 'We must have a stock bonus when we offer this to the public, and we will take 770,000 shares of class A stock, in addition. So having sold $27,000,000 worth of bonds at par, and given 135,000 shares class A common as a bonus, they had $3,000,000 worth of bonds left, which were as good as cash, for there was a public demand for them; they had cash $3,750,000; they had 1,000,000 class A shares and from this earlier transaction they had 635,000 class A shares, all fully paid for so far as we can tell. As a result they have in their pockets $3,750,000 cash, and 1,635,000 class A common shares, practically the whole issue of class A stock which their own agents and friends hold out to the public as worth $90 a share, or $98,000,000, and besides all this, $3,000,000 in bonds. They have done very well, and to this date they have got away with it. I do not know that after this there is anything in the nature of financing that cannot be accomplished in this country. Those interested at this point fell out among themselves. One group objected and got out; they are reported to have taken with them $3,500,000. It was so bad that in St. James street, that mythical centre, the whole scheme, except to those who were in it for the dollars and cents, simply stank. Even big financiers who make it a business to float these propositions but who were outside of this scheme had no hesitation in saying that it was a very bad affair."

What does all of this mean? What it means, actually, is that because of this high finance, an exploitation being carried on by virtue of the authority of the Dominion Government carried on, moreover, by men powerful in the councils of the Government, the masses of the people in Canada are being robbed of the fruits of a great heritage, being robbed of them by an exploitation that no Government with the slightest regard for the future of this country or for the well-being of the plain people of this country should permit to continue.

It is the consumers of electricity in Canada who will pay on this colossal capitalization. They will pay in higher rates. They will pay the interest on these millions of watered stock, will provide in higher rates whatever is necessary to turn this water into gold for the benefit of a few. That is the long and short of it. That is what is taking place with the silences acquiescence or at best the confessed indifference or impotence of the present Government.

Mr. Mackenzie King, author of "Industry and Humanity," the once professed champion of the ordinary people of this country, the crusader who in 1919 and 1920 made the changes ring with his denunciations of "plutocracy," of "invisible government," and of the "monopolies and combines," sat in Parliament on Thursday and heard this extraordinary story of financial exploitation. He heard it in silence. His only answer, the only answer of his Ministry, was to put up the Solicitor General to draw a legal red herring across the real trail of what is actually at issue.

Mr. R. B. Bennett, Leader of the Conservative Party, is sometimes referred to by four-flush radicals as "a millionaire." Yet it was the millionaire, not the posturing champion of the masses, who stood in the House and demanded that this whole transaction be subjected to a judicial inquiry. Here is the language of Mr.

Bennett, taken from Hansard:

"We are pussyfooting about matters of this kind, because men think that your friend or my friend may be associated with this matter, and we have not the courage to stand up and talk about it. Well, sir, I value my position in public life, but I would rather be relegated to private life and be there forever than remain silent on an occasion of this kind.

"That is what I have to say; let there be no misunderstanding about it. It may mean that I will be subjected to the threats of the great financial powers that are behind this venture. I snap my fingers.

"I confess, Mr. Speaker, when I contemplate this matter and when I regard all that is involved in it, not to thousands but to millions of people who some day will fill this great valley around the St. Lawrence, which might become one of the greatest industrial centres in America—the Ruhr of Canada; when I contemplate what those figures meant this afternoon, my feeling of resentment gets the better of me. I ask hon. gentlemen if this thing is to be tolerated. It rests with us, with each of us, to say whether or not it shall be tolerated, and I believe that in the end the common sense of the Canadian people will prevail and that, great and powerful though the promoters have been, they are not sufficiently powerful to control the common sense of the people of Canada."

This, certainly, is an issue upon which patriotic Canadians can unite. It is the issue as to whether certain financial mandarins can use their political and moneyed power to exploit a great national resource; the issue as to whether the Canadian people will permit any Government to give carte blanche to men who are its powerful backers and supporters to build up fabulous wealth for themselves at the people's expense and out of the people's own estate, with an issue of that kind, and with all the facts made known—as they will be—there can be no doubt of the popular verdict.
