"Yes-You Can Learn Shorthand In Two Weeks."

"I have a chance to get a wonderful job as secretary to the head of one of our largest hospitals, but I have to start in two weeks—and I must have shorthand."

A girl came in and spoke these very words to one of our managers. She wanted to job more than anything in the world—and she was worried over the shorthand qualification.

"You can learn Speedwriting in two weeks," she was assured. He gave her a set of books and a little encouragement. At the end of 14 days she returned.

"I start work to-morrow," she announced. "I never dreamed shorthand could be so simple and easy. I can take dictation faster than I'll ever be called upon to take it."

CORNS

Instant Relief Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads stop all pain quicker than any other known method. Takes but a minute to quiet the worst corn. Healing starts at once. When the corn is gone it never comes back. If new shoes make the spot "touchy" again, a Zino-pad stops it instantly. That's because Zino-pads remove the cause—pressing and rubbing of shoes.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are medicated, antiseptic, protective. At all druggists and shoe dealers'—35c.

Put one on—the pain is gone!

CURSE O' LOVE

A Story of Love and its Test By MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 53 LOVE-HUNGRY.

There was no doubt that Ada had fallen in love with Major Harcourt. She admitted it to herself, though she believed that she hid it successfully from others. But she was quite without subtlety, and Norma found her quite transparent on this all-important subject.

Norma was mildly amused and more than a little anxious. She herself had not found that love brought happiness, and she feared greatly for the pleasant little widow who was so eager for a real romance before old age claimed her.

"I do hope the man's not a cad," she thought, as she lay on her chaise longue in the sunlight, with the sea murmuring below her windows. "I'd hate so for her to be hurt."

Ada's entire conversation centered around Harcourt. She quoted him, referred proudly to her engagements with him, was flushed and eager and anxious when she was preparing to lunch or dine or drive with him.

Once, when a great sheaf of roses arrived without a card, Ada was in the seventh heaven of delight. She was sure they were a gift from Harcourt. Norma hadn't the heart to disillusion her, although she had just received a letter from her father saying, among other things: "I ordered some flowers yesterday for your little Mrs. Lind and I plumb forgot saying who they were from. You might just tell her your old Dad sent 'em. I'm coming down next Sunday to see you, and I'd like to stand in well with her."

Norma's pretty brows drew together as she read. Ada was the first woman to whom her father had paid attention since her mother's death. "Was there any significance in the gift of flowers, or was it just her father's effort to show courtesy to one who had been very kind to his daughter in her illness?"

"It's not like Daddy to go about it so conventionally," thought Norma indignantly. "He'd be much more likely to commit the blunder of offering her a cheque."

To Ada, she said—not wanting to spoil the ecstatic moment: "I wouldn't mention the flowers to Major Harcourt, if I were you. Since he didn't enclose a card, he probably wants the gift to appear anonymous. It's much more romantic, don't you think?"

Ada did think so. She fairly thrilled with the sentiment of such
