"Many a motor trip is just a bus ride."

He: How can I square myself for trying to kiss you last night?
She: By actually kissing me now.

"Is she really as bad as she's painted?"
"Gosh! Y' don't call that a bad painting job, do you?"

"Did you say she couldn't stand his weak chin?"
"No—his weak gin."

...Peevish, pale, restless and sickly children owe their condition to worms. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will relieve them and restore health.

It was a very quiet Solange who ordered the arranging of her father's room, saw him comfortably in bed and turned to wait for Dr. Schofield's orders.

"I have sent for a nurse," he said to her. "and I'll stay here until she comes. There's very little we can do. He will be conscious soon, I have given him a strong stimulant. I advise you to remain with him constantly. He may have only a few moments of actually recognizing the world around him."

"I will do as you say, Dr. Schofield."
She was stunned with grief. All her senses were centered on the white face lying before her on the pillow. Every other consideration was blotted from her mind. He must waken, must talk with her. She knew that he would not live, departure was written too plainly on his face.

Dr. Schofield gave her a glass of blackish liquid. "Drink this, So-so." She drank obediently, unquestioningly, her eyes still fixed on her father's face. When the nurse came So-so moved a little to one side of the bed but did not relax her vigil.

"Darkness had fallen when Mr. Harper opened his eyes. He smiled feebly at So-so. "Closer, Solange." She bent over him.

"I know—" the words came haltingly and with an effort, "I know that I'm leaving you. The house you know is yours, and all my papers. Ask Fred or Jerry to look at them. Maybe they can see the error in my plans—perfect my invention so you can benefit by it. It's all I have to give you, Solange."

She kissed him gently. "I know father. Don't worry about me, I will be all right."
"Remember your mother Solange—remember—" his voice died away and for an hour he lay sleeping. When he woke again it was without recognition of Solange as his daughter. To him she was his beautiful Norse wife, alive and well once more. He babbled to her of his invention, of the fortune it would make for them, then drifted off to sleep once more and did not wake.

Solange sat dry-eyed by her window that night. No thought of the future troubled her then. She was absorbed in memories. Her mother had died when she was a baby, so her earliest recollections were of her father's care and tenderness. He had taught her to read before she started to school. He had been friend and companion and her father all in one. She had been 16 when she first came to Mineola and had worked with him in the Crownest, giving up her last year of high school to do this. In late years his invention had absorbed him more and more and he had clung to So-so's faith in it.

With the morning So-so's friends rallied round her. Gloria and Francine stopped in to say they would run the Crownest until she was ready to decide what she would do with it. Jerry and Fred came with an offer of their services. Constance came with a great load of flowers from the Terry conservatory. Others from the flying field came in to offer their sympathy and help.

Two days later So-so returned alone to the cottage. Airplanes had circled the cemetery where her father was laid to rest. Around her had stood many whose faces were scarcely familiar to her but who wished to show their respect for the girl and her father. Surrounding her grief and loneliness was gratitude for all the loyalty that had manifested itself in these difficult days.

Now she must decide about the future. The nurse had remained in the house and would stay for several days until So-so could make her plans. After supper So-so went to her room to think.

Should she leave the flying field and go to the city to earn her living? She was poorly equipped for anything other than the lunchroom. She might become a woman pilot, but So-so knew how few women can really succeed at that arduous task. The nurse came up to say that Fred was sitting in the living room.

So-so went down. She smiled wanly at him and Fred felt pity grip his heart at her pale face.

"I've got to go off with Jerry tomorrow morning, So-so—work on the South American flight, you know, and I may be gone a week or so. I couldn't leave without seeing you. Jerry and Connie sent their love."
"It's good of you, Fred. I've been wondering what would be the best thing for me to do now—now that I'm alone."
Fred took her hands. "Let me take care of you, So-so."
She shook her head. "I can't, Fred. I've just got to decide whether to sell the Crownest and the house and go into the city to live, or to stay here and carry on."
"Sell the Crownest? Go to the city? Oh, So-so."
"I can't bear the idea of leaving. Fred, and yet—"

Why it wouldn't be the same place here without you."
"You and Jerry are leaving soon, and you'll be too famous and busy after your flight to spend much time here. Father's gone, Jerry's going to be married soon, the old crowd's breaking up—new students in the school."
"I know; but—but—"

Fred's consternation was apparent in his face. He had never considered the possibility of So-so's going away. If only she would marry him! It seemed the solution of all her problems.

He began again "You know, So-so how much I love you, how much I have loved you for years. I know you don't love me now, but you might, learn to. I'd never ask for more than you could give. I want to take care of you, So-so. Let me do it. I'll promise you, that if you ever want your freedom it will be yours—I know you're overwrought and nervous tonight—perhaps, I ought not to plead with you this way, but I do so want the right to try to make you happy."

So-so pressed his hand. "I know, Fred, everything you say is good and kind, but I can't marry you now and I can't see that I'm ever going to change. It wouldn't be fair to you for me to marry you. I probably won't leave the field. My whole life has centered here too long. I'll probably stay right here and go on running the Crownest—long after you and Jerry and Constance have gone somewhere else."

"I'll never go while you are here," Fred said, as though he were making the most solemn of pledges.

His devotion and sincerity moved So-so to the first tears she had shed. Fred took her in his arms and held her as one would hold a hurt child, letting her sob against his shoulder, patting the soft golden hair, hushing her, and finally carrying her to her room, where she clung to him a moment and kissed his cheek.

"Good night, So-so, dearest. I have to go now—you'll be better in the morning."
"I know, Fred. You are so good to me—"

He kissed her gently and tiptoed out of the room. In a few minutes So-so was sound asleep.

In the morning she woke to a gray, rainy day. She shivered and pulled the blankets closer. Staring at the ceiling she thought once more of her plans. She was still considering them when Constance came up to see her.

"I've come to take you away with me," Constance announced. "Now, it won't do you any good to say no. Gloria and Francine are having the time of their lives in the Crownest. Fred and Jerry have gone off to get their plane going for the South

PURITY FLOUR

For Better Pies and Cakes

Facts and recipes to prove that PURITY is "Best for All Your Baking"

"In making cakes," say baking authorities:

"You must bear in mind that Purity is a strong rich flour with great expanding qualities. If your cake recipe calls for ordinary pastry flour, use 1 tablespoon less per cup of Purity Flour, and if milk is called for use half milk and half water (luke-warm), and your cake will stay moist longer."

Purity Flour gives extra richness and flavour to cakes—they keep fresh and moist for days when made with this famous flour.

"In baking pies," say baking experts:

"You will get pastry that melts in your mouth if you use Purity Flour in the right way. For instance, here is an economical, tested recipe for pie crust that is very successful: 2 1/2 cups Purity Flour, 1 cup lard, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup cold water. (This makes enough for two pies). For extra rich pastry, use half butter and half lard."

Mix the flour and salt, cutting in the shortening until the mixture is like fine meal, gradually adding the extra quantity of water—but not a drop more—and roll out thin. Remember, a dough heavy with water will not flake up in the oven as too much moisture prevents quick action of the heat.

TRY SOME OF OUR TESTED RECIPES FOR DELIGHTFUL BAKING

5 Real Advantages of PURITY FLOUR

ECONOMY
When making cakes and pastry less of Purity is needed than of ordinary pastry flour.

APPETIZING FLAVOR
The selected hard spring wheat grown on the prairies of the Canadian West gives to Purity Flour a really wonderful flavor.

EXTRA NOURISHMENT
The rich protein content of hard spring wheat gives additional food value to Purity Flour baking.

SUCCESSFUL BAKING
You will be justly proud of your baking when you use Purity Flour. Our milling and baking tests ensure uniform results.

ALL-PURPOSE VALUE
While Purity is still the best flour for bread, it is winning additional praise from Canadian women who are using it for all their baking.

PURITY FLOUR BUTTER TARTS

Make pastry according to directions for Purity Flour pie crust as given above. Cut and line tins and use the following filling:

2 eggs
2 cups brown sugar
2 cups raisins
2 tablespoons cold water
1/2 teaspoon melted butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix all together, put into shells and bake in a hot oven. This recipe makes three dozen tarts.

"PURITY" ICE BOX COOKIES—NEW!

1 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
3 1/2 cups Purity Flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
flavoring
1 cup nuts and raisins chopped (optional)

Make the dough in a roll and keep it overnight in the ice box or a cool place... next day you can slice it readily for baking, without extra flour to keep it from sticking.

SPICED "PURITY" LAYER CAKE

2 cups brown sugar, cream with 1/2 cup of butter, add 2 beaten eggs, stir in 1 cup sour milk, add 1 teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger and 1/2 nutmeg, and 2 cups of Purity Flour. Dissolve 1 teaspoon of soda in 1/4 cup of boiling water. Add last to cake mixture and bake in layers, using date filling.

"PURITY" 5-HOUR DINNER ROLLS

1 1/2 cups tepid milk
1/2 cup tepid water
1 compressed yeast cake
1 tablespoon sugar
3 cups Purity Flour

1 tablespoon each of lard and butter
1 egg
3 cups Purity Flour

Dissolve yeast in the water, add to milk with the salt, then beat in 2 1/2 cups flour. When light, in about an hour, add the sugar, the shortening (melted), the egg and balance of flour to knead, shape into dinner rolls and let rise to double in bulk and bake in moderate oven (375°).

DAINTY SWISS ROLL

4 medium sized eggs
1/4 cup white sugar
1 cup Purity Flour

1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

Mix in the order given, sifting the last three items in together. Beat well and bake in large dripping tin. Have ready three-quarters of a cup of jam (warmed) and a warm towel with sugar scattered over it. Turn the cake on to the towel, spread with jam, roll quickly and keep in towel until cool. Home-made lemon curd or any jelly can be used for filling.

PRIZE WINNING "PURITY" TEA BISCUITS

4 cups Purity Flour
3 heaping teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk

1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon shortening

Sift well the flour, salt and baking powder, then add butter and shortening, mixing thoroughly. Then add enough milk to make a soft dough, mixing first with a knife and finish with the hands on board. Roll out and cut in cakes 1 inch thick. Bake in a fairly hot oven from 12 to 15 minutes.

A little white sugar may be added to flour mixture if desired—about one tablespoon. When taken from oven place in a cool spot.

American flight and won't be back for two weeks. You and I are going out to Terrymore and rest and invite our souls."

"I'd like to go—," So-so hesitated, "but things are so uncertain here. I haven't made any plans, you see."
"Make them at Terrymore."
"I think I'm going to go right on running the Crownest—but I would like a week to think it over. Gloria and Francine can have the profits while I'm away. Yes, I think I'll go."

"Good girl. I've got the car here. You get ready and we'll go right along. I hope you carry on with the Crownest, So-so, and if you do I've got a plan about that, too. We've got an old colored woman who's been with us so long she's a nuisance. She was my nurse when I was a little girl and she simply adores mothering some one. You bring her over here to stay with you and I'm going to give you Wolfgang for a guardian. Then you won't be so lonely and you won't have to work so hard with Chloe in the house to look after you."

So-so knew it was no use protesting. Constance was too accustomed to having her own way. For a fleeting moment So-so wondered what would happen when Constance's will and Jerry's well-known stubbornness clashed.

The moment passed and she made ready to accompany Constance.
