Labor Gov't Seeks To Drive Home Vital Data

New York Exchange

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP) — A series of fortnightly "three minute reports to the nation," published as two-column advertisements in daily newspapers, is the Labor Government's latest effort to drive home the facts of Britain's economic crisis. Each takes a different phase of the country's post-war problem and puts it into the simplest possible form so every reader can understand.

No. 1 dealt with the "balance of payments" — the adverse trading position which means that Britain has been overspending £200,000,000 ($800,000,000) in three months.

"Every family has been consuming goods that have not been paid for by the nation's production and its exports," said the advertisement. "Every family must go shorter for a time. Only we ourselves can answer. The more we produce, the more we have for ourselves."

Ten per cent more national production will turn the tide and bring the beginning of the end of austerity.

No. 2 asked why supplies for the home market had been diverted to export, why overseas purchases of food, tobacco and other goods had been reduced, and why capital expenditures on new buildings and machinery were being cut ($200,000,000).

"To get Britain out of debt? Quite true, but not the whole story. We are asked to make effort and sacrifice to buy time to build up our strength."

"Time to add millions of tons a year to our coal output by new methods and new machinery. Time to expand our steel industry. Time to grow more food at home. Time to develop the great resources of the colonies for our mutual benefit. Time for the war-stricken countries to recover and make their contribution to the world's wealth."

No. 3, the latest published, describes "one way to wreck the export drive" — by wasting electricity and using too much at peak periods.

It isn't a matter of not enough coal, but of not enough power-houses. We stopped building them during the war. But demand from factories raced up; So did demand from houses and shops, now double 1938.

SEEDS FOR SOLVENCY

(CP) — When financial problems this spring beset the local tennis and badminton club in this northeastern Saskatchewan town, members contributed enough money for a three-year lease on 240 acres and planted rape-seed. The club cleared $1,300 this summer.
