THE PRINCE

Princess which are an important part of this kind of celebration, were taking a terrific din. Prince contributes to the din. The white shirt fronts of the visitors gave them away. The Prince was recognized immediately. They heard him. He seized a pair of rumsticks, belaboured one of the great drums and added to the din. For half an hour or so he stayed downtown, then sauntered back to the Castle with the crowd at his heels. The guests at the party were crowded around the gate. The Prince was boosted to the top of the wall for a speech. "My sister told me about the rummers over here," he said, "and I wanted to see them."

The Beauty Of Courage in Living

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Together with the notice of her death, the Mail and Empire carried on the front page Nina Moore Jamieson's last contribution, "Finis." After telling how she came to write of farm life, she continued in part as follows:

"It was the beginning of a series of delights. I had enjoyed many phases of farm life—now I had a chance to pass them on. I determined to give only the wholesome pictures, the happy hours, the gentle kindnesses of rural life. So often I had been moved to futile rage over the way of the world and ignorance had been played up in stories of farm life, that I deliberately sought for evidence of other characteristics. Perhaps that explains some of my pleasure in the work—I was seeking beauty; and, of course, I found it.

"What a simple, easy work it was. Just opening the door for a glimpse of cows pasturing pleasantly on the green hill; children laughing in the orchard; threshing machine coming down the lane; lone, some little English boy playing his mouth organ softly in the dusk; old white Jackie, the goat, cornered by the geese; Christmas on the old farm; life, death, partings and meetings, furrows and young clover; stubble and Indian summer—

"You've heard about the depression? I never even noticed it when it came. I had been in the grip of my own private depression for some time.

"It began with my mother's death—the gallant comrade who had always been able to twinkle, to whistle my courage up, to understand and sympathize without need of words—ah, but she turned back on the very brink of the river to leave me one last message from her beautiful eyes, when she could no longer speak. 'Have courage. Everything will be all right.'

"I needed that in the days that followed. When my health went, in such a way that whatever time remained to me would be only a toiling struggle; when suddenly a line of work I had greatly prized was taken from me without warning or explanation; when I realized finally in sickness of mind and body, that we would have to give up the farm—I needed courage and faith, then, and the touch of the vanished hand.

"People occasionally wrote or said to me—'We miss the humor that used to show in your work.' Where are the gay whimsical touches?' I wonder.

"Dogg—'that's the word for whatever I did in those days. But presently I managed to get on the top of things again and find that even a twisted grin is better than no grin at all. Doors opened here and there, and little opportunities beckoned. Suddenly life was no longer bleak—it was crowded, absorbing, full of stories demanding to be written.

"I've always felt the closing of a story to be the best part. I like to be triumphant, happy, natural.

So with my own story. It will soon be time to write finis to the last chapter and close the book with a happy sigh.

"In spite of the pain and weakness and acceptance of the inevitable, I'm more truly happy than I've been for years. Happy away down deep. So what better place could there be to write it? None, better, surely.

Finis.

"The Boys" Getting Impatient For Their Beer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Chairman James W. Collier, Mississippi Democrat, was asked today to have his ways and means committee get a bill to legalize beer ready for presentation to the United States House of Representatives when it convenes next month.

This suggestion was offered by Representative John J. O'Connor, Democrat from New York, in the interest of increasing the possibility of such action at the coming session.

The New Yorker, leader of the Democratic wet bloc in the House, made the same proposal to Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, party floor leader who said he would talk with members here and probably write a few of the absentees in deciding whether to undertake hearings.

O'Connor said "The public is impatient," that "it will protest delay" on legalizing beer and that hearings would take but a few days.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Among the outstanding social events of this week was the golden wedding celebration on Wednesday, Nov. 16th of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus W. Crosby, formerly of Bonshaw, now residing with their daughter, Mrs. Brent Matthew, Souris.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosby received their guests in the living room, decorated for the occasion with beautiful golden mums—the "bride's" gift from loving friends. Promptly at one o'clock to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Doris MacDonald, the guests, led by the bride and groom of fifty years ago, proceeded to the dining-room to partake of the wedding dinner.

Out of town dinner guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. G. Abner Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Health E. Crosby, Bonshaw; Mr. and Mrs. Lawson E. Crosby, Cornwall; Mrs. F. R. Heartz, Mrs. J. C. Houston and Miss Ruth Heartz, Charlottetown. Before leaving the table Senator McLean in his usual happy and pleasing manner proposed the health of the "bride and groom" and presented the good wishes of those present. Mr. Crosby responded suitably, expressing the delight felt by Mrs. Crosby and himself in such a gathering of relatives and friends, and referred to the fact that Senator and Mrs. MacLean were nearing the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage and enjoying excellent health.

In the afternoon and evening friends from Bonshaw and many others took advantage of the golden sunshine of the beautiful November day to call and congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, who again received in the living room with their daughter, Mrs. Matthew. The callers were ushered to the drawing room by Mrs. Harold G. Matthew where tea was poured by Mrs. F. S. Macdonald, assisted by Miss Elizabeth MacDonald and Miss Jean McLean.

During the afternoon two old favorite songs, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," and "When You and I were Young Maggie," were beautifully rendered by Miss Gertrude Sterns.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosby were remembered by many relatives and friends with appropriate gifts and also received many good wishes from absent friends, particularly those in Seattle where they lived for three years with their son Ernest, the only member of their family not present on this happy occasion.

SOUTH BEDEQUE INSTITUTE

The annual meeting of the South Bedeque Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Holland, Lower Bedeque. The meeting opened by singing O Canada, followed by roll call, which was responded to by eighteen members. There were three visitors present. The minutes of the October meeting were read and adopted. It was moved and seconded that all necessary articles be purchased for the school. The Fernwood members decided to donate $5.00 to the Protestant Orphanage, while the Lower Bedeque members decided to make a house to house collection.

The retiring president, Mrs. Forbes, then gave a brief report of the year's work, which was followed by the Secretary's report. A vote of thanks was then tendered to Mrs. Forbes, to which she replied very fittingly.

The election of officers then took place, with the following results: President, Mrs. Harrison McFarlane; Vice President, Mrs. Wm. Montgomery; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. Chas. Henderson.

Dies Suddenly A Summerside

The death occurred quite suddenly last night at the Prince County Hospital of Mr. Charles Howatt, of Summerside. About five o'clock he called at Dr. Tanton's office and complained of not feeling well. Upon an examination the doctor found he was suffering from acute heart trouble and took him to the hospital where he passed away at 7.30.

He was a native of Tryon, but had resided in the States for many years. At intervals he returned to his native province and had been in business in Summerside a few years ago. He arrived last February from California to take up his residence in Summerside again. He opened up a real estate office, which business he was attending to at the time of his death. He was of a kindly disposition and had many friends who will regret to hear of his sudden demise. He leaves to mourn one daughter, Mrs. Webster of Los Angeles, Calif. Funeral arrangements will be made later. S.

FEATURE PEDIGREED POULTRY

A feature of outstanding interest at the forthcoming Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, particularly to the poultry men of Canada, will be the exhibit of registered birds presented by the Canadian National Poultry Record Association. The display will feature the more important birds of production poultry, such as the Barred and White Plymouth Rocks, White Leghorns, White Wyandottes and Rhode Island Red, and the display itself will be made up largely of Registered cockerels, birds suitable for the heading of farmers' breeding flocks to improve both production and egg size.

A short program was then presented, which consisted of a reading by Mrs. Harrison McFarlane, solo by Miss Winifred Wright, dialogue by Mrs. Arthur McFarlane, Mrs. Horace Wright, Miss Marjorie McCallum and Miss Winifred Wright. Duet by Mrs. Geo Henderson and Mrs. Walter Leard.

Old Mill Scene Recalls Ballad

DUCKTOWN, Tenn., Nov. 16.—(By The Canadian Press)—The creaking old mill, inspiration of an old time ballad, has been stilled a long time, but travellers who wander to the hill looking for the old site made famous by the love song can find it easily now.

There is a marker that tells all about the mill, Maggie, the miller, and the man who married Maggie and wrote a tender piece about her. The poem later became a song, "When You and I were Young, Maggie," and it made Maggie just about as well known as Adeline, whose "Fair face beams" in another popular number.

A woman's patriotic organization has marked the place where George W. Johnson met, wooed, and married Maggie Harris. The old mill still stands.

Tennessee historians say Johnson was a rambler, hunter of gold, who heard strange tales from the Indians about wealth in the mountains of east Tennessee. That was early in the eighteenth century. Johnson set out from his home near the mouth of the Hiwassee river and paddled far upstream. One day he heard the creak of the mill and strode toward it. There he found Maggie, young and pretty. He forgot about the gold and married the girl who accompanied him back down the river.

They returned to the old mill when both were aged and gray. The scene of his romance touched Johnson so he wrote a little piece about it.

His poem was later discovered and put to music by J. A. Butterfield.

WHAT THEY WISHED THEY HAD KNOWN BEFORE TWENTY-ONE

Recently three leading men spoke at a meeting on the subject "Things I Wish I had Known Before I was Twenty-one." Here they are. Every word is worth reading. I wish I had known—

What I was going to do for a living—what my life work would be.

That my health after thirty depended in a large degree on what I put into my stomach before I was twenty-one.

How to take care of my money. The commercial asset of being neatly and sensibly dressed.

That a man's habits are mighty hard to change after he is twenty-one.

That things worth while require time, patience and work.

That you can't get something for nothing.

That the world would give me just about what I deserved.

St. Lawrence Port To Close Soon

(Special to The Guardian) MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 18.—The largest shipment of canned salmon ever to arrive at this port by water is now being unloaded from the Canadian National Freighter "Canadian Winner," which arrived from Vancouver via the Panama Canal with some 56,000 cases of British Columbia salmon. In addition the "Canadian Winner" brought a heavy shipment of lumber from British Columbia ports. She leaves again next Tuesday for British Columbia with a return cargo of manufactured goods.

The Canadian National freighter "Canadian Cruiser" from New Zealand via the Panama Canal is also unloading cargo here. She sails again on Nov. 25th, for Antipodean ports and will carry a large cargo, the result of increased trade between Canada and the Empire in the Antipodes.

Both vessels called at Panama Canal ports to load Canadian bound cargo trans-shipped from steamship lines operating in Latin American waters in accordance with an agreement recently consummated. With the sailing of the "Canadian Cruiser" from this port on Nov. 22nd and 25th respectively they will bid adieu to the St. Lawrence for the season and on their next voyage to Eastern Canada will make use of Maritime Provinces ports until the opening of the 1933 season of navigation on the St. Lawrence.
