The Girl Who Had No Chance

MY MARION RUBINCAM

REALIZATION

Chapter 114

Next morning she looked through her mail eagerly.

There was no letter, there was no telegram.

She began counting the hours—the message was sent at 10, he must have received it at midnight—she sent the regular telegram form. Perhaps it was not delivered until morning.

And she stayed there contentedly. But after a time she looked up, her eyes bright with a question.

"But how did you get here? The train arrived in the morning!"

"You forget the other line that runs to Philadelphia. I know it's slow, but I got a morning train—one hour after your message came. I don't mind telling you that you woke me up at five this morning, little lady. I got a milk 'rain, and the always delightful Newell, she kept wondering whether word had arrived at her apartment.

Piles are usually due to straining when constipated. Nujol being a lubricant keeps the food waste soft and therefore prevents straining.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

FOR SALE

For sale at a bargain, fifty acres of choice land, with new dwelling house and good outbuildings, situated at Vernon River, a quarter mile from station. Sale positive as I am going with my family to United States.

WM. TOBIN, Vernon River, 11661963-23-1f

She refused to stay to dinner and went back to her hotel. At the desk they said no telegram had been received. She went up to her rooms, her heart sinking. Perhaps Langley did not care so much after all!

At 7 Marie came to see whether she wanted dinner served in the living room or whether she would go downstairs. Then the bell sounded, and Ruth herself went to open it.

On the threshold stood Langley Williams.

Ruth never knew what happened to Marie. Probably that tactful little French girl withdrew smiling at the little scene she had witnessed.

For Langley crossed the threshold with one stride, and Ruth was in his arms.

And she stayed there contentedly. But after a time she looked up, her eyes bright with a question.

"But how did you get here? The train arrived in the morning!"

"You forget the other line that runs to Philadelphia. I know it's slow, but I got a morning train—one hour after your message came. I don't mind telling you that you woke me up at five this morning, little lady. I got a milk 'rain, and the always delightful Newell, she kept wondering whether word had arrived at her apartment.

"And you haven't had any lunch?"

"No breakfast," Langley said cheerfully. "I spent the time in Philadelphia sending wires home about the work I dropped, and trying to reach you by long distance phone."

"I've been out," Ruth answered. "You poor boy, you must be starved!"

"It ought to be a proof of my love—starving all day to reach you."

She looked up into his gray eyes, smiling merrily now. How could she ever have thought eyes of any other color attractive? And the long thick yellow hair that was thrown back from his forehead was so becoming.

Suddenly Ruth put her arms around his neck.

"Please kiss me again," she begged. "I'm so glad you've come! I like to have you kiss me."

After a time Langley began to laugh.

"Do you know, dearest, I expected that telegram—only I expected it a little sooner. Don't you see, we both outgrew the old, loves, they only made us ready for this—the real love. Only we both happen to be very romantic, and we neither of us could see that the first love was dead—dead and forever buried. Ruth, do you really love me now?"

Ruth nodded her head. Her blue eyes lit up with the soft glow that only love can bring.

"I love you," she answered, "now war which took Langley away for two years, and brought him back with a wound stripe on his right arm—the war which made Ruth do his work and hers too, as she lived with only her servants in the house on the hill.

But the present was all happiness and for that matter most of the future was too. For these two were friends and comrades as well as lovers.

Baseball Star Sued for Divorce

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 14.—Mrs. Sarah E. Hornsby, wife of Roger Hornsby, second baseman for the St. Louis Nationals, yesterday filed suit for divorce, charging general indignities. The ball player entertained a general denial of the charges.

In her urson Mr. Hornsby declared that she married the champion batsman of the National League on September 28, 1918, and separated from him December 27, 1922. She has been residing with her mother in Los Angeles since the separation.

Upon her arrival here recently, Mrs. Hornsby said she separated from her husband after she had "learned what was going on," intimating that the suit for divorce would be associated with a hearing on the divorce case of Mrs. Jeanette Pennington Hine, 23 years old, a sales woman.

Hornsby's name was mentioned as the author of a love letter to Mrs. Hine in an action brought by the latter's husband.

RUMOR PRINCE IS KILLED MARS HAMILTON'S SUNDAY

HAMILTON, June 14.—Some hair-brained joker was responsible for the spread of the rumor Sunday that the Prince of Wales had been accidentally killed. Newspaper offices were deluged with inquiries as to the accuracy of the report. Enquiries made through the Canadian Press revealed that the rumor was baseless, and an announcement to this effect was made in some of the churches Sunday.
