Slips in Oratory

Even the most factious speakers are guilty of unparadigmatic errors in their oratory. Mr. Arthur Balfour on one occasion spoke of "an empty theatre of unsympathetic auditors," and Lord Curzon of Kedleston remarked that "though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Mr. Asquith once stated that "redistribution is a thorny subject which requires delicate handling, or it will tread on some people's toes."

Mr. St. John Brodric, when a member of the House of Commons, told that assembly that "among the many jarring notes heard in the House on military affairs this subject (mobilization) at least must be regarded as an oasis."

In a debate on the London Education Bill Mr. Walter Long said, "We are told that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

The late General Redvers Buller, desiring to convey that there was little to be gained by so-called Army Reform, declared that "the Army is honeycombed with cliques and classes by favor in this web of axe-grinders."

Likes Canada Best

Rev. Father Lebeau, of the Archbishop's palace, Ottawa, returned from a tour of France, England, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt and the Holy Land and made this statement: "After visiting all the European countries and the Eastern ones, too, I find that I never appreciated Canada so greatly. There is a spirit of liberty here which I found in no other country I was in. There the rich are rich and the poor helplessly poor. Here in Canada we know how to enjoy life as they do not."

Strength of Concrete

A concrete motion picture theater recently built in England is 80 feet long by 46 feet wide and 18 feet high, yet the walls are only two inches thick.

Known Centuries Ago

Asphalt was known to the ancients and is said to have been used as a binder in masonry by the Babylonians.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and burn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

WARBLER'S ON CATTLE

May be Exterminated by Systematic Effort and Much Patience

One of the very harmful insect pests of live stock is the ox warbler fly. The grubs in the backs of cattle are a source of irritation, and the punctures which they produce seriously reduce the value of infested hides for leather products. The flesh around the wound is sometimes so changed by the inflammation set up by the grubs that it is unfit for sale and must be discarded. This causes substantial loss, especially as the more valuable cuts are most frequently affected.

The adult ox warbler fly is half an inch long, very hairy and dark in color. During the summer the female deposits eggs upon the hairs of cattle, particularly on the legs just above the hoofs. The animal licks the hairs where these eggs are placed, and the larvae hatched from them are carried by the tongue into the mouth. The young maggots pass into the gullet and penetrate its walls. From the gullet they migrate to the back, where they may be found under the hide during the late winter and early spring months. Small lumps or swellings on the backs of cattle indicate the position of the grubs. Each swelling is perforated by a small hole, through which the mature grub emerges from the warbler cell in the spring and early summer. They then enter the pupal stage. In the ground or under rubbish, in from three to six weeks the adult fly escapes from the pupal case through a circular opening in one end.

Every farmer should make a thorough and systematic attempt to exterminate this pest. This may be accomplished by the destruction of all grubs during the early spring months. The grubs when ripe may be extracted by squeezing the warbles between the thumbs. All extracted grubs should be destroyed. This will reduce the number of adult flies, consequently fewer eggs will be laid to produce grubs the next season.

TRACES HIS ANCESTORS SEVERAL GENERATIONS

A Canadian Seaman Relates His Experiences During an Adventurous Career

Captain W. Wilbur, a native of New Brunswick, and an owner of tugboats in Vancouver, traces his Canadian ancestry back for five or six generations.

Born in Albert county, New Brunswick, Captain Wilbur was only fourteen when he took service as a boy aboard a coasting vessel at $3 a month. In the course of the years which followed, young Wilbur held every position on board ship from cook to commander. At the early age of 22 Captain Wilbur was given his first command, and with this cargo he voyaged to the French port Havre. During the years that followed, he commanded bigger vessels and he knows all the notable English ports intimately, as well as some of the inland towns. He brought to St. Stephen, New Brunswick, for the Grand Southern Railroad.

One experience, he said, "I had about four miles from where the Titanic sank may interest you. Just there we ran into the iceberg zone one night shortly before dark. There was a thick fog, a light wind and slight rollers. We shortened the ship down to lower topalls and foresails. I stood on the topgallant to castle all night and the roaring of the icebergs filled the air all the time. The sea sort of rolled.

We just wiggled on all night. I had all our boats along out ready to take to them any moment, and my wife and kids fully dressed and with everything packed. We expected to take to the boats any moment, but we weathered the night and early next day the fog cleared. As far as the eye could reach there were icebergs everywhere, some as large as good sized islands and others higher than the ship's masts. So strong was the suction from some of the icebergs that the ship would turn right round. There was a long narrow lane of water through the ice in one direction, so we got out the bows and pulled the ship into the lane, set sail and eventually got out safely."
