

When You Think Of Drugs Think Of Us

It is always flattering to a store to have many regular customers. People who come repeatedly must have confidence.

A large percentage of our business comes from regular customers who trade here year in and year out. They know our methods are right and that they will be treated as we would like to be were we the buyer instead of seller. Why not make this your regular trading place for drugs and medicines.

CUT DOWN ELM TREE STANDING 720 YEARS.

NEW YORK. Feb. 29.—An elm tree that was a sapling when Columbus discovered America and which for more than 720 years has stood near the site of historic Fort Ticonderoga, New York, has just been cut down by Thomas C. Luther, a prominent lumberman of Northern New York. Expert lumbermen estimate that 5,000 board feet of lumber will be gotten out of the tree.

The trunk of the tree measures 68 feet to the limbs and is inches in circumference at the base. The top measures 27 inches. The tree was sound and without a blemish on its surface. Its age is indicated by its rings.

Owing to the fact that ordinary sawmills cannot manufacture it into commercial lumber, Mr. Luther is now making special arrangements for the handling of this tree.

LATEST IDEA IN CHURCH BUILDING.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Feb. 29.—Work will begin in the early spring on the construction of the first "anti-tuberculosis church." The new style of edifice is to have the "dim, religious atmosphere," but it is to be nearly all windows and according to the Rev. Martin H. Garrard, the pastor, these windows will be open most of the time.

The new idea in church building is the result of the campaign being waged in Michigan against the white plague.

TALES TOLD BY MEN

ON THE FIRING LINES ON LAND AND SEA

NOVEMBER IN AN OFFICER'S DUG-OUT.

"Three steps down from the trench" writes a Montreal officer, in describing his dug-out, "a small door, to get through which one has to crouch double, taking care that one's head does not attempt to break the cross-piece at the top of the door. Then you are inside on a raised wooden floor, recently raised on account of two inches of water appearing after the heavy rains.

"The dug-out is probably about 6 feet by 12 feet, the walls are sandbags filled with earth and clay and packed tightly together. Great care has to be exercised in the packing of sandbags, as they have a nasty habit of budging and tumbling in during wet weather. They must, in fact, be placed as carefully as bricks in a wall. The sandbag walls being somewhat crude are covered with what one might call trench tapestry, consisting of sacking tacked all around for wall paper.

"At the base of this innumerable mats have their ends and produce very large families. I think our mice are of a particular breed—I should call them singing mice, for in the small hours they can be heard squeaking and singing. It is what I call positively rude of them, because whilst one's eyes are yet heavy and the brain fogged, one expects to find a gentle breeze blowing the curtains of the open window, and the sun streaming in and the birds fluttering from tree to tree. As a matter of fact, one finds oneself lying on a bed of boards raised from the ground at one end with a couple of full sandbags. Then you wonder if your legs end just above the knees; the cold is so raw, and the noise of the lying portions of your anatomy to such an extent you wonder if they are still there. Then one finds a cold draught blowing from the door, to wit, a piece of sacking. A raw November morning the mud outside just ankle deep, and grey as it is steaming and halitones are gaily jumping around."

Strong Men Weep

"It is grim work out here," writes Regimental Sergt-Major Roy Edwards of the 26th (New Brunswick) Battalion. "In the five months that I have been in the front I have seen awful things. I have seen sights bad enough to make strong men weep, but here men soon become philosophers and fatalists if you will. We quickly harden to our work. These awful things that we see become, as it were, a part of our day's routine, and as we go about our duties never knowing who among us will next be called by the steel messengers of death, but the soldier searching our trenches for victims, each one of us is happy in the knowledge that the bullet bearing his number has not yet come this way.

"My regiment has been pretty hard hit. Our total losses have been heavy, and today many of our boys who came here full of life and ambition five months ago are sleeping in the graveyard just outside of our lines; but the 26th is right on the job that has been given us to do, and whatever of us of the original regiment may be missing, the old regiment will be on deck when peace is declared and victory has come to the old flag."

A Vision of Home

One of the Emigration Office staff writes: "We are at present still in action. We get a daily display of German shells, and only today they dropped a few close by us. We got a few of the splinters over us. The aeroplanes of both sides are very active just now, and we get numerous air duels, and I can tell you it is exciting at times.

"As far as I can tell (Huns permitting) I may stand a chance of being home at the end of February; and as for sleeping in a bed with sheets, and having meals on a table with a white tablecloth, I can hardly realize it. After the war you will find some of us digging dug-outs in the garden, and at meal-times we will be on the alert for the order, "Battery action," as it is the Huns' favourite time to annoy us."

FESTUBERT, AN AWFUL SIGHT

A former member of the Canadian Emigration staff in London writes to Lieut.-Col. J. Obed Smith: "It is just luck if one gets it or not, and difficulty is one cannot see at all, and if you show a light or light a cigar for a hole dug at night just anywhere, Festubert is an awful sight; and is still shelled at intervals from the Canadian front line. I picked up several Canadian rifles here, and a French peasant, who guided me riding one night, told me how the Canadians had fought there. I had three horses and two mules shot and given him shot next to me—had just given him some tobacco, and he had lit my pipe, and then groaned and fell right against me, as I was quieting my horse, shot."

LOVE OF BRITAINS

I saw him in a picture and I felt I'd like to cry.
He stood in line,
The man "for mine,"
A tall silk-hatted "guy"
Right on the call,
Silk hat and all,
He'd hurried to the cry—
For he loves Britain well enough for Britain to die.

A TALK WITH THE GERMANS

A member of the Canadian Emigration Office staff in London writes: "We arrived safely from the trenches yesterday, after having a warm time of it, and many exciting moments. The Germans shelled us heavily the whole time, and we were expecting them to make an attack, but fortunately for us it was made on our left, and was easily repulsed. We sprung a mine one morning, and the crater occupied the crater with only small losses. This, of course, brought on a good deal of shelling, during which we had some killed and wounded, unfortunately, but it gives us a good deal of satisfaction when our boys send over about three to one, and Mr. German soon shuts up for the sake of his infantry, who must be having a bad time of it. We were only 30 yards away from them at one point, and early one morning we had a talk with the Germans. The first thing we heard was, "You English, parlez vous francais—if so, would we speak to him? After telling him we could a little, we stood up and had a chat. He said he always liked a cigarette before breakfast and lit one up, and if we would like one we could go and get one. I might tell you he didn't chance it. He also said that he was fed up with war, which would not last long now, but in answer to our question "When" he said as soon as they took Paris, at which we had a good laugh, and explained to him that we should all be old men if we had to wait that long. I think they must be told all sorts of lies, to give them a good heart."
