

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

IF YOUR BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS, DRINK LOTS OF WATER

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of J&J Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine.

J&J Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active.

THE PROMOTER'S WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

SYNOPSIS

Neil Forbes, a young college man who has decided to be a promoter because he thinks he can get rich quickly that way, and also because he is visionary, visits his aunt in the little town of Hintington and so meets Barbara Hill who with her parents, lives next door to his aunt.

From their first meeting Barbara, nicknamed "Bab" by her friends, is fascinated with Neil and his debutant ways. He spends much time with her, but leaves after a short visit. He drops her a formal but friendly little note, which she answers in such a way the correspondence is continued.

Neil has very little money—but big prospects, so he always declares. He pays more for rent than he can afford, saying as usual, "We'll get it somewhere! We must live in a decent place!"

Neil Forbes is naturally very extravagant in all his ideas. He has no self denial. He is continually on the eye of making money—if certain deals go through. He is always discounting the future, regardless of the demands that the future might bring.

"Bab" thinks him a very wonderful business man, without knowing what that business is, or how conducted. What a promoter did, how he made his money, was all Greek to her. She spends money almost as freely as he, after a time, simply because he provides it so lavishly.

She meets friends of Neil's—one is Blanche Orton, with whom he seems very intimate. Blanche, unconsciously that Bab knows nothing of business, drops a hint that worries Bab, although she scarcely knows why. This hint lies in a sentence concerning the unreliability of most promoters—a sentence which seems to imply that promoters sometimes are not—well, not quite honest. Not that Bab believed for a moment that Neil would willingly do wrong; but she feared he might be led astray by older and unscrupulous men.

Blanche Orton's husband dies. Neil grows even more friendly with Blanche. Bab commences to feel jealous, without really thinking there is anything wrong. But there is much going on to make her suspicious. Neil moves into more expensive quarters, both his home and his office. He insists upon bringing men home to entertain them, coarse, common, but wealthy men. Finally Bab declares she will not have them at her table. He will have to entertain them at his club. One of them, a good-hearted western man who has a kind heart, falls in love with Bab, and when Neil gets into trouble saves him for her sake.

Bab finally comes to know Neil as a visionary. She will not believe him dishonest. Quite unmeaningly and unconsciously, she has absorbed many of his ideas. She has learned to love luxury. But gradually she learns that he gets people into his schemes who cannot afford to lose money—widows, etc. Neil never talks in small sums, always in thousands or millions. Bab has come also to think that a few dollars more or less do not count.

Their troubles begin—troubles which were inevitable because of their manner of living, and the uncertainty of their income. In all, Blanche Orton and others are mixed. Creditors commence to make Bab miserable. These creditors have lost faith in Neil's schemes and refuse him further credit. Then comes the crucial time in their career when, because of her great love for her husband, Bab takes the reins in her hands and, out of what threatens to be the ruin of them both, makes a new life for them founded upon very different lines, and which ultimately brings happiness.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff, And Hair Stops Coming Out

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy and beautiful at once

Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small trial bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

"Mother's Tender Flowers"

Watch the tongue of your young! Children droop and wither if you permit constipation poison to be absorbed into their delicate systems. Hurry! Give Cascarets to clean the little clogged-up liver and bowels. Children love harmless Cascarets because Cascarets taste like candy—only 10 cents a box! Grand!

When a child's tongue turns white, breath feverish, stomach sour, mothers can always depend upon safe old "Cascarets" to gently, yet thoroughly clean the little liver and bowels. Cascarets are just dandy for children. They taste like candy and no child need be coaxed to take them even when cross, bilious and sick. Each 10 cent box contains directions and dose for children aged one year old and upwards.

"There is a Tiger Within Me!"

This is what Barbara Forbes discovered when she had her first pangs of jealousy over intimacy between her husband and Blanche Orton. And she feared this tiger—feared that it might wreck her marriage, if she could not become master of it.

For, Barbara knew she had no proof of grounds for her jealousy. She knew that her wild ungovernable suspicions were entirely unreasonable. And suspicion of the innocent always ends in disaster.

But on the other hand, what a pity it was that Neil—her husband—did not try to help her conquer the wild thing within her—help her by being over-particular to give her no cause to suspect him. Neil was so careless about appearances; often he did not even take the trouble to rectify a misrepresentation.

Yet, Neil loved Barbara deeply. It hurt him to see her unhappy. And this being the case, it looks as though things were going to end happily, doesn't it?

But proof is surer than supposition, so to find out conclusively, read "The Promoter's Wife" which starts in the Charlottetown Guardian this week.
