

ALWAYS TRAVEL WITH ENO

Follow the example of millions of men and women the world over—whenever you travel take along a bottle of ENO'S "Fruit Salt." In this way, you are fully prepared to combat train-sickness, headaches, and other ills caused by sudden changes of climate, food and water.

A glass of ENO morning and night keeps the stomach sweet and the inner system free from the poisonous waste which is the initial cause of half the ills which attack the human body.

ENO is the most pleasant and refreshing corrective, acts gently but surely and effectively, and is non-habit-forming. You can buy it wherever you travel. Resolutely refuse substitutes.

The words "Fruit Salt" and ENO are registered trade marks. Sales Representatives for North America: Harold F. Ritchie & Co. Ltd., 10-16 McCaul St., Toronto. Ca 17

ENO'S FRUIT SALT

Service: To give oneself freely in response to the devotion of love is not to waste life but to enrich it. There is much we cannot understand, but self-surrender to the call of love is never waste, though our life be cut short and our purpose frustrated.—H. M. Hughes.

Value of Time: "Every moment lost," said Napoleon, on one occasion, "gives an opportunity for misfortune," and he used to say that he beat the Austrians because they never knew the value of time; while they dawdled he overthrew them.—Smiles.

The Plains of Abraham

By James Oliver Curwood

"And I," added Henri getting in a hood and patted her hair more properly into place before a mirror. Jeems was tugging at the hand of hanging on the wall, Henri knew his roving vagabond of an uncle, how fast her heart was tripping as who was his greatest hero in all the world, and dragged him back to get his gun.

As they went, the happiness in Catherine's face was clouded for an instant.

"Best keep good eyes on our Jeems for a time, Henri," she warned. "Hepsibah, you know very well, is singularly improvident and thoughtless man, overfilled with foolish tricks and contrivances most alluring to boyish minds, and of which, because of Jeems, I am a bit afraid."

But Henri only chuckled for the thought was in his mind that it was a fattening of one's good fortune to be taught tricks by a man like Hepsibah Adams.

Then Catherine saw that a film of smoke was rising from the top of the big stone chimney.

"Hepsibah has already started a fire," she said.

It was the aliveness of this fire-place which had drawn the expression of surprise and pleasure from Catherine—that and the aroma of cooking things which greeted them. Since Catherine's earliest memories, her brother had boasted of his excellence as a cook, and most assuredly he had been busy since his unexpected arrival. Half a dozen chains were dropped from their bolts in the thick oak lug-bar of the fireplace seven feet above the fire, and from the pothooks at the end of these chains were suspended as many pots and kettles, steaming and boiling and giving forth a cheerful sound of dancing pewter lids against which the bubbling water was playing an animated and pleasing melody. But to Henri, who always loved the sound of these busy pots with their lively cheer and promise of supper, a still more delectable thing was the great roast of venison which Hepsibah had hung before the fire.

Catherine took off her cape and gone before Hepsibah Adams thrust back his end of the long fable bench and brought forth his fat pack from under the stairs which led up to Jeems' sleeping loft.

"Just a few little trinkets," he began, using the identical words he had employed one year after another. "A few whim-whams and baubles for the boy, a bit of trumpery for sister, and a farthing worth of nothing in particular for you, Henri. Ah, here we have the first package, with writing on it in the hand of the scholar who sold me the goods—a cap, a ruffie, a tucker, and a bolt of lace at five shillings a yard! Now who in this room can such sillies be for—unless—" and at Catherine's delighted exclamation he tossed the bundle to her. But scarce had she opened it, with her eyes intent upon her business, then Hepsibah unfurled a red silk petticoat in the candle glow, and this time Catherine sprang to her feet with an amazed intake of breath, for so well had Hepsibah arranged his surprise, that, one after another, he had a white love-hood, a black love-hood, and three more petticoats on the table—one of scarlet with black lace, one of colored druggit with pointed lace, and a third of black silk with ash-gray lining; and as Catherine stood gazing upon these treasures fit for a queen he added to them two pairs of stays for an eighteen-inch waist, and then showered over them such an array of lace drowls, gorgets, plectanilles, and other neckerchiefs that Catherine closed her eyes for a moment and then opened them wide as if there might be a chance of some clever rickery in it.

"Dear Mother in heaven!" she cried. "Are all of these ravishing things for me? They must have cost a fortune!" pausing to look at her smiling brother and at the same time holding up the scarlet petticoat with black lace. "This one, for instance—"

ROBERT MACKENZIE

Residents of Poplar Hill and Toney Mills heard with regret and surprise of the sudden death on Monday, May 23rd, at Portsmouth, Rhode Island, of Robert Mackenzie aged 81. Mr. MacKenzie who was a native of Prince Edward Island and lived for some forty years at Poplar Hill where he was favorably known as a man of industry, honesty and exemplary character.

About a year ago last October he went to Portsmouth where he lived with his cousin, Mrs. John Sloane, who accompanied the remains back to the home community for interment. The funeral took place from the home of Stuart Buchanan, Toney Mills, whose mother is another cousin of the deceased, on Friday, May 27th, interment being at the Sundridge cemetery, Rev. Dr. Baird of First Presbyterian Church, Pictou, being the officiating clergyman. Appropriate musical selections were rendered under the leadership of Mrs. Johnston MacKenzie. There was a large attendance of former neighbors and friends.

said Hepsibah, opening his pack wider and working his hands quickly. "Made up to them two pairs of stays for an eighteen-inch waist, and then showered over them such an array of lace drowls, gorgets, plectanilles, and other neckerchiefs that Catherine closed her eyes for a moment and then opened them wide as if there might be a chance of some clever rickery in it.

BLUE SUPER-BLADE

successor to Gillette's $2 Kroman blade at half the price

GILLETTE'S new management introduces a sensational razor blade—new in quality, appearance and shaving results—the Blue Super-Blade. You can distinguish it instantly in the package or on your face. It is blue and enclosed in a blue wrapper sealed in Cellophane—the highest quality blade Gillette or any other company has ever produced.

The Blue Super-Blade is of blue steel with rustless finish—a super-quality blade made in addition to the standard Gillette in the green package. It replaces the famous $2 Kroman DeLuxe and sells for half the price.* You pay only a few cents more than for the regular blade. Here is a blade you will appreciate if you like fine things. It is positively guaranteed to exceed the demands of former Kroman users and other men hard to please.

The Blue Super-Blade is the product of a modern, newly developed manufacturing process. It requires extra finishing operations and special tempering that are given to no other blade. Critical inspection, involving the use of most exact scientific equipment, provides the final check of super-quality.

Try the Blue Super-Blade. Have the satisfaction of using the finest blade we have ever made. Shave with it tomorrow morning—give it a thorough work-out—then let us know if your opinion agrees with ours.

*The Kroman's $2 price prevented the use of this excellent blade by thousands who appreciate extra quality. A new and less expensive manufacturing process now enables us to offer an even superior blade—the Blue Super-Blade—at half the price. Now everyone can enjoy super shaving performance.
