The Evil of Intemperance

The following sermon on the "Evil of Intemperance" was delivered by Rev. John M. Sheen, O.S.A. at the congregation of West Cape, Cape Wolfe, Bethel and Glenwood.

The Evil of Intemperance Prov. 20, 15-30. Text 29 & 30. In the early days of the world's history we have the fearful and wonderful story of the flood.

And the flood came with horror and regretted that the world had been so wicked. The earth was filled with violence and the violence began to be expressed by the first boy born of woman becoming a murderer.

And God resolved to destroy man. But he saw that there were men who pleased him, and so Noah became a preacher of righteousness and the means by which God saved life to start again in the world.

Now Noah had no converts except the members of his own family. His wife, three sons and their wives. Through his preaching and faithfulness he saved his family.

And the flood came with horror and regretted that the world had been so wicked. The earth was filled with violence and the violence began to be expressed by the first boy born of woman becoming a murderer.

And God resolved to destroy man. But he saw that there were men who pleased him, and so Noah became a preacher of righteousness and the means by which God saved life to start again in the world.

Now Noah had no converts except the members of his own family. His wife, three sons and their wives. Through his preaching and faithfulness he saved his family.

ing men in many parts of the world, liquor that would fill box cars on a train 50 miles long. When ships and lives were sacrificed in the transportation of this great cargo of poisoned water, we can see that this great business is powerful.

As Shakespeare's description of alcohol as "an enemy that men put in their mouths to steal away their brains" is a definition verified by modern science to the last detail.

Yet when our nation called for sacrifice and rationing in food, clothes, means of travel, yet wine, beer and whiskey were neither forbidden nor rationed, but year by year through course of the war, increased by leaps and bounds until the people of this land and young women too, spent a day for their liquor.

This little island leads the dominion in the consumption of liquor. It is because the people of our province have money to spend for the Red Cross and other worthy causes that they have neglected the people of other provinces have not got because the brewery interests have taken it from them.

No one officer ever gave a wrong command because he remained sober. Generals Montgomery, neither smoke nor drinks, nor does our Canadian ace Bug Buerling. While on the other hand the scriptures picture the overthrow of a great empire, the empire of Babylon and the fall of the Assyrian empire.

It was when he was inflamed with wine that Belshazzar committed his heinous crime and went down in his doom. How many princely young men and young women too, have thrown away their kingdom, and have been a hand writing upon the wall in terms of woe and retribution, of misery, shame, and sorrow unquenchable, because they carried long at the wine.

Who hath sorrow, who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes? That they carry lion at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

Herodotus Quoted Herodotus, the Greek historian, says that Cyrus attacked and took Babylon at night, when the king and the nobles were drunk. That was not the first nor the last king to be lost when he was under the influence of strong drink.

effects must have been poisoned. "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

Today is a day of sacrifices. Many men have abandoned their business, broken up their homes and committed themselves to a life of irksome limitation, of three less efforts involving the risk of suffering and even death itself.

Women are facing bravely separation and loneliness. They have accepted limitations of living, they are assuming heavy responsibilities, and are facing bravely the possibility of future insecurity. Even young women are forsaking the pleasures of life, the comforts of a peaceful home, to share the toll of the hardship, the danger, and even the suffering of the havoc of war.

They have rededicated, or rather they are allowing others to redirect their whole outlook and activity. They have dedicated themselves, to their future, their life itself, to their country, to victory, to freedom.

They have espoused the role which caused Rupert Brooke to pay his immortal tribute to their fellows of the Great War: "These laid the world away; poured out the red"

Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be Of work and joy and that un-hoped serene. That men call age, and those become total abstainers. To stop drinking the stuff that begets domestic disorder, lessened efficiency, multiples disease, increases crime, and widespread economic waste, and in this time of war, national danger! Doing without alcoholic drink is no sacrifice but simply a resolution to live at one's normal best."

The great Rochester Mayo clinic states that out of any ten people that will take a drink, three will become drunkards. And the word of God speaks expressly against drunkards and one never knows what type one is. So please yourself for the good of your own soul, for the sake of your own posterity, for the good of Canada engaged in war, for the sake of those who died for your freedom, don't be a slave to drink, pledge yourself to total abstinence. No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. No, not by selling, and not by drinking, but by prohibiting and by abstaining can we cope with this great evil.
