Two Ways to Rear Children Dorothy Dix Discipline Should Be Taught Early

Which Set of Children Will Succeed in Life: Those Taught All the Rules of the Game, Beginning in the Cradle, or Those Allowed to "Run Wild"?

Among my friends are two young mothers whose different methods of rearing their children. I am watching with great interest. Both women are as fine as they come, sterling in character, well bred, intelligent and cultured, well-to-do, and each of them has four children who range from babyhood to eight years of age. Both are devoted mothers and their children are growing up in an atmosphere of tenderness and affection.

But Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. do not belong to the same school of thought in child-rearing. Mrs. A.'s children are brought up by hand, so to speak, and when they are so little that they cannot be reasoned with she turns them across her lap and administers a spank that teaches a little experimenter that it is painful to pour ink on the best rug or that con- vulsively rebel into a beaming pacifist in the twinkling of an eye. Mrs. A. also believes in law and order, and she teaches her children to obey her and respect her authority as their commanding officer.

Believing that every one should be useful and pull their way in the boat, Mrs. A. teaches her children when they are mere babes to put away their toys when they have finished with them, and when they are a little older to hang up their coats and caps on their own hooks and pick up their towels off of the bathroom floor. Later each one is given some special task that he or she is responsible for, all of which is not only a great help to Mother, but also establishes habits of neatness and thrift and industry and dependability that will be their best assets as long as the children live.

Mrs. B., on the contrary, puts her faith in the noninterference system of bringing up children. She boasts that she never says "don't" to them. She never suppresses their natural inclinations, even when they run to breaking windows and making themselves terrors of the neighborhood. She never makes her children obey her. She lets them "sass" her and tell her she is a fool and that they won't do what she tells them to do. They go to school or not as they please. They eat like pigs. They have the manners of hoodlums. They are ready at 8 or beyond all control.

Which of these women is the good mother? Which mother is doing her duty by her children and fitting them for life? Which mother's children are going to be successful? Which mother's children are going to be rotters and failures who will neglect her and treat her with scorn and contumely and shut their doors in her face if she is in want?

You don't need to be a seer to read the futures of these two families of children. The A. children are going to be able to meet whatever hardships in life come to them and triumph over them because they are disciplined and self-controlled. They have learned in their infancy to master their appetites and their impulses and they will not make drunkards of themselves. They have been taught obedience and they will not make criminals or lawbreakers. They have been taught to work and to keep at a task until they finished it, and any man or woman who does that goes on to success. And their good manners are the sesame that will open every door to them.

And do you have to be a crystal-gazer to see what will happen to the children who have never had "don't" said to them; who have been spoiled rotten and made soft and unfitted for a world in which only the strong survive. They will be the youngsters who wreck their lives before they fairly begin them.

The boys and girls who have never been taught to control themselves and who are soft and wild women in their teens; who have never been taught respect for law and who are speed maniacs who figure in terrible automobile accidents. The miserable men and women who are failures because their mother brought them up to be failures. What kind of a mother are you? DOROTHY DIX.

FREEDOM FOR TWO

By MARGARET WATSON

She had often wondered what she would do in an emergency, what she would react to it. Now, in one desperate half-second, she knew; she would lose her head. That was her one galling impression at that moment.

Then she lost control. The car seemed to jump and quiver and slip beneath her, with a horrid grinding sound, and she had a fleeting glimpse of the man reeling away on her right from the blow of the wing, before the entire night dissolved into chaos.

It took her a long time to realize that she was not only alive, but except for bruises uninjured. She put her hands up to her head and tried to press the confused ringing out of it; and presently, by dint of much shaking and blinking, she succeeded in restoring some sense of sight and hearing. She took a fast hold on the edge of the door which sprung open above her, and dragged herself up on her knees. She must not faint. If she was to prove even to herself, that she could face anything more essential than a daily rail journey to town and back, she must not faint. Besides, there was the man. She had seen him flung to the ground. Supposing he was badly hurt? Supposing he was dead?

It was not easy to detach herself from the ruins of the veteran car, but she managed it at last, crawling with clenched hands and set teeth. The door swinging idly as she crept through it into the sodden grass of the ditch, groaned dolefully. She imagined that was the only voice the car had left.

As the Old Year slips away, He kindly with him takes, The pages we have blurred and marred Pith failures and mistakes. And so we greet the glad New Year With strong courageous heart; And putting all mistakes away, Resolve to do our part To overcome all hindrances. To make all weights our wings.

GREAT WAS HER PATIENCE

Once there was a woman who did a big washing. She hung her clothes on a line. The line broke and all the wash came down. She did her washing over again and spread it on the grass to dry. A dog with muddy feet came along and walked all over the clean, white clothes. The woman did not get angry or lose her temper. She just said: "Isn't it queer he didn't miss anything?" That was true patience. But only people who do washings know it.

COWS

A farmer in a small village on the German Czechoslovakian border noticed one day that his most unmanageable cow became docile when it heard the strains of music. He now plays the accordion to them every morning and has found they submit to milking more readily and produce an increased yield.

STYLE WHIMISIES

The check jacket, quite gay as to color, is a favorite for sports-wear out in the western resorts. Floral prints in small designs, for shirts to wear with sports clothes, are given preference for resort wear. Kollinsky, dyed to resemble baum

FROZEN PIPES

Frequently an exposed section of pipe will freeze in the cellar and may be thawed out by the housewife without sending for a plumber. Trace the place that seems to be getting the cold air and wrap cloths wrung out of boiling water around it, leaving the faucets turned on in the kitchen or basement. Repeat if necessary until the water starts to flow. When the water flows you know the pipe is clear; then wrap a piece of heavy toweling around this exposed section so it will not freeze up again this winter.

BRIEF TIPS

A good bluing will dissolve entirely in water. Buy all-linen towels for dish drying. They may cost a bit more but they absorb the moisture and leave no lint. Watch the sales and buy a few at a time. After giving the sewing machine a good oiling, which through a thin blotter for a few rows and take up any surplus oil that may be around the foot of the machine. When a burn or scald is healing, rub the new skin several times a day with a good sweet oil to prevent scars. Continue this practice until the new skin is soft and flexible.
