THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Resolution of Sympathy Sent to King Edward. DELEGATES WELCOMED To St. John-Letter From Lady Aberdeen Read-Variou Reports Received.

St. JOHN, July 4-(Special)-The National Council of Women opened this morning with a good attendance. The first business transacted was the passage of a resolution of sympathy with King Edward in his illness which will be forwarded through the Governor General. Mrs. Ellis welcomed the Council to St. John and Mrs. Hughes of Toronto replied. Mrs. Thomson, President, in annual address hoped that the Council would continue to hold annual meetings and this view was heartily endorsed in a letter received from Lady Aberdeen. The latter sent orders to the President to give each delegate present a badge and floral emblem as a daily reminder of her Council. Upon motion it was ordered that a message of thanks be sent to Lady Aberdeen. Greetings were read from the National Council of Holland, also from Maccabees of W. I. by Mrs. Baxter of Vancouver. Reports of various Provinces were read and that from P. E. Island by Mrs. Davidson. The meeting was very enjoyable. The public meeting on prison reform was held tonight.

KIPLING AND CORONATION HONORS. Was Rudyard Kipling forgotten, or did he not wish to be the object of royal honors? He is essentially the poet of the masses, and his work, if not up to the literary standard of a Tennyson, represents the spirit of the age, and he moved the whole people as no other poet since Tennyson did. -Montreal Star.

"THE BROWNIES IN FAIRYLAND" Who Will Appear in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. - Extensive Preparations now being made for the Entertainment.

Everybody has heard of Palmer Cox's Brownies but few have seen them. Many a romance has been built about the grotesque sprites who delight the children. Palmer Cox the author of the Brownies was born in Granby, Canada, and spent his schooldays there. He is a tall broad-shouldered man, considerably over six feet in height, with a humorous twinkle in his eyes that is indicative of the inexhaustible fund of humor that has found expression in the mirth-provoking adventures of the Brownie Band. He has a calm, collected manner, as though he appreciated the responsibility of providing for the restless sprites who are continually getting into difficulties from which he must extricate them. His first Brownie story was written and illustrated in 1882. Previous to this he had worked with animals but it always seemed unreasonable to him for animals to be conversing like people. It suddenly occurred to him that the Brownies, who according to an old Scotch tradition delight in harmless pranks and helpful deeds, would be a good medium through which to convey his thoughts and fancies. Accordingly the first story was written and its reception by the public was enough to convince him that his life work lay in the Brownies. The music for the production was all written by Malcolm Douglas. At the age of seventeen Mr. Douglas was the dramatic critic of a St. Louis paper and in that position had many amusing experiences. His callers invariably mistook him for the office boy and inquired if Mr. Douglas would soon be in. After waiting a minute he would wheel round leisurely in his chair and patronizingly inquire, "Well sir, what can I do for you?" This was supposed to have an awe-inspiring effect, but it generally provoked a laugh instead. Mr. Douglas has been a contributor to St. Nicholas and Harper's Magazine and Puck. The collaboration between Cox and Douglas on the Brownies covered nine months of time. In the cantata the curtain will rise on the garden of Queen Flora in Fairyland, and the little girls who represent the Queen and her subjects will make a pretty picture. The Brownies after dropping from an imaginary burst balloon with a parachute will cause the fairies to retreat and arrange their toilettes. The Brownies will then come on the stage and sing and dance. They make love to the queen and ladies of the court and agree to fight the monsters who had been waging war against the flowers. The Brownies march away to the war, are vanquished and return and after holding a council of war resolve to accomplish by strategy what could not be done by force. Uncle Sam will penetrate the enemy's camp in disguise, and the Brownies will then march to battle. While they are gone the fairies sing a very pretty song, and on their return victorious, the queen and ladies of her court give their hearts and hands to the Brownies. "Oh, many a year and trying age May pass away, ere on the stage Another band like this, will rise To please, to puzzle and surprise."

STOMACH HALF GONE AND STILL LIVES

A Marvellous Recovery from a Severe Operation for Cancer in the Stomach.

OSHKOSH, Wis., July 1.-Though nearly one-half of his stomach was cut away two months ago, Charles Stryzowski, of this city, is getting more healthy and stronger every day and the process of digestion appears to be performed much more completely and beneficially than by a very large proportion of persons who are blessed-or, as some dyspeptics might put it, cursed-with a whole stomach. Ten years ago Stryzowski was a robust man, apparently in perfect health. He was employed in one of the local factories and so steadily did he labor that he was enabled to accumulate enough money to purchase a home for his wife and two sons and also to lay up a sum for a rainy day. About five years ago he began to have trouble with his stomach and his health began to fail. It was supposed that he had catarrh of the stomach and he was dosed and treated for that ailment. But all proved unavailing. He became emaciated and was unable to perform his daily labor. His ailment was finally diagnosed as cancer of the stomach, and he was informed that his case was hopeless. But Stryzowski is far from a coward. He determined that rather than perish of starvation he would die of the wound of a surgeon's knife. Although informed that there was almost no chance of recovery he went to the hospital and prepared himself for the ordeal. On the morning before the operation was performed he was given absolutely no nourishment. Borne to the operating room the stomach was further cleansed by the application of a stomach pump. This Stryzowski says, hurt him a good deal. Then the anaesthetic was administered and he was oblivious of his surroundings until the middle of the afternoon, though he entered the operating room at half-past ten a. m. The operation itself, however, took only a little more than two hours. The diseased portion of the stomach was severed from the unaffected part and the membranous walls were then sewed together. It required about one hundred stitches to sew the walls of the stomach. The other organs were re-arranged and the hole closed in the wall of the abdomen. Then followed the weary and almost hopeless struggle for life. The patient rallied from the shock of the double wound, but on account of the enforced idleness of the ordinary digestive organs his life hung by a thread. For three weeks not a morsel of food, liquid or solid, entered the mouth or stomach. The patient was kept alive by injections of liquid nourishments and stimulants. The wound caused thirst, but he was absolutely refused water, as a drink of water, the physician said, would be almost instantly fatal. His thirst almost crazed him but he kept before him all the time that if he struggled on and bore the suffering he might live, and life was so dear to him and the thought of leaving his wife and boys without a protector so bitter that he gritted his teeth and ferally fought on. At the end of three weeks he was allowed the first nourishment-a little
