Happy-Go-Lucky

By Mrs. Harry Fugh Smith

"I'd like to think if you ever needed help, you'd come to me," he said humbly.

Her lips curled slightly. "I don't expect to have to send out any S.O.S.'s, Martin, but if I should I'll bear you in mind," she said, and rose to her feet, since that seemed the best way to cut off the scene.

Martin walked back to the office with her. "I banked a thousand dollars in my savings account last year," he said proudly. "I'll double it this year."

"That's nice," she said with no enthusiasm. "I wish you all of the best, Martin. Here's where I turn in. I'll be seeing you."

She did not really mean to see him again. She was merely using a slang expression, but Corine Lucas was just behind her and heard it. They walked upstairs together. "I thought you were off with the old love, Barbara," she remarked. Barbara shrugged her shoulders. "Being married doesn't keep one from being civil to old acquaintances," she said curtly.

It was the longest afternoon she had ever spent. She could not keep her eyes off the clock. She wished she could resign. She meant to do so at the first possible minute. She was beginning to realize that marriage is a full-time job in itself.

CHAPTER XII

Tony was late getting home. Barbara's heart missed a beat when she heard his step. Would he still be angry? Suppose he refused to kiss and make up? Nothing, nothing on earth, she told herself, was worth the pain of having Tony angry at her. But when he came in, his eyes were shining. "Greetings!" he exclaimed, and putting his arms about her, waltzed her across the kitchen. "Boy, Skeezicks, have we got steak and everything?"

Apparently he had completely forgotten their disagreement. Barbara had been prepared to go to all kinds of trouble to placate Tony, but illogically enough she was provoked to find him in no need of being won over. "Yes, we have steak," she said in none too gracious a tone.

"And avocados," chortled Tony. "Is it a birthday or something? When you loosen up, you go the whole way, don't you?"

Barbara flushed. "I don't believe I've exactly starved you since we've been married, or have I?" she inquired.

Tony sniggered. "Don't be like that, sugar. I'm all a-twitter. Can't you see?" He did look flushed and exultant.

"What's happened?" asked Barbara, still feeling let down.

"Gloria's back!" exclaimed Tony. "Isn't that a break?"

Barbara's lips tightened. Gloria Haven had been away at the seashore for a month. Barbara had been glad to see the other woman go.

"I had lunch with her today," announced Tony.

Barbara stiffened. "I thought you had to go over to Laketon on a story."

"Tony's eyes danced. 'I threw the office a curve.'"

"Tony!"

He looked exactly like a spoiled small boy who knows he has been naughty but expects to be petted for it. "You haven't asked me about my big news!" he exclaimed. "Gloria told Pinkney Law about my play and he has promised to read it."

"No wonder I forgot the job," said Tony. He drew a long breath. "If Law agrees to produce the play, I'm made, kid. There isn't a better man in the business."

"I know," admitted Barbara. "But he can't produce it till you write it."

Tony grinned ruefully. "That's exactly what Gloria said. She talked to me like a Dutch uncle. She said I'd never get anywhere if I didn't stop acting like a clown. She said it was all well enough to be the village cutup, but if I hoped to amount to something I'd better act my age. And believe me, she's right." He drew a long breath. "It's taught me a lesson I won't forget soon, I can tell you. Good old Gloria." All during dinner he went on and on about what a swell person Gloria was to take such an interest in his career.

Barbara tried not to mind. After all, as she told herself, the important thing was to get Tony started on serious work. It did not matter if Gloria instead of his wife seemed to have applied the necessary spur.

Some of the gang called up right after dinner and asked Tony to join them on a party, but Tony refused. "No can do," he announced gaily. "I've turned over a new leaf. From now on I'm doing something worth while with my off hours."

Barbara would not let him help with the dishes as usual. She said it was a little as she could do to see that nothing interfered with him when he was writing. She tiptoed about the kitchen, making just as little noise as possible. It awed her a bit to think that Tony was in the other room, writing a play.

She was astounded to find Tony shooting paper wads at the wastebasket which was full of crumpled-up sheets of paper. He grinned at her, scratched his ear, put another page in the machine, and began to type fast and furiously. "How's it going?" asked Barbara.

"It isn't," admitted Tony ruefully. "I can't seem to get off to a start."

"I expect the first page is the hardest," murmured Barbara.

He spooled five more sheets. He finished a second page and a third and a fourth. He was no longer floundering around. He appeared to know exactly where he was going. Barbara fairly held her breath. At eleven Tony ripped page ten from the machine and held it up triumphantly.

"This endeth Scene One!" he cried.

LEADING P.E.I. POTATO GROWERS USE THESE PROVEN PRODUCTS

25% DDT Emulsifiable Oil Concentrate GENITOL EM-25

Made for easy, convenient mixing with water, especially for spraying potatoes. Genitol EM-25 has proved effective at economical dosages in control of Colorado potato beetles, aphids, flea beetles and leaf hoppers. It may be used in combination with fixed copper fungicides, such as Nichols Chemical Spraycop, for combined control of insects and blights.

Micro-Particle 50% DDT Spray Powder GENITOX S50

A 50% DDT wettable powder, especially milled for finest particle size. Poured directly into agitated spray mixture, Genitox S50 mixes completely in hard or soft water, obtaining quick wetting and dispersion without excessive foaming. Because it is especially processed to stay in fine flocculated suspension, Genitox S50 provides highest possible deposits of the DDT material, in a uniform spray cover on foliage, with only minimum runoff of the insecticide. Unexcelled for control of potato insects mentioned above. May be used with fixed copper fungicides.

DDT-Basic Copper Concentrated Spray Powder GENICOP SPRAY POWDER

Micro-Particle Fineness

A combination of 25% pure DDT and 75% Basic Copper Sulphate with special conditioning and depositing agents, providing excellent coverage and all-around spray efficiency. This concentrated insecticide-fungicide offers economy and time-saving convenience for combined control of early and late blights, Colorado potato beetles, aphids, flea beetles, and leaf hoppers—in one material.

Neutral Copper Fungicide Spray Powder SPRAYCOP

A specially processed fixed copper fungicide of unusual chemical stability, high in copper content, for control of early and late blights. Outstanding for fungicidal effectiveness.

FOR DUSTING: Ask about Nichols Chemical's DDT and DDT-Copper Dusts to suit every insect and blight problem on potatoes.
