THE STORY
CHAPTER 11

Returning to the island on the early morning steamer, Gay was the only passenger to leave the boat at Evergreen pier, where she found no line of cars, no group of hurried drivers, to receive her. While with her two hands she carried her heavy bags through the orchard and up the long grass-green slope to the Lone Pine, Gay's heart sang a soft, little song of contentment.

"I shall sleep," she thought, "Oh, Idle, Idle little island, how I shall sleep!"

As she stood at last beneath the craggy pine, fumbling in her bag for the keys, it was the pride of possession which throbbled in her pulses. This was her summer heritage, the reward of ten years of constant labor; it was hers.

Even with her hand on the knob, Gay realized that it was not she who opened the door of the cottage; that it opened to her, instead, from within. And as she stepped back, startled, she was confronted suddenly by a woman, not Mrs. Andover, not one of the three quiet figures from the Captain's kitchen, but one she had never seen before.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," she cried, "I didn't know there was anybody here."

The woman did not speak for a moment, but stood peering up, near sightedly, into Gay's face, and a soft smile gave her face a pleasant girlish look, although as Gay learned later, she was very old, older even than Alice Andover. But for all her smallness and her pinkness, there was something impressively determined, something indomitable about her that was striking.

"Are you the Captain's wife?" Gay asked as the woman stared at her smiling faintly, puzzled.

"No, I'm not," she disclaimed quickly, half laughing. "I'm just Auntalmiry. Come in." She still stared, closely. "I—This light is bad," she added apologetically. "And my best glasses ar' broken. I can't seem to place you—" "Taint Mary Grover, is it?"

"I am Gay Delane—the new tenant."

The soft little figure became rigid. "The new tenant," she repeated.

"Oh, they didn't tell you!"

"Tell me! Of course they didn't tell me. They were afraid to tell me. The cowardly! But she said this in the most amiable and cheerful tone imaginable. "I wish Alice Andover'd tell me. I'd like to hear her. I told her, with my own lips, that I wanted to stay here myself this summer."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. She must have forgotten it. I'll run right up and tell them—"

When Gay stooped to lift her bags, Auntalmiry insisted that she leave them. "You'll be right back," she said confidently. "They'll send me word. Alice Andover never misses a chance to send somebody word. Just leave the bags; you'll be right back."

Gay trudged rather crossly up the pleasant lane to the Captain's door. The disarray of her plans annoyed her, and her tired nerves resented the postponement of rest. She found the Captain in the kitchen in his favorite chair by the window, fondling the large cat, while the dog slunk jealously beneath the table.

"Captain," Gay began curiously, "where is Mrs. Andover? The Lone

WAYS OF POLITENESS
 Someone has said: "Politeness is like the air in automobile tires. It doesn't cost anything, but it helps us get over the rough places."

It is true that politeness costs no money and that it "softens the bumps" as we go over the road of life; but it does cost something. The cost is a little time, a little thought and a little good will.

Being polite? Certainly, no one should make music while the soup spoon moves; but if someone does so, the polite thing is to make no mention.

Making a noise over the soup, I suppose, is a proof of caution. We do not like to be burned or scorched by hot liquid. The polite hostess will not serve boiling soup—or boiling coffee, either. A little care on her part will bring the liquid to the table at just about the right degree of heat.

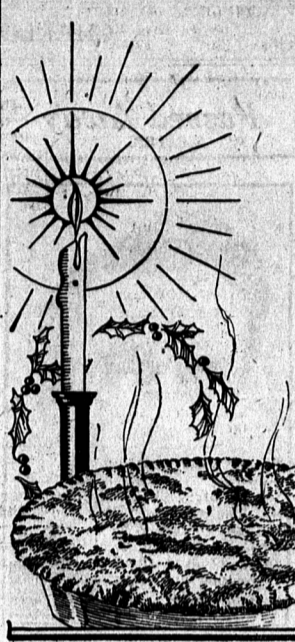

Given soup which is not too hot, the rest is easy. A little upward tilt of one side of the spoon will permit gravity to do the remainder of the work.

For every GOOD rule of politeness, there is a good reason—or maybe two. Why not sing or make noises at the table? Because our singing may not be in tune, and it is likely to disturb the rest of the family. Odd little noises will grate on the ears of others; especially if they are nervous. Singing and "odd noises" make it harder for the speaking to be heard.

New C. N. R. Steamer Arrives at Saint John

(Special to The Guardian)

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Dec. 10—The second of the five new steamships of the Canadian National Steamships for the Canada-West Indies service to arrive at the port of Saint John from the builders at Birkenhead, Eng., the R. M. S. Lady Hawkins, docked here last night with Capt. B. W. C. Manning in command. The ship presented a fine appearance as she steamed up to the dock; like her sister ship the Lady Nelson which arrived here a short time ago and is to sail from Halifax on December 12th, inaugurating the new service, she is painted white with red, white and blue markings on the funnel.

The Lady Hawkins is an eight thousand ton steamer and is similar in layout to the Lady Nelson with the exception of the interior decorations which are of a lighter shade, the predominant colour note being ivory white with blue and gold trimmings. She is propelled by turbines with oil fired boilers and at her trial trip her performance was satisfactory in every way. All of the five ships are of the same size and will be colored similarly. The first class cabins of the Lady Hawkins are done in natural wood finish, there being deluxe suites with private promenades, the same as in the Lady Nelson. Her appointments are of the best and the smoking and verandah lounge are exquisite in their furnishings, presenting that note of coziness and good taste which characterizes the Lady Nelson.

The Lady Hawkins is named after the wife of Admiral Sir John Hawkins, born in Plymouth in 1532, who helped plant the flag of Empire in the western world and whose most spectacular exploits were performed in and about the islands of the Caribbean Sea.

Captain Manning is very pleased with the seagoing qualities of the Lady Hawkins, stating on being interviewed upon her arrival that she proved herself a very steady sea boat and one that would measure up to the high standard set by the Canadian National Steamships.

That she will prove herself worthy of the task assigned to her, the building up of the great trade between Canada and the West Indies which should follow from the inauguration of this new service by the Canadian National Steamships is the verdict of all of those who saw her. Like the Lady Nelson and the other of the new ships the Lady Hawkins is equipped with cold storage space for the carriage of perishable cargoes. Captain Manning, who is to command the Lady Hawkins, was the recipient a short time ago of a gold watch from Sir Henry Thornton, a chairman and President of the Canadian National Railways, and Canadian National Steamships, as a reward for his skillful seamanship and humanitarian act in manoeuvring an earlier charge so as to affect the rescue of the captain and crew of the schooner Myotte of Lunenburg, N. S., which was derelict following a tremendous storm in which one member of the schooner's crew was lost.

Captain Manning is a Canadian by birth, being born at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, from which province many of Canada's maritime captains have emanated.

The Lady Hawkins will sail from St. John in the latter part of the week for Halifax from which port she will sail on December 25th, in regular service between Canada, Bermuda and the West Indies.

A WORD TO FARMERS

FARMERS are not receiving the prices for their Potatoes this fall that they are entitled to. No blame can be attached to anyone for the state of affairs, but it is entirely due to the rule of supply and demand. When prices of Potatoes are as low as they are at the present time there is no money for either the farmer or the dealer, but when prices are good then the farmer receives the reward for his labors he is entitled to, and the dealers and shippers also make a profit. We are not in the Potato business, but would advise farmers to dispose of or feed their surplus stock that they cannot protect from frost during the winter. Prices for Potatoes will likely be considerably higher next spring, stocks want high cellar in splendid condition. There is bound to be a demand at high prices later on due to the enormous consumption owing to low prices, for the next few months millions of bushels will be consumed by feeding to live stock as well as in the Household. Potatoes being the cheapest commodity on the market today, for either man or beast.

We want a large quantity of FEED OATS for which we are paying good prices according to grades.

We are also buying SEED and FEED WHEAT, BARLEY and BUCK WHEAT, PRESSED HAY and STRAW in exchange for CASH or FEED.

IN stock CARLOADS OF BRAN, SHORTS, MIDDINGS, OIL CAKE MEAL, CRACKED CORN, CORNMEAL, SUGAR BEET MEAL, CRUSHED ED.
