The 7 DIALS MYSTERY

By Agatha Christie
CONTINUED
BUNDLE'S ADVENTURES

Bundle Brent was a resourceful girl—she was also a girl of imagination. She had foreseen that Bill if, not Jimmy, would make objections to her participation in the possible dangers of the night. It was not Bundle's idea to waste time in argument. She had laid her own plans and made her own arrangements. A glance from her bedroom window shortly before dinner had been highly satisfactory. She had known that the gray walls of the Abbey were plentifully adorned with ivy, but the ivy outside her window was particularly solid looking and would present no difficulties to one of her athletic propensities.

She had no fault to find with Bill's and Jimmy's arrangements as far as they went. But in her opinion they did not go far enough. She offered no criticism, because she intended to see to that side of things herself. Briefly, while Jimmy and Bill were devoting themselves to the inside of the Abbey Bundle intended to devote her attentions to the outside.

Her own meek acquiescence in the tame role assigned to her gave her an infinity of pleasure, though she wondered scornfully how either of the two men could be so easily deceived. Bill, of course, had never been famous for scintillating brain power. On the other hand, he knew, or should know, his Bundle. And she considered that Jimmy Theisger, though only slightly acquainted with her, ought to have known better than to imagine that she could be so easily and summarily disposed of.

READY FOR ACTION

Once in the privacy of her own room, Bundle set rapidly to work. First she discarded her evening dress and the negligible trifle which she wore beneath it, and started again, so to speak, from the foundations. Bundle had not brought her maid with her, and she herself had packed. Otherwise, the puzzled Frenchwoman might have wondered why her lady took a pair of riding breeches and no further equipment.

Arrayed in riding breeches, rubber-soled shoes, and a dark-colored pull-over, Bundle was ready for the fray. She glanced at the time. As yet it was only half-past twelve. Too early by far. Whatever was going to happen would not happen for some time yet. The occupants of the house must all be given time to get off to sleep. Half-past one was the time fixed by Bundle for the start of operations.

She switched off her light and sat down by the window to wait. Punctually at the appointed moment she rose, pushed up the sash and swung her leg over the sill. The night was a fine one, cold and still. There was starlight but no moon.

She found the recent very easy. Bundle and her two sisters had run wild in the park at Chinnays as small children, and they could all climb like cats. Bundle arrived in a flower-bed, rather breathless but quite unscathed.

She paused a minute to take stock of her plans. She knew that the rooms occupied by the Air Minister and his secretary were in the west wing; that was the opposite side of the house from where Bundle was now standing. A terrace ran along the south and west side of the house, ending abruptly against a walled fruit garden.

BATTLE ON WATCH

Bundle stepped out of her flower-bed and turned the corner of the house to where the terrace began on the south side. She crept very quietly along it, keeping close to the shadow of the house. But, as she reached the second corner she got a shock, for a man was standing there, with the clear intention of barring her way.

The next instant she had recognized him.

"Superintendent Battle! You did give me a fright!"

"That's what I'm here for," said the superintendent pleasantly. Bundle looked at him. It struck her now, as so often before, how remarkably little camouflage there was about him. He was large and solid and noticeable. He was, somehow, very English. But of one thing Bundle was quite sure. Superintendent Battle was no fool.

"What are you really doing here?" she asked, still in a whisper.

"Just seeing," said Battle, "that nobody's about who shouldn't be."

"Oh!" said Bundle, rather taken aback.

"You, for instance, Lady Elleen. I don't suppose you usually take a walk at this time of night."

"Do you mean," said Bundle slowly, "that you want me to go back?"

Superintendent Battle nodded approvingly.

"You're very quick, Lady Elleen. That's just what I do mean. Did you—er—come out of a door, or a window?"

"The window. It's easy as anything climbing down this ivy."

Superintendent Battle looked up at it thoughtfully.

"Yes," he said "I should say it would be."

"And you want me to go back?" said Bundle. "I'm rather sick about that. I wanted to go round on to the west terrace."

1847 ROGERS BROS. being the finest of all silverplate, by all known standards, is plagued with many counterfeits, masquerading under similar sounding names. So when you are buying silverware and want the genuine 1847 ROGERS BROS. brand, ask for it by its full name and be certain to look for the full name stamped on the back of each piece.

We don't ask you to take this extra precaution for our sake... but chiefly for your own. For your protection. Because even with all of its imitators, 1847 ROGERS BROS. is the largest selling brand by a huge margin. It is our plain and simple duty to you, as a prospective buyer, to tell you just how to be sure you are buying the genuine and not a counterfeit. Look for the full name!

(By G. B. A. Jeffery, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent) ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Nov. 26.—A cheque for $5,034.50 was received by Sir Richard Squires, Prime Minister today from the United States Secretary of State in the name of the American Red Cross for relief of those who suffered from the tidal wave at Burin Peninsula a week ago.

Candidate For The Noble Prize

OSLO, Norway, Nov. 26.—Among the candidates whose names have come before the committee which will award the Noble Peace Prize is that of Frank B. Kellogg, former United States Secretary of State and co-worker with Foreign Minister Briand in bringing about the famous Kellogg-Briand renunciation of war pact.

Erich Remarque, the German author of "All Quiet on the Western Front" has been mentioned as a candidate but his name was not placed before the peace prize committee.
