teachers how to live, reason, and select. The training of the young to make the wise choice is the work of the school, and of Prince of Wales College, institutions the work of which the public does not appreciate fully.

The Principal expressed himself as being dissatisfied with the work being done both by local schools and by Prince of Wales College, while casting no reflection on the staffs of either. Although much work is done in both institutions, it is marvellous how much more and better work could be done.

The Province has all the facilities except the strong and active good will of the parent and non-parent rate payers, Dr. Robertson believed. It is hard to understand, he said, how parents can be satisfied with local schools and with Prince of Wales College. It may be because of its insularity that the Province has not made the progress educationally that the remainder of the world has. In the various districts in the Province the old country schools which pupils attended fifty years ago still stand. Unfortunately inside the same schools the capable and mature teacher of fifty years ago is replaced by an immature boy or girl of sixteen or seventeen years of age. Still there is a great amount of educational work being done in the schools and in the homes.

The Prince of Wales students have graduated from the schools to a high or institution, one which is staffed better than any other secondary school found anywhere. Dr. Robertson was not quite sure if the Premier, when looking over the public services, had remembered Prince of Wales College.

Former Students

In a summary of examination results from a university recently it was found that all three who had graduated with high honors were Prince Edward Islanders. That is a thought worthy of being turned over in the mind. In Prince of Wales College there is a highly capable and experienced staff of teachers, persons of great native ability, well prepared, guided by a strong determination to do their best for the college. If the public were better acquainted with the work accomplished it would place a higher value upon it, although even then perhaps not the high value put upon the work by the speaker.

With reference to the student body Dr. Robertson said that there is not a more manly or more womanly group of persons gathered under the roof of any other one institution. He wished to assure the parents, who make great sacrifices to give their children an education, that they have not been neglecting their work. He urged parents that in selecting places of residence for their children while in the City they exercise care that the homes chosen do not contain too many distractions. A tremendous amount of work has to be done by the pupils, around whom there is a constant play of circumstances, a busy, pleasant, and attractive world. It would be well if the will power used in resistance could be directed toward study. There are special places of residence for girls while in the City. Those should be fully utilized.

Large Enrolment

When college re-opened last September 240 students enrolled, eighty of which were in Second year, and thirty of which were in Third year. The presence of the large Third Year Class is pleasing not only from the fact that it indicates a desire among the young people of the Province to further their education, but also from the fact that it creates in the minds of the First and Second year students the idea that their attainments are not culminative.

Advice To Graduates

Dr. Robertson advised the graduating students to make good use of their time, devoting occasional periods, when there is nothing else to do, to self improvement. Such a plan would take the individual out of the drifts into which he is carried off by the train of circumstances. Dr. Robertson also advised the students to accumulate an educational fortune. Be instant in season and out of season to accumulate the dollars and cents which will enable one to further one's education and thus produce additional working capital.

The work of the institution is not quite completed. A three weeks summer course in teacher training is given for those seeking First Class licenses. There is also a voluntary course offered by the teachers for the help of those who have fallen short in some particular subject. The special classes will begin on Monday at 9 o'clock. Students weak in any subject, those who have fallen below, or have barely reached the required standard should avail themselves of this opportunity.

Principal Robertson expressed regret at the indisposition of His Honour Lieut.-Gov. Dalton, who was unable to be present.

Premier's Address

Premier Lea, as president of the Board of Education was delighted to see the large assemblage. The Premier believed that the system of education in this Province to be as good as any existing system in Canada. The Doctor had spoken pessimistically of the future. As a specialist knowing the possibilities of improvement the Doctor had doubtless become impatient. He had compared education unfavourably with other public services. The Government is always the last court of appeal, but the Government cannot legislate beyond the wishes of the people.

The furniture and equipment in the public schools are much improved over what they were fifty years ago due to the work of the Women's Institutes the Premier said. He did not agree with the Doctor as regards the relative abilities of the teachers of fifty years ago, said today. While the Government has been unable to increase the salaries of the teachers and professors, Premier Lea saw no reason why a district wishing to retain its teacher should not raise enough money through supplement. The Superintendent of Education knows the weaknesses and strength of all teachers in the Province. The Province should be congratulated on being able to retain the service of the professors and of the Superintendent of Education. The wise counsel of the latter is always very acceptable.

Ability At Premium

In addressing the student body, the Premier stated that he envied the students their opportunities. The great body of prepared people are not suffering from the economic depression. There was never a time in the history of the world when ability was at such a premium as it is now. There is an age in which it is hard to satisfy youngsters, but in order to attain success it is necessary to have training and efficiency. Character is something which is to be gained, but which by an act of indiscretion, may be lost in half an hour. It is necessary to fit oneself, and make sacrifices for the future. One must work in co-operation and keep wishes subordinate to the wishes of the majority in certain cases.

Superintendent's Address

Mr. H. H. Shaw, Chief Superintendent of Education, stated that the remarks of the Principal painted things very dark. What should be should always wait on what is, he stated. He agreed that there is a lack of appreciation on the part of the people for the normal school. If the appreciation were aroused it would be possible to carry out many hopeful plans. School is the source from which comes the advancement of civilization.

Mr. Shaw stated that the old school provided the advantage of giving the pupil something worth while to do. Sometimes he believed that there is too much teaching in the schools. It is necessary to give children a chance to develop initiative. Teachers are born, but they also must be made. It is unfortunate that the best teachers can be made only by their own efforts. The speaker believed that there should be a summer school in connection with P. W. C. for the benefit of school teachers. Teachers should attend, if possible, the summer schools in Sackville.

Mr. Shaw congratulated the successful students many of whom will probably become teachers, and will carry out to the schools some of the training they have received at P. W. C.

The speaker referred to the few luxuries which people had in years past. Today the radio, the moving picture, and the automobile have vast possibilities for good. The radio can be of great benefit to education, but can be abused by developing wrong taste; similarly with the automobile and motion pictures. With the many inventions of today the individual has a large amount of leisure time. There is time for play, but many want to play the fool. In P. W. C. the student studies literature and science, as a supplement to the latter Mr. Shaw advised the student to read "The Mysterious Universe" by Sir James Jeans. The book brings to light the delight of science which one, while studying physics and mathematics, may think cannot be found.

VALEDICTORY

Read by John Denny
Your Honor, Members of the Faculty, Fellow Students, Ladies and Gentlemen:
The choice has fallen upon me to deliver our farewell address upon this, the closing day of our far-famed college. Prince of Wales has already become an historic institution, its graduates for generations being as far-famed distinguished and influential in the various paths of life as those of any University in the Dominion. We leave Prince of Wales College without a degree—letter-marked—but that may have its advantages. For it permits the character of our training to speak for itself. Men may have letters stamped on them as by the blow of a mallet but they signify no more than their training exhibits. We are instructed in various subjects in Prince of Wales College, all more or less necessary and useful for us in following our chosen careers, but chiefest of our instruction and training has been the discipline and the esprit de corps. It has been well said the noblest of all the sciences is this each student who graduates has had inculcated—the impress of the personality of Dr. Robertson and his staff. We are going out from three years of this atmosphere to carve our way to higher things, how we shall succeed remains to be demonstrated but if the proper thing for boys to learn is what they ought to do when they become men, we have at least learned to obey, and no doubt in due course, will be able to command.

Members of the Faculty we thank you and bid you a respectful farewell. Citizens of Charlottetown we salute you. You have not been the least of our instructors, benefactors, guides, philosophers and friends. To you we are indebted for hospitality, entertainment, sociability, religious opportunities and much of that joy of life which makes life worth living to an otherwise exemplary student. We are not leaving you as we are leaving the College. To you, we merely say, adieu.

In taking farewell of our fellow students who are following in our footsteps we pass on the torch. You will find out as we are beginning to do that though we can become learned by other men's learning, we can never be wise but by our own wisdom. By using our reasoning faculties and developing our mathematical bent we sharpen the understanding and learn what is right. Science can do no more than teach us prudence and moral honesty and as inculcated at Prince of Wales College becomes not an acquisition only but a natural possession. Fellow Students, carry on.

Classmates, we are at the parting of the ways. For three years we have bent our minds to our work, falling at times, but persistently and doggedly keeping at it. We are reaping our reward and are about to go forward to other walks of life, separated in body but still united in the spirit of Prince of Wales College. We have had our joys and sorrows and must admit that joy has predominated. May it be so throughout our remaining days whether here or abroad. Classmates, Godspeed.
Now, nothing remains but our beloved Alma Mater. Some of us may go further and cherish other and more advanced Institutions of learning but none of which we shall feel prouder or love more dearly than this our original fostering mother. Alma Mater, we do not leave you or forsake you now. We take you in spirit with us, while bidding your hallowed walls a fond farewell.

POTATOES FERTILIZERS

We cannot advise you whether or not you should plant potatoes. We do know however that a good year generally follows a discouraging one, and if you do not sow you cannot reap. The potato crop grown in 1924 sold at very low prices but that grown in 1925 sold at record making prices. The crop grown in 1928 was hard to sell at all yet that grown in 1929 gave big profit. Will you be in a position to participate in the returns from the 1931 crop. Seed is cheap. The product may be high.
We have a supply of chemicals, of 3-8-7 and 4-8-7 ready mixed fertilizer, ready for quick delivery after June 1st. If you do not buy you may wish you had bought.
