the British, transferring their operations to the South, advanced northward, freed the prisoners and took them to Yorktown.

It was there that Janice heard from Colonel Mobery Brereton's story, which he himself had never told her. Mobery had been an officer in the Welsh Fusiliers with Brereton.

"It was so bitter a story that he deserves a love such as yours," Mobery said. "I can remember him the merriest of us all."

"What changed him?" Janice asked.

"It was one evening at mess when Powell, too deep in drink to know what he was saying, blurted out something concerning Mrs. Loring's relations with Sir William Howe. Poor Brereton was the one man in the force who knew not why such favoritism had been shown him in his being put so young into Howe's regiment. But that was we were eight to one, he'd have killed Powell then and there. Prevented in that, he set off to kill his colonel, never dreaming Howe was his own father. He burst in on me late that night, crazed with grief, and told me how he found Howe at his mother's and how she had robbed him of his vengeance by a word. The next day he disappeared and I never heard of him until I learned that he was in the American army. Does he not deserve something to sweeten his life?"

Yorktown fell and through Squire Meredith, after some trouble, regained his property at Greenwood, his life was saddened by the death of his wife from smallpox while the siege was on.

At Greenwood, Janice learned that Brereton, now a general, was in command of a body of Continental troops at Brunswick. One day, seeing an American soldier passing along the road, she asked him if he

MOTHER'S DAY

The twelfth of May is Mother's Day. Why not remember her while you may?

For while Mother is spared you to lavish her love. You are blessed with a gift from the Master above. How home-like it is while mother is there.

Watching for you from her old rocking chair,
Keeping the fire aglow on the grate
Awaiting for your return until late,
Think how she cared for you as a child,
Making your path so smooth and mild,
With a word of encouragement,
A smile of cheer,
She made each day start bright and clear,
Even though divided miles apart,
She feels the warmth in your heart,
The tiniest gift from her boy or girl,
Makes mother feel she owns the world,
Then remember her on the twelfth of May,
Make it a banner Mother's Day.
To many of us the twelfth of May, is merely memories of Mother's Day. As we drop a flower and a silent tear,
We realize she is not here,
But over just beyond the way,
Where gleams a fairer Mother's Day.

Papers Are Kind To Lloyd George

GLASGOW, May 11—(G.P.)—Lloyd George described journalists as being among his best friends when he made a presentation at a press luncheon at Glasgow for Thomas William Ferguson, chief reporter in Glasgow of the "Scottishman," who has been connected with that paper for 50 years.

"It has been said that I have always shown a friendly disposition towards the press," said Mr. Lloyd George, "but that is only a sense of gratitude for that which I owe them. The press have always shown me, throughout my long public life, an indulgence, a kindness, and a forbearance which has never failed me. It is not merely that they have reported me fairly, but they have reported me as best they could, and that is what is best to omit in my speeches. There have been great changes in the newspaper world. I am not going to say a word in criticism of the great syndicated press, but I am very glad there are still a few independent papers left in the country."

FLIER HAD THIRST WITH LONG FLIGHT

(By The Canadian Press)

CAPE TOWN, May 8 — Alas: "Amelia Earhart pronounces it 'tomayto'." So she sent the word of disputed accent floating through the air when she spoke to this city from California after her achievement of flying across the Pacific.

"Did you feel hungry?" "No, but I was thirsty mostly, and I drank a lot of juice, tomato juice." (She pronounced it tomayto).

"Did you have any thought that you might not get across?" "I made my plans to get across," was the firm reply in emphatic tones. "All things involve some risk, but if you want to do a thing very much the best way is to go ahead, make the best preparations possible and then go and do it."

WOMAN IN EARLY THIRTIES HAS LITTLE CHANCE TO MARRY

WASHINGTON, May 10 — Too many women who ought to be married aren't, in the opinion of Dr. Paul Popenoe, one of the reasons being that there aren't enough "marriageable" men.

Dr. Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations of Los Angeles, was unable to attend the meeting of the American Eugenics Society, but he was offered by Albert Edward Wigman of New York.

The failure of educated women to marry, said Dr. Popenoe, is one of the most serious problems of eugenics. Society, but the effect of the alumnae remains single until death, he said, "and the record of their non-graduate sisters is not a great deal better."

"Many educated women want to marry, but all there is a shortage of marriageable men," he continued. "It is notorious that the woman in her early thirties has little chance of marriage because of the shortage of potential husbands."

Citizens Protest Closing of Jails

LONDON, May 11—(OP)—People are proud of their penitentiaries, according to Mr. Justice Sir Rigby Swift, one of the judges of the King's Bench. The judge was giving evidence before the Royal Commission on the despatch of business at common law.

"Nothing has created greater indignation in some parts of the country than the closing of jails," declared the judge. "No one would think that they wanted a jail in their midst, but I know several places which were highly indignant that their prisons should be taken away. Prisons bring people into a town as visitors to see it, and the same thing applies to the holding of Assizes."

On the question of retirement of High Court judges, Mr. Justice Swift, who is just 80 years of age, said: "No retiring age should be fixed. I speak without prejudice because I have almost reached the time when I am entitled to retire, and I am considerably below any retiring age which is likely to be fixed. If a judge is competent to do his work, I cannot see any reason why he should not go on doing it. Ample power is already in the hands of anybody who by age or investment in the Lord Chancellor to get competency should be reliever of his judicial responsibilities."

Lower Interest Rates On Policy Loans Not In Public Interest

Reductions injurious to Policyholders Themselves Say Life Insurance Companies

Reduction of the rate of interest on policy loans is being strongly opposed by the life insurance companies as injurious to policyholders themselves. Summarized, the official position of the companies is that:

"The limitation by legislative enactment of the maximum rate of interest chargeable on loans on life insurance policies to any figure lower than 6% would adversely affect the companies and would be against the interests of policyholders."

"In considering the effect of the proposal it is essential that the relationship of policyholders to the companies should be kept in mind. Except for the relatively negligible interest of shareholders, the life insurance companies are composed of their members, who are the policyholders. The funds administered by the companies originate with the policyholders in the form of premiums, and are in reality the total of their individual equities. Any legislation which adversely affects these funds, therefore, adversely affects the individual equities of policyholders. Moreover the earnings on the invested funds are a primary factor in the determination of premium rates, policy guarantees and privileges, and dividends; reductions in earning power must inevitably be reflected in upward adjustments of rates, reductions in dividends, or curtailment of the company's privileges, or all of these. The question of earnings is closely interwoven with policy values and cost of insurance."

"There seems to be no justification for any legislative action intended to benefit policyholders who borrow when such borrowing is certain to increase the cost of insurance to all policyholders including those who do not borrow. Such discrimination in favour of a particular group would be entirely different from any other type of loan. A policy loan is entirely different from the contractual right to borrow upon demand the maximum loan guarantee in that the bank, without notice, and to repay the loan in whole or in part also at any time and without notice. The life insurance company is not a banker, nor in the ordinary sense a lender of money. Unlike the bank, it does not put its money in a position to refuse the policy loan in its discretion, but must make any loan up to the maximum guarantee upon request. It is consequently important that the interest charged on policy loans should be such as will discourage borrowing, and encourage repayment of loans made.

"Life insurance companies were organized for the major purposes of providing financial aid to the family in the event of premature death, and to provide funds for the sustenance of the insured himself should he survive to old age. Cash surrender and loan privileges guaranteed in policies are consequently secondary and incidental provisions, and should not be encouraged to the prejudice of the primary purpose of the insurance. A low rate of interest on loans, which would encourage policyholders to borrow, would have the effect of diverting funds from their primary purpose, since loans are in effect a borrowing from beneficiaries. Borrowing more, conduces to voluntary or involuntary terminations of policies, the surrender experience on policies that have been borrowed upon being several times as great as it is upon policies as a whole. This is an effect of serious social import. The life insurance companies, therefore, while recognizing that the loan privilege may at times be a great convenience to a policyholder, endeavor to educate their policyholders, first, as to the undesirability, except as a last resort, of borrowing on their policies, and, second, as to the desirability of repaying any policy loan as soon as possible, for which repayment the companies always offer special facilities, such as the repayment at any time, without notice, of any amount."

Many Namesakes Of Their Majesties

(C. F. By Guardian's Special Wire) WINNIPEG, May 11—The stork made many stops over Western Canada in celebration of their Majesties' Silver Jubilee Monday, leaving perplexing problems in some homes.

When the fabled bird left a bouncing baby boy in his wake no trouble was encountered. "George" forthwith was dubbed upon the infant.

But when a baby daughter was born, doubt arose as to whether she should be named "Georgina" or "Mary." With "Georgina" favored in most cases, according to reports.

But to Mrs. Bert Saxton of Regina it was no problem at all. The stork played no favorites when he lingered in her home Monday. Twins, a boy and a girl, were born, and he named "George" and "Mary."

MR. CURTIS GORDON DOCHERTY

On Sunday, May 5th, at his home in Providence, R. I., Curtis Gordon Docherty passed away. He had not been in good health for a long period, but the end came rather suddenly and was a great shock to relatives and friends.

He was the son of Edgar M. Docherty and Margaret MacLellan Docherty, both natives of Cape Breton. He was an industrious young man, a keen student, who had become an expert in short wave radio and maintained active work in his chosen field up to a few weeks ago.

For a number of summers past he and his parents had visited Prince Edward Island, staying at New Perth at the home of the late Daniel Gordon, the guests of Mrs. Oswald Collings, then Miss Margaret Shaw.

They greatly enjoyed their visits, and Curtis by his splendid character and genial, companionable manner, was a great favorite of all island friends and in all their affairs, and three weeks ago he wrote a member of the Patriot staff stating that the family hoped to visit the Island again this summer. But alas, Providence has ruled otherwise.

He leaves to mourn besides his sorrowing parents, a twin brother, Bruce, who recently was admitted to the Rhode Island bar, being one of the ten successful candidates out of 31 who took the examinations.

The memory of Curtis Gordon Docherty will be held in loving remembrance, and his death reminds one of the beautiful words: "My presence still shall go with thee."

PRINCE RECALLED HER MAIDEN NAME

CAPE TOWN, May 10—(G.P.)—Here is a little story from the brochure describing the railway route between Bloemfontein and East London and supplied to the members of the Imperial Press Conference as they travelled that way.

At Tyden, a village of 30 inhabitants, including the Mayor, the Prince of Wales, during his tour in 1925, scored one of his many startling hits. His train had to stop at Tyden half an hour. His Royal Highness was welcomed in the early morning by the Mayor. Soon the Prince espied a lady standing on the platform, apart from the others. "Who's that?" he inquired. "Oh, that's my wife," replied the mayor. "Splendid—is she a South African?" asked the Prince. "No, she comes from Glasgow." "What was her name?" "She was a Miss—"

A few minutes later the Prince strode along the platform. He came opposite the Mayores, looking hard for a moment, then to her utter astonishment addressed her: "Well, I'm best if it isn't Miss—" made a Glasgow. Surely I haven't made a mistake—you remember me? I'm the Prince."

FORMER GOVT. MEMBER STARTS REVOLT

Gov't Soldiers Slay Antonio Guiteras, Radical Leader, Who Had Support of Navy.

By Edmund A. Chester, Associated Press Foreign Staff (By Guardian's Special Wire)

HAVANA, May 11—Government soldiers, an unimpeachable source said, smashed a miniature revolt today by killing Antonio Guiteras, Radical leader who was backed against the army by a small detachment of the navy.

Soldiers bullets struck down the young former Secretary of the Interior, war and navy after a grim battle at the mouth of Matanzas Harbor, 65 miles east of Havana.

Four soldiers and a follower of Guiteras were slain, it was learned, and a large amount of the kidnap ransom bills in the $300,000 kidnapping of Eutimio Falla Bonet were found near the body of Guiteras. The government had charged the former secretary with the kidnapping.

Guiteras, it was known, had long controlled a large part of the navy, which he once directed, and persuaded naval men at Matanzas to aid him in escaping to the United States. He was a native of Philadelphia.

Army intelligence officers learned of the conspiracy and set a trap this morning. Guiteras, 35, died surrounded by some 20 followers, two of them women, at the cost of four soldiers' lives. Rifles, pistols and machine guns roared during the three hour battle.

Guiteras, an enemy of long standing of Colonel Fulgencio Batista, commander of the Cuban army, met his Waterloo after the army's intelligence corps learned that he with his followers planned to enter the neighborhood of "El Morillo" on the Canimar River early today in an effort to get away to the United States by boat.

As soon as the group entered the fort, the soldiers surrounded it. Advancing, they were met by fire from inside and the battle was on.
