C. P. R. ACTIVITIES

When the early annual meetings of the Canadian Pacific Stockholders were held in the old Albert Buildings, Victoria Square south, Montreal, about a dozen officials and stockholders assembled in the little room on the second floor, which had no pretentions to the delicate aesthetic decorations which have marked the board rooms at the Windsor Street offices. Sir George Stephen was the president and Mr. Van Horne the manager. Sometimes Sir Donald Smith dropped in, if he happened to be in the city or country. For thirty years ago Lord Strathcona was laying the foundation of his great fortune by caring for other things than the Canadian Pacific—notably in the resuscitation of the old Manitoba & St. Paul Railway, out of which the trio—Hill, Smith and Stephen—made many millions.

The annual report was a brief statement, comprised in figures which Sir George had no difficulty in repeating from memory. The meetings were held in camera. The local press took little interest in them. After they were over, Mr. Van Horne gave out a brief statement, which indicated in large figures the work of the year. The stock fluctuated between thirty-five and forty. The reassuring statements of Sir Donald Smith, who, on several occasions, came out especially to be present, were printed and circulated broadcast—statements which set forth that, though he might have been a richer man if he had not had anything to do with the Canadian Pacific, yet that he believed it would be the greatest dividend earner in the country—ending with the advice that all should hond on to their shares.

The contrast between the old office in which the annual meetings were held on Victoria Square and the handsome board room on Windsor Street, chastely decorated with the portraits of the big men who dared greatly in creating the system looking down upon the meetings, is poignant. 2184ME11.

THEFT OF TICKETS FROM P. E. I. R.

would hold. The defendant himself said that he could not remember anything about the taking of the tickets; counsel presumed that his version of it might be as correct as anybody else's, that was, that he was so intoxicated that he did not remember anything he did that evening. Mr. McLean impressed the point as being a bit of evidence strongly in the defendant's favor in showing the absence of criminal intent, that he did not attempt to use the tickets. But instead he had given up two of them at the station and had made an honest effort, as Mr. McKay said, to find the other one, which subsequently he had found in the lining of a coat that he had not searched before. The clerk McLeod had been indiscrete in having allowed the defendant into the ticket office, when he knew that the man had been drinking; but having done so, he put him in the position of committing a prank for which he might be sorry afterwards and for which he would be amenable to the law. In view of the fact that the young man had never before been charged with a crime, and that he had done this act without any knowledge of what he was doing, and without any criminal intent, counsel asked that he should be discharged.

REPLY FOR PROSECUTION.

Mr. McDonald urged that the defendant should be convicted. It was true that he had admitted that he took those tickets, and that his excuse was that he did not know what he was doing. As His Honor knew, that was really no excuse; it was no palliation of the offence at all, though it might be an excuse put up to make things look less serious. The actions of the defendant when he was in the ticket office on Monday night were not those of a drunken man, especially when it was remembered that he wanted to find out how the tickets could be used; and if he was drunk he was not so drunk that he did not know to some extent what he was doing. The defendant had had ample opportunity, if he wanted to do so, to return the tickets before he was arrested; yet when he was arrested he pretended he had no tickets. The case went a good deal further than the matter of the indiscretion that Mr. McLean claimed that the defendant was guilty of only. On many of those things that were claimed to be indiscretions lots of men had been hanged. The punishment, as His Honor knew, was a matter of two years for stealing those tickets, but he did not think that that case warranted the infliction of such punishment. He did not think that there was any reason to show that the defendant should be discharged; he did not mean to say that he should be heavily punished. He believed that there was punishment by way of a fine provided in cases of that kind which might be imposed on the defendant, but that was a matter for His Honor.

THE MAGISTRATE'S JUDGMENT.

His Honor said that that matter had not developed as seriously as it threatened to be. "Still there is a clear case of stealing railway tickets, as provided for in section 368 of the Code, which provides a penalty of imprisonment for two years. But it does not depend on the value of the ticket. It simply says, if anyone steals a ticket he is guilty of an indictable offence, and liable to two years' imprisonment. Now this man stole the tickets. There is no need to get at the intent very much. When a man steals and takes, the best proof of not stealing is on him. The most he has done is to excuse himself on the score of drunkenness. That may be a mitigation, but it is not proof of non-intent. It is his misfortune; if he was in such a state of mind at that time that he was not under proper control, it is his misfortune that he could go apparently sober into a place like that and talk as he did and steal these tickets I think myself that he stole them under an impulse. His action altogether is not explained to me on the score of drunkenness. If he had gone next morning and returned the tickets I think the railway would have been within their province if they had not prosecuted. But he went next day, Tuesday, with the tickets in his pocket, down to the railway station; he was spoken to by the stationmaster, and every opportunity was given to him to give them back; he said he had not the courage to do so. Perhaps it was true. The next day also he had an opportunity of giving them back; he never did so. That is a state of mind I cannot understand. I cannot understand this individual from first to last. One thing is, however, clear: he took the tickets. I am going to give full value to the plea of drunkenness. The vagaries of the human mind in that condition are beyond me. It would be extraordinary if I should fine a man for so simple an offence as drunkenness, and should discharge this man who went into a public office and stole tickets. I don't look upon this as a very serious matter.

His Honor thereupon imposed on the defendant the sentence stated above.

LOUISIANA FLOOD DAMAGE.

LAKE CHARLES, La., Oct. 17—Flood damage in western Louisiana will reach several millions of dollars, it can be stated with certainty now that the waters have subsided sufficiently that a fairly accurate estimate can be made. The greatest money loss falls on the rice planters. The season had been ideal and the floods came just when harvesting was getting under way. Much rice in the shook was ruined as well as the ripe rice still uncut. While the business districts of this and numerous other places were flooded there was ample time for merchants to move stocks so that the damage was negligible. The railways were heavy losers, as bridges and long sections of road-bed were washed out. Considerable damage also was done to private prop-

SAFETY OF LIFE AT SEA TAKEN UP AT CONFERENCE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—Alex. Johnston, deputy minister of marine and fisheries, has been appointed by the government to represent Canada at the international conference for safety of life at sea, to be held in London, November 12, 1913. Mr. Johnston will sail from Canada on October 28th and will be invested with full power to sign any convention which may be deemed necessary. This conference is one of great importance as the result of the investigations, and inquiries consequent upon the Titanic disaster will be placed before the conference. The British board of trade, it is understood, will have important proposals to make, as will the representatives of the other great shipping nations. It is probable that many of these proposals will be adopted by the government of Canada, acting in conjunction with the British board of trade.

PORT NELSON MEN HAD TO WORK OR LEAVE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—Word reached here to-day from Halifax, that some fifty men sent north by the government for work on the Port Nelson terminal of the Hudson Bay railway, had returned to Halifax on the steamer Boethic. The fifty were for the most part Halifax men. It is stated in explanation of their return that they were unwilling to take part in the work of unloading at night, hurry up conditions which the Port Nelson fleet is working. They were given their choice of doing their share or coming back, and they came back.

The loss of this contingent is not being seriously felt in the Port Nelson operations, as it was quickly offset by the arrival of the crew of the wrecked Cearense, who promptly turned in and helped. No more ships will be sent to Hudson Bay this year by the railways and canals department. Two ships still in the bay will start immediately for their return voyage, as there are no facilities for wintering at Port Nelson. The Boethic, which recently returned, carried with her an official of the Canadian wireless service, who picked out locations for the chain of wireless stations which is to be established along the route of navigation. This chain will not connect with the Atlantic coast stations, but will have a landward connection through the La-pas installation, though there will be communication with the Newfoundland stations at the other end.

FOUR CHARGED WITH COUNTERFEITING

MONTREAL, Oct. 15—Four Germans who, it is alleged, have been engaged for some months in the manufacture of the United States five dollar bills, were arrested just before noon today in Montreal. The arrest came on the climax to six weeks' work in the city by federal secret service officer Nanasse.

It is alleged that the gang is the same one that has been causing considerable uneasiness to the United States government, by their activity in New York and that when the pursuit grew too warm in that city, they migrated to Montreal, about three months ago and have since been pursuing their art in a house on Sturban Street.

GERMANY RICHEST COUNTRY IN EUROPE

BERLIN, Oct. 16—Germany is now the richest country in Europe, with an aggerate wealth of about $74,000,000,000, and an annual income for its people of about $9,524,000,000. Such are the conclusions of Dr. Karl Heifferich, a director of the Deutsche Bank of Germany. He finds that the national wealth of Germany is greater than that of Great Britain or France, as estimated by the economists of those countries, although the latter have a greater wealth per head, owing to their smaller populations. He estimates the wealth of the average German at between $1074 and $1090, compared with an English estimate of $1214 for England, and a French estimate for France of $1405, and with the estimate of the Census Bureau for the United States of $1310.

In earning or income capacity, however, the average German lies between the Englishman and the Frenchman, the German income being estimated at $127, the French (by the French authority) at $122, while the Briton is far in the lead with a income of $194.

One of the most striking features of Dr. Helfferich's calculations, however, is the tremendous growth in the earn-which they soon bring the nation to the same position of financial predominance in Europe as it now possesses in military power. He estimates the annual income of the German nation about 1895 at between $5,250,000,000 to $6,000,000,000; at present, 18 years later, it has grown estimates, to $9,524,000,000, and he claims that if the annual savings of the people and the latent growth ed a total addition to the national wealth of about $2,388,000,000 is registered every year.

CAPTAIN INCH DENIES STEERAGE YARNS

NEW YORK, October 16—Francis Inch, the boyish-looking Briton who commanded the burned steamer Volturno, came to port tonight, bringing with him eighty-seven survivors, passengers and crew of his ill-starred vessel. His story of the disaster, in which 136 lives were lost, had preceded him by wireless, but in a cabin on the Kroonland, which brought him here, Inch told his tale in simply-phrased and modestly-spoken detail that described more vividly than the wireless could picture the panorama of the Volturno's loss and the rescue of more than 500 of those she had on board.

Cowardice there was none on the Volturno, either among officers or crew, Inch said. There was no rush of seamen which made it necessary for him toward them back with his revolver. His only weapon he left in a drawer in his cabin, and it burned with the ship. And no one on board drew a revolver. These statements he intends should refute the stories told by steerage passengers who arrived yesterday on the Grosser Kurfuerst.

The Volturno's master, besides defending his own officers and men, said he had no criticism to make of the tactics of any of the boats that stood by.
