

SERVING CANADIANS

THROUGH CHEMISTRY

"Chemistry?.. I DON'T HANDLE IT!"

YOUR STOREKEEPER may think he doesn't handle chemistry, but everything he sells from costume jewelry to refrigerators, is in whole or in part, a chemical product.

Chemistry is a vital factor in fabrics and foods, leather and toys. It's at the cosmetic counter and in the hardware department. You find it more and more whenever you shop—as nylon hosiery, fabrics and bristles, in new plastic articles and as "Cellophane" wrappings to protect goods and make them more attractive.

The chemical industry never stands still. It continues to create new useful products and to improve many old ones. It contributes to the well-being of all of us... with the C-I-L oval the symbol of an organization devoted to serving Canadians through chemistry.

For instance... RODANT

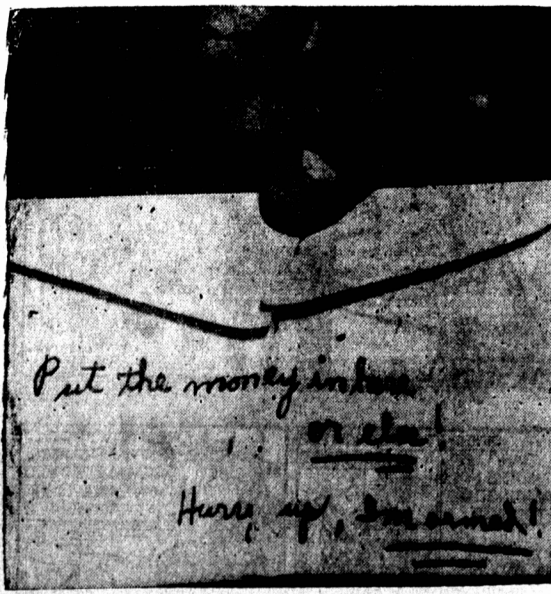

Rats are clever and hard to kill... they have long been a destructive, disease-carrying scourge... but chemistry is resourceful. It comes up now with "Rodant", a tasteless poison—deadly to the common rat. It is a product of Canadian Industries Limited, Head Office, P.O. Box 10, Montreal.

Find Clues to "Note Bandit"

Alexander Morrison, shown here, is suspected of hold-up frustrated by girl. When Frances Ward, teller in Royal Bank, called for help, hold-up man fled.

After asking change for a $100 bill a would-be robber shoved the note shown above into the cage in a Toronto, Ont., bank. Teller Frances Ward's screams frightened the thug away. A few hours later Alexander Morrison was picked up by police and a search of his hotel room netted two "hold-up" notes including the one above. Police said it was the third time the "note bandit" had failed in hold-up attempts.

One-time ace diplomat of Germany, Franz von Papen, seen here under U. S. guard, has been sentenced to eight years in a labor camp and barred from public office for life by a German denazification court. Four months ago the 66-year-old Nazi was acquitted of major war criminal charges by the Nuremberg international tribunal.

BRITISH CANDY RATION CUT Winter ravaged Britain will be forced to undergo another hardship when the candy ration is cut to eight ounces a month, the lowest wartime figure. Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary secretary of the food minister, (above) refused to commit herself to an extra sugar allocation when Anthony Eden requested she promise that candies lost from the ration would be made available later or that surplus sugar be distributed when not used by manufacturers. The British food minister, John Strachey, is at present in Canada discussing the English food situation with Ottawa officials.

Advice to Working Girls: Go North Alaska is Paradise of Good Paying Jobs And Lots of Dates

Words for this picture by NEA Staff Correspondent Bert Brandt are supplied by Lola Jensen of Minnesota, one of Alaska's working girls, who says "I like it here because it's so beautiful." Pictorial snow scene was photographed about 10 miles from Anchorage, Alaska, where Lola works for Civil Service.

By BERT BRANDT NEA Staff Correspondent ANCHORAGE, Alaska — (CP) — If you're a working girl, feeling a little jaded and looking for excitement, a good paying job and lots of dates, then this is just the place for you. Listen to what Evelyn Fitzpatrick, 24, of Sacramento, Cal., has to say about Anchorage after working only six months in the resident engineer's office: "It's wonderful here. It's more like a vacation than a job. Everyone here is so wonderfully care-free. They let tomorrow take care of itself. It's a fine place to relax and get in condition, and a girl is never in want of a date up here. She can go out every night if she wants to. With a ratio of 30 men to one girl, it's a woman's paradise. As if this isn't recommendation enough there is also the matter of salaries as an added inducement to "Go North, young lady, go North." Evelyn has a regular Civil Service rating and gets an additional 25 per cent overseas differential for working in Alaska. This brings her income up to $2870.00 a year, subject to the same income tax as in the U. S. Out of this she pays only $13 per month for a private furnished room in a comfortable barracks. She eats in the civilian cafeteria or the officers' mess halls at nearby Ft. Richardson and pays only 50 cents for a full course meal. Can you equal that in the United States? Clothes are considerably more expensive in Alaska, but most of the girls bring enough to last them for some time, and with 26 days' vacation each year they can always get back to the States for more. The girls sign a contract with the government or the big construction companies operating here for either one or two years. Transportation is paid both ways unless you leave before the contract is up, and you can renew the contract. There are about 400 civilian girls from the States working in Anchorage and they seem to be enjoying themselves immensely. Lola Jensen, 23, of Thief River Falls, Minn., is a clerk in the District Engineers Office at $2800 per year. She says "I like it here because it's so beautiful. There's something about the place that gets you. Where else can you see a baseball game played in daylight at one o'clock in the morning? I came here because I wanted to see new things and meet new people, and I've certainly done both. I could rave on and on about the scenery and, ah, the men." The girls agree that Anchorage is no place for a "mamby-pamby, but if she has a bit of the frontier spirit of adventure and a hardy constitution that can withstand the temperatures that seldom get lower than 25 below in winter and get up to about 75 above in the summer, then she will love it. Few have had trouble getting accustomed to the climate. As one of the working girls said, "I'm going to stay up here until I've saved a nice nest egg or landed a man. It looks like I'm going to be able to do both." It sounds like the answer to a jaded secretary's prayers.
