I am only learning to think and my repertoire consists of a few odds and ends of the moral and intellectual sort, for which the editor of a daily paper may possibly have no use at all. But I am like a preacher who has got a bit out of hand, and am simply resolved that the public shall know that I am alive and have a right to figure in things. I have half a hope, too, that the editor will give me a column or so, for to see one's own strongest words in print must be comforting to a spirit sore wounded by unaccustomed slights.

I would like everybody to know me and respect me, and I have an impression that even the wisest men in my community, to say nothing of the ordinary unlabelled striver, would be wiser after consulting me than before, and that all would do well to regard this perhaps too clamant boldness of mine as sanctified or divinely inspired audacity. Not that I would have anybody believe that I have no private misgivings. I am a self-made man (is not every man self-made—or self-married?) and I am no stranger to the learning and the greatness of attainment which can be wrested from a narrow income. There may have been some common clay in the stuff out of which I built myself up to my present stature. There may have been, I say, at all events I am a self-made man and I insist upon having this fact placed to my credit and also the further fact that, being self-made, I am self-reliant and able to take care of myself whatever may happen. It may be true that the self-made man is sure to adore his maker. Tennyson wrote of a person who went to church to worship his own great self, as I guess. And there have been times when I have half-fared best I, too, might be suffering from an attack of that variety of insanity which is vulgarly known as swathead. I have certainly known moments when my self-reverence has been rather loosely linked with self-control, and when it has somewhat overcrowded my self-

Changing flags—Sir Wilfrid Laurier abandons Reciprocity for the time being knowledge. During these hours I have been touchy and testy and dead set on saying some plain things right out in the direction of those at whom I have taken offence. But then I never swear excepting by proxy. When I do indulge in language and use hot Scotch, my Billingsgate is never profane or obscene, but such as may be uttered in the presence of the gentler sex. Still, I get mad through and through all the same.

I am a seriously minded man and like to be taken seriously. I am aware, too, that when a man has an attack of the kind of vertigo to which I have referred he never is taken seriously by unprejudiced people, and that this is precisely as it should be. Perhaps a little less self-esteem and a little more self-control would not be a bad thing for either myself or others. But a high-spirited man does get a lot of enjoyment out of vigorous self-assertion while the game is on.

Nobody is more fully persuaded than I am that the present movement for securing total abstinence from intoxicating beverages all over our province during the further continuance of the war was worth organizing and getting on its feet. No finer or more promising scheme has been hatched here for many a day. And none but a snob would say that it is one whit worthier or more desirable in itself on account of the leadership in connection with it, of our King—"God bless him." Each human action and each human movement finds its own rightness or wrongness, its own helpfulness or harmfulness, and not in the position, whether exalted or lowly, of him who may first propose it or lead in it. I believe in the lowly Christ, and in Him as crucified, because He initiated a programme for human lives that was quite beyond the wisdom and piety of the leaders of His people. Our sovereign took the step he did because he thought it a good one, and we approve and follow him in it for the same reason, and not as mere servile imitators or sycophants. It finds a response in our manhood.

Already the movement has captured the political and religious high places of our Island. Its leaders are in it as citizens and not as either priests, preachers or partisans. Cross as I may have been because all the honours I could distil from me, I shall not deny that. I must confess, too, that no other organization or interest is compromised or hindered by this one. The Temperance Alliance has obtained the same number of amendments to the Prohibition Act that would have been granted had nothing in this direction been attempted, and the future of its work has not been imperilled in any way, nor its leaders compromised through being drawn into association with a Government which they had been fighting, or an Opposition which had not been very conspicuous in their support in the Legislature. In short, anger against the movement itself is quite out of place, and the wisdom with which it has been guided so far is not easily impugned.

SIX KILLED IN AUTO MISHAPS
LAKE HOPATONG, N. J., April 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Terhune of Passaic were crushed to death today under an automobile in which they were riding to their summer home. The car plunged down an embankment at Notch Point and both were pinned beneath it. Their 6-year-old son, the other occupant of the car, was thrown clear of the wreck and escaped with bruises.
EGG HARBOR, N. J., April 18.—Benjamin L. Strat, member of a firm of underwear manufacturers in Philadelphia, bearing his name, was killed; Meyer Myerson, of same firm, received a concussion of the brain, and Harry M. Gosh, also of Philadelphia, suffered brain bruises here today when an automobile in which they were riding overturned, pinning them under it. The accident occurred when the car made a sharp turn in attempting to avoid another car on a narrow road.
TYRONE, Penn., April 18.—Dr. C. E. Shaffer, of Windber, was killed, and five others injured in an automobile accident near here today. The car was a new one belonging to Dr. Shaffer, and it was the first time he drove it. In endeavoring to pass another machine, while going at a rapid pace, he turned too far to the side of the road and ran into a bank. The car overturned several times, hurling its occupants to the ground.

In a collision between an automobile and a street car today, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pare were killed, their 14-year-old daughter, Marie, was dangerously injured, and Frank Barritt was less seriously hurt. William Sharpless, owner and driver of the car, was not injured.

NEW RULE IN CONNECTION WITH CANTEENS IN MILITARY CAMPS.
OTTAWA, April 22.—The old canteen system in connection with military camps in Canada has been abolished by General Hughes, but there will still be canteens.
What is meant by the change is that henceforward no outside persons will be allowed the privilege of running canteens for the convenience of the soldiers, but the regiments will establish and run their own canteens. Any profits that accrue therefore will not go to outside parties but will go to the regiments and undue charges will be eliminated.

In accordance with General Hughes' practice since he became Minister of Militia no intoxicating liquors will be allowed in the canteens or in fact in the camps at all.
The new order abolishing the old canteen system applies generally throughout Canada.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lines written on the death of Mr. Herbert A. Vessey, who died at his home, in Bonshaw, April 22nd, 1915, after a few days' illness. In loving memory of my dear and only brother—
One sad long year today has passed,
Yes, we remember well,
We watched beside your dying bed,
To take our last farewell,
With aching hearts we watched you die,
As your spirit took its flight,
Away to that home beyond the skies
Where there is never any night.
We dared not bid you stay,
But you are not forgotten, dear,
For as God sends up each day,
Our thoughts will ever linger
In the churchyard where you lay.
Oh Herbert, dear, we miss you,
There is a vacant chair,
But we hope to meet in Heaven,
There'll be no parting there,
Precious darling he has left us,
Let us, yes, for evermore,
But we hope to meet our loved one
On that bright and happy shore,
Written by his sister Katie, April 22, 1915. 9585-
