Tells Own Story Of Copper Find

Mr. H. H. Crossman, interviewed by The Guardian, reports discovery of rich copper deposits at Port Dupont, Newfoundland.

"With plenty of money for development and with brains to handle the situation there are millions in it," stated Mr. H. H. Crossman, Southport, in reference to his discovery, recently reported in The Guardian, of rich copper deposits at Port Dupont, Newfoundland, 12 miles north-west of Port aux Basques. An island which has the appearance of being a solid mass of copper ore 150 feet high and large enough to form two claims; also six claims, 11 miles around, which have better indications of gold and copper than any other section of Newfoundland, and unmistakable traces of silver and oil are the factors which have given birth to hopes of immense mining developments in Port Dupont Bay. Mr. Crossman informed a Guardian reporter Saturday. The bay although narrow at the entrance expands into a fairly large sheet of water about 60 miles around. The claims on the shore are in all about 2 miles long and extend for a considerable distance inland. Of this distance tapped for metal a mile and a quarter bore evidence of gold and copper deposits. The main lead runs east and west almost at right angles to the shore and downward at an angle of about 45 degrees. Mr. Crossman, who recently returned from Newfoundland, states he has been offered $60,000 for his claim if it comes up to expectations by the Lake George Mining Co., St. John, N. B., which financed the successful trip of discovery, and which now has charge of the filling of the claims and other business of the venture. The presence of gold in no small quantities has given additional value to the claims. The story of the exploit goes back 41 years to the time when Mr. Crossman was running a lobster steamer "Scout," for Colonel Davis, deceased, formerly of Charlottetown, who owned a lobster factory in the vicinity

EDINBURGH REVIEW IN EXISTENCE FOR 127 YEARS

LONDON, October 20—After 127 years of publication, The Edinburgh Review, one of the leading periodicals in the English language, has ceased to exist. The familiar blue and buff covers which appeared four times a year will no longer be seen, because its editors assert "modern readers are not willing to wait a quarter of a year for observations on life, letters, history and society."

When the Review was founded in 1802, Edinburgh rivalled London as the literary arbiter of Great Britain. It began its career as a ferocious idol smasher, attacking Wordsworth, Coleridge and Goethe for spreading "new fangled ideas." Macaulay, as one of its editors, was for a time the Review's "chief executioner"; Hazlett, Thackeray, Carlyle and Scott were notable contributors, but Scott broke away in 1869 to help establish the rival Quarterly Review, which still is flourishing.

The operation ratio for July was 122.04 per cent., a drop from 129.94 per cent. in July, 1928, and 135.49 per cent. for the same month in 1927. For the seven months from January to July, inclusive, the deficits on net operating revenues were as follows: 1929, $2,688,401; 1928, $3,010,855; 1927, $2,866,006.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATES IN EVERY RIDING

Ontario Election Contest Has Officially Started.

(Canadian Press) TORONTO, Oct. 20—Marked by the usual last minute surprises, by confusion as to the legality of nominations in three constituencies and by five definite acclamations, Ontario has closed its official nomination book and awaits the verdict of the electors on October 30. When returning officers at two o'clock yesterday afternoon declared nominations closed 239 candidates had been named to contest the 112 constituencies. No riding was overlooked by the Conservatives and all five acclamations fell into the ranks of the government party. Eighty-seven officially endorsed Liberals are in the field and ten official designated Progressives. Between these two parties there are a few instances of reciprocal endorsement. Thirty other candidates of various political affiliations have been nominated. As the election battle swings into its final phase, guerrilla warfare threatens in eighteen constituencies where other than straight two party fights are in progress. There will be two four-cornered struggles and no fewer than 16 three-cornered contests have made their appearance.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST 42 MEN INVOLVED IN BIG U. S. LIQUOR RINGS

Syndicates Alleged To Have Been Operating on Gigantic Scale Out Of New York, Detroit And Chicago, Making Millions In Profits.

(Canadian Press) DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 20.—Federal indictments against 42 men said to have been involved in two huge liquor syndicates operating out of New York, Detroit and Chicago, were returned by a grand jury. Fifteen of the alleged conspirators already have been arraigned, according to John R. Watkins, district attorney. All but eight of those mentioned in the indictments are Detroit residents. The others live in Chicago, New York, Toledo and small towns in Ohio and New York, according to federal authorities. Evidence against the two syndicates was obtained by special prohibition agents working under direction of Dwight E. Davis, agent in charge in Detroit. "The special agents, said Gregory H. Frederick, chief assistant district attorney, "assisted in running liquor from Canada to the United States and also received compensation from liquor chiefs for hauling liquor into Detroit as well as to Chicago and Toledo." The agents also assisted in loading contraband on freight cars consigned to New York, according to Frederick. At all times the government men acted as bonafide rum runners and enjoyed the confidence of their associates. The two syndicates are designated by the agents as the Sam Roenfield and Sam Miller rings. (Continued on Page 3)
