Awakened Woman

—By—ELINORE BARRY

like that," thought Joyce. Sam, returning at the moment, caught sight of her expression. He looked puzzled and asked, "What's the matter, Mrs. Packard? Anything wrong with the car?"

"Nothing," except that it's all wrong," retorted Joyce, continuing to smile. She felt recklessly inclined to go on and tell him what she really thought about it.

"Well, I'd get tired of ever saw colors myself after a bit," said Sam frankly, "but it's a darn good car. Shall I back her out for you?"

"No, thank you, not going out to-day." She still lingered, however, as if she were not quite sure of her decision.

Suddenly she remembered something she had wanted, and forgetting everything else she asked eagerly, "Do you know where I could get a dog?"

"This time the astonishment on Sam's tanned face was so unmistakable that Joyce realized that she had at last really surprised him. "But see, Mrs. Packard, I thought you didn't like dogs," he exclaimed. "Well, I've changed my mind," returned Joyce, embarrassment making her speak so fast that Sam seemed to take her answer as a rebuke.

"Well, I don't know exactly what I do want," said Joyce, better having wished she had given the matter more thought before getting into this way.

"Why don't you go to Allen Kennels and pick out something you like?" suggested Sam after a moment.

"Oh, I don't want to be bothered," she replied, hoping this would sound enough like the capricious Frills to pass. "Can't you get me one somewhere around here, so I can have it today?"

"Well, I know a dog I think I could get you," exclaimed Sam, smiling. "It's the cutest little white and black Boston terrier I've had about two years old and smart as a whip. Belongs to people named March. They're going to China and don't want to take the pup. Like to have me see if I can get him for you?"

"Oh, yes, do," said Joyce. "Do you want to say I'd better have some money? I can write you a check."

"I don't think they'll take any money," said Sam, "but I'll find a good home for the dog."

"Get him as soon as you can, will you?" asked Joyce, smiling at Sam. "I'm really glad to see him. Now that I've decided to have a dog, I want it right away."

"Sure, I'll go right away, Mrs. Packard. I was just going to drive down to get the dog for you."

Joyce wished she might ride with him while he did his errand, but realizing the impossibility of such an outing she returned reluctantly and went back to the house where she found that the morning mail had arrived. She sorted out the ones addressed to her. One from Packard and carried them down to the far end of the garden to a secluded corner hidden from the house.

The first one was a short note, carelessly scrawled in a handwriting she seemed to have seen before. "Sorry you didn't like seeing any of the gang honey, I can't stay this any longer, I thank God, Nell is away for some time. I can't get over your love this morning, Frills. Call me up tomorrow, please. C."

"That's the same 'C' who wrote about the house party," thought Joyce, and it must be the Mrs. Emery who returned yesterday.

The next letter on heavy masculine stationery began: "Star baby! Joyce grinned to herself at this peculiar opening. "I love you," murmured sarcastically, and read on with interest.

"I'm sitting in my room at the window that faces where you are, and think of you all day. I can't settle to anything else. I'm bitterly disappointed that I can't be with you now, this minute. I had been living for a day, and now I'm lonely as the devil. You're to be better tomorrow, afternoon, sweetheart, I thought I'd seen you in all your different moods, but you had me guessing today. I never felt so puzzled about you before. You seemed to have slipped away from me entirely. I can't quite get it yet. It makes me restless now, and I'm tempted to try to get to you tonight in spite of everything. I'll be worried until I find you looking more like yourself."

"Why are you keeping me off like this? I'm pretty rotten at writing, you know, beloved, but when I'm all over again—and going to tell you how I adore every inch of you, Won't you call me up right away? I want to know how you're sept and how you feel now. I'll send you my Frills, from her adoring Mait."

"Too much fervor!" murmured Joyce critically. She felt only a detached sort of disgust, as if she were reading a vulgar love letter addressed to another. She shook the letter impatiently. "All your fine passion is wasted on me, Mr. Maitland!" she said aloud.

"Well, let's see what else I have here? After Mait's passionate complaint on everything else will seem tame."

The next letter made her sit up with a jerk. There was no address, and Joyce hastily turned the envelope over and examined the postmark curiously. "New York N. Y.," she finally made out.

In an angular, precise handwriting, in pale ink the astonishing letter read:

"My dear Florence: Although you seem to lack interest in hearing about the baby, I feel it no less than my duty to keep you informed of her health. She is a most engaging little mite, showing, even at her tender age, a decided personality and charm."

"Although truth compels me to admit that you are probably not the most suitable person to bring up a child, still I cannot understand how you can possibly feel that the sort of pleasures which fill your life are more important, more satisfying, than the care and bringing up of this little baby. I will send you a few lines each month. Please extend

W. C. T. U. NOTES

A FENCE OR AN AMBULANCE

"Twas a dangerous cliff as they were confessed, Through a walk near its crest was so pleasant, But over its terrible edge there had slipped A duke and full many a peasant; So the people said something would have to be done, But their projects did not at all tally. Some said, "Put a fence around the edge of the cliff," Some, "An ambulance down in the valley."

But the cry for ambulance carried the day, For it spread through the neighboring city; A fence may be useful or not, it is true, But each heart became brimful of pity For those who slipped over that dangerous cliff; And the dwellers in highway and alley Gave pounds and gave pence—not to put up a fence, But an ambulance down in the valley.

Then an old sage remarked: "It's a wonder to me, That people give far more attention To repairing results than to stopping the cause, While they do much better aim at prevention. Let us stop at its source all this mischief, cried he, "Come neighbours and friends, let us rally; If the cliff we will fence we might almost dispense With the ambulance down in the valley."

"Oh, he's a fanatic!" the others rejoined; "Dispense with the ambulance? Never! He'd dispense with all charities, too, if he could; No, we'll support them forever! Aren't we picking folks up just as fast as they fall? And shall this man dictate to us? Shall he tell us how to behave? Why should people with sense stop to put up a fence While their ambulance works in the valley?"

But a sensible few, who are practical too, Will not bear with such nonsense much longer; They believe that prevention is the best and surest cure, And their party will soon be the stronger.

Encourage them then with your hearty voice and pen, And while the philanthropists dally They scorn all pretense and put up a stout fence On the cliff that hangs over the valley.

Better guide well the young than reclaim them when old, For the voice of true wisdom is calling: "To the fallen is good, but 'tis best To prevent other people from falling." Better close up the source of temptation and crime Than deliver from dungeon and gall; Better put a strong fence round the top of the cliff, Than an ambulance down in the valley.

ALCOHOL QUIZ: IS ALCOHOL A FOOD?

1. What is a food? The dictionary says: "Food is whatever feeds, sustains or nourishes."

2. Name the Different Kinds of Foods

(1) Proteins, the structure building foods.

(2) Fats and carbohydrates, the energy-furnishing foods, providing energy which when not needed for immediate use can be stored in the body for future use.

3. How are Foods Stored For Use?

Fats are stored under the skin, and in tissue spaces; carbohydrates are stored in muscles; salts are stored in bones.

4. Is Alcohol Stored in the Body? Alcohol cannot be digested; it remains in the blood as alcohol, until it is burned up or gotten rid of in some way.

5. Does Alcohol Provide Heat in the Body? Alcohol burns in the body, giving off heat as it unites with oxygen. A teaspoonful of alcohol can give as much heat as a lump of sugar. Since no more than two teaspoonfuls of alcohol can be burned up in the body in an hour, the action of alcohol as a fuel-food is very limited. No matter how much alcohol is taken into the system, its maximum food values does not exceed the value of eating two lumps of sugar per hour.

6. Does Alcohol Provide Energy For Work? It is doubtful whether any of the energy given by alcohol can actually be used in muscular work. Also its action as a food is more than counterbalanced by its action as a poison.

DRUNKENNESS A REAL DANGER TO DEMOCRACY

"Drunkenness is the real danger to democracy," said Rev. J. W. Sophie's faithful greeting to Neil Spellbound, Joyce read this letter, which flowed along without a single paragraph to break its smooth stilted sentences. The significance of its last sentence as such an unexpected blow that she felt weak and shaken.

"A baby! It can't be true! I never even heard of that. Could Frills have had a baby in that time? Let me see, yes, it could have happened as much as a day or six months old! Oh dear, Oh dear, to think of me having a baby. . . ."

She sat and read the letter again and again trying to realize the incredible fact that she, Joyce Ashton, was a mother.

Joyce glanced up and saw a man coming down the path toward her. She took a deep breath to restore her courage and looked him over with surprising calm as she hastily put the letters aside.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A single day's fighting on two fronts had topped at least 75 air-craft out of the skies, while the Royal Air Force has lost 18 — a cheering result for Britons who have been warned they may expect heavy raids from now on.

Although in the United Kingdom apparently are convinced that the German attempt at a blitzkrieg may not be far away, for they sighted the German bombers during the night, advising the public how to behave in the event of invasion. The advice was summarized in the sentence "stay where you are." In other words don't clog the roads and hamper troop movements.

The Air Ministry reported early this morning that Royal Air Force fighters had knocked down 53 German aircraft out of a total of roughly 80 which raided the southeast yesterday and had seriously damaged 10 more. However, later information showed the figures too conservative and the total downed was raised to at least 60, while a great many more were known to have been damaged.

Over the Libyan desert Royal Air Force and Italian sky forces tangled in the biggest aerial battle fought in Africa and at the end 15 Italian machines were sprayed out over the baking sands. Two British aircraft were lost.

Belief that blitzkrieg was near was supported by more than one bit of evidence. The ferocity of the German air attack after a lull, gave rise to the belief that the preliminary pounding stage had arrived. This stage was expected to last for several days, perhaps as long as a fortnight, in a German effort to soften British resistance to a cross-channel troop shipment.

The Italian activity in North Africa, apparently due in part to desperation of troops deprived of supplies and water by the British.

CANADIAN WHITE RIBBON TID

In Italy 43,000 liquor stores have been closed. In Japan the sale of liquor to anyone under 21 years of age is forbidden. In Jugoslavia anti-alcohol instruction is given in schools.

In Great Britain there is a great increase in the number of members of parliament who are total abstainers. In the U. S. the brewers are alarmed by the numerous instances of cities voting for local option. In Canada a change is evident. People are waking to the fact that government control has failed. In British Columbia the public debt has increased from $34,000,000 to $149,000,000, and yet since 1921 a total of $250,000,000 has been spent on liquor. Insanity has more than doubled. In August Victoria voted against beer parlors. In Quebec the Catholic church has become aroused by the fact that the people of that province have consumed 51 per cent of the beer used in Canada with only 28 per cent of the population. Quebec has spent $700,000,000 on liquor in the past fifteen years.

Frances Willard's program for the organized women of the world: "To educate the young; to form a better public opinion; to reform as possible by religious, ethical and scientific means the drinking habit; to seek the transforming power of Divine grace for ourselves and for all for whom we work."

blockade, was observed to have been timed with the German onslaught in a move to divide British attention.

The Germans, too, apparently were seeking to destroy as much British shipping as possible in order to make their counter blockade effective.

The effectiveness of the British blockade of practically all Europe was undoubted but numerous stories of acute starvation in former allied or neutral countries were believed premature and probably launched by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels.

Goebbels, a smart propagandist in any league appears to be trying to create the impression that Britain is heartlessly starving the innocent people of Europe and so bring pressure, particularly from the United States, to create gates in the blockade.

It will probably be pretty awful on the continent this winter. But the British attitude is that it is just too bad. The blockade is one of Britain's most effective weapons and the axis has proclaimed a "total" war.

It is unfortunate that total war must involve innocent peoples.
