Red Cross Drive Meets Wholehearted Response

On Monday of this week, thousands upon thousands of recruits to the Canadian Red Cross army of volunteer workers marched out in full strength to rally their fellow Canadians to the support of the national war drive.

With the battle cry, "The need is urgent—dig in and give," they are spreading their efforts as a dragnet over the entire Dominion, large and small, to make up the three million dollars which Red Cross officials state must be obtained if the organization is to embark upon a duplication—and enlargement—of the work it did during the last war.

In the few days that have passed since the campaign was launched, it has been possible for canvassers only to scratch the surface of the territory that is to be covered thoroughly to realize the objective. But gratification has been expressed at Red Cross headquarters already that people have sent in their contributions without waiting for voluntary workers to call. It is hoped that others will follow their example.

Canvassers report enthusiastic reception from those already approached. Particularly wholehearted has been the response from veterans of the last war who benefited from Red Cross work. Some of these men are not well off financially and have given all they could afford. It is reported.

Included among the thousands of other people who have gone deep into their pockets to support the war drive are parents and wives of men who lay wounded in hospitals in the last war and whose progress was reported faithfully to anxious relatives in this Dominion by Canadian Red Cross voluntary workers in England.

Men who were prisoners of war are also generous in their response. It is said, for some of them claim that they would have starved in prison had it not been for Red Cross supplies.

The campaign was launched on Monday following messages of inspiration broadcast the day before by Lord Tweedsmuir and Prime Minister Mackenzie King. A cable message was delivered, too, from the Duke of Gloucester, who stated that headquarters of the British Red Cross, of which he is president, had been established behind the Maginot Line in France.

Red Cross officials state the belief that there will be an even greater demand for service during the present conflict than there was in the last war. They point out that hospitals must be built and equipped in England and France; ambulances must be provided and supplies must be sent to the men at the front. They emphasize the urgent necessity of surgical supplies and dressings for military hospitals. Refugees are being and must continue to be assisted, it is said.

Attention is drawn to the fact that despite the great burden of war work, the Canadian Red Cross cannot afford to neglect its peacetime work. Otherwise, thousands of people right here in Canada would be in isolated districts many of them in isolated districts where other medical assistance cannot be obtained—would suffer.

"From the response so far to our appeal," states Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Canadian High Commissioner to London, who is chairman of the national campaign committee, "I believe that the people of Canada fully realize this fact and are ready to do all in their power to assist us in carrying on with our peace-time and war work."

WINTER SPORTS IN JASPER PARK

JASPER, Alta., Nov. 14—Only downhill course in Canada which meets requirements of the International Federation of skiers, a new three mile run from the summit of the famous Whistlers Range to within a mile of the Alpine village is ready for inaugural competitions in January. Surveyed by the Swiss professional, Peter Valda, the course boasts a vertical drop of 4600 feet, half of which is over the smooth Alp lands above timberline and the lower portion a rough a series of meadows and a trail averaging more than 100 feet in width.

At Columbia ice fields, south of Jasper, more than two feet of fresh powder snow already covers the rolling lower slopes and skiing parties from Edmonton and Calgary have visited the region each weekend since September. The new highway from Jasper makes it possible for skiers to motor to a 8500 foot altitude, thus eliminating any packing in of equipment to the Chalet base. It was on Mt. Athabaska of the ice field group that Gertrude Wepsala, Dominion July and August as skiing is available there 12 months of the year. Heavy snowfalls have also greeted skiers in the Tonquin Valley site of the 1939 ski camp of the Alpine Club of Canada and in the Maligne and Shovel Pass regions. Early reservations indicate that numerous Americans and skiers from eastern Canada will journey to Jasper during the winter. It was stated today by R. Creelman, passenger traffic manager of the Canadian National Railways, Western Region.
