If you want your home thoroughly clean and healthy, have it done scientifically. Ordinary disinfectants give only a false sense of security. Microbes and bacteria lurk beyond the reach of the most particular housewife. Owing to the late arrival of the boat last evening the management of Wonderland were unable to present Brown as previously advertised. The stage settings required to put on this act, could not possibly have been placed and no one regretted the fact more than the management. However, Harrison Moffatt, unexpectedly arrived in a timely aid, and put on their splendid specialty, which certainly "went" with a vim and brightness most fetching. Miss Moffatt possesses a most tuneful and sweet-soprano voice, singing her way at once into the hearts of her listeners. Her companion was good and kept the comedy running without cessation. They are good entertainers along with Buster, who goes on without fail this evening, and will complete an excellent bill.

E. E. Haines simply took the audience by storm in his rendition of the Palmis. His magnificent soprano voice, his treat and his persistent encores showed the full appreciation of the audience. It was a grand show at Wonderland last night, and the balance of the week means splendid entertainment throughout.

The North Sydney Herald has the following:—George Brown, the elusive Prince Edward Islander, who is wanted by the Sydney police, on a charge of robbing $300 from a fellow workman, had a hot chase by Officer Mike McGrath Sunday night. In fact, he had a close call of capture by the vigilant sleuth ever since the latter "struck the trail," up to yesterday, when Brown seemed to vanish. Saturday night the police here had an intimation that Brown was in town. The information reached the ears of the police as a result of a quarrel between Brown and a man named Moore, in whose house he had been hiding, situated near Prince Street. It seems Moore and his visitor had been drinking, the result of which was a quarrel finally ending by the former leaving the house and notifying the police. When the latter reached the house the bird had flown leaving behind him an overcoat containing a bottle of whisky. During the officers' hunt about the locality, Brown worked his way back to the house and secured the coat and liquor. All that night, and in fact ever since, the police are looking for Brown. Monday he was seen a couple of miles the other side of the North Sydney Junction walking west. Telegrams were then sent along the line to be on the lookout for the supposed robber, and it is expected his arrest will follow.

Rumor has it that a young married woman of Charlottetown who has been visiting her sister in New York, who is ill, received a telegram on Thursday last stating that her husband in Charlottetown was dying. Right on the heels of this telegram came another announcing that he was dead. The telegram purported to have been signed by the mother of the supposed deceased husband. The young woman as may well be supposed, was much surprised to hear this startling news, and telegraphed that she would leave immediately for Charlottetown and not to bury him until she would arrive. She sent telegrams to this effect both to her mother-in-law and to her father. The latter on receiving the despatch saw that something was wrong but it was too late to do anything and his daughter arrived home on Saturday in mourning only to learn that her husband was alive and well. Proceedings it is said, are to be taken to punish the person who perpetrated this cruel hoax.
