Opening Lecture by Rev. T. F. Fullerton

CAPE COLONY CAMPAIGN

Operations of Gatacre, French and Methuen Vividly Sketched.

If it was fifteen minutes past the hour before Rev. Mr. Fullerton began his introductory lecture on the war in St. James Hall last evening it was solely because the people were still coming and the hall had long been full. Extra seats were set in the aisles and open spaces which were quickly filled, many remained standing and some were unable to get in the hall. The lecture of something over an hour was a lucid and informing talk on the opening stages of the war in Cape Colony, covering the operations of Gatacre and French in the regions round about Stormberg and Colerburg, and Methuen's advance from De

REV. T. F. FULLERTON.

Aar towards Kimberley. Within the latter were the important battles of Belmont, Gras Pan, Modder River, Magersfontein and others. Vivid pictures of battle scenes and portraits of military men of note enlivened and illustrated the text. The reverend lecturer showed the utmost familiarity with the operations of the war, and held the undivided attention of his auditory to the close. The next lecture of this most valuable and instructive series, to be delivered a fortnight hence, will deal with the first stages of the campaign in Natal.

A Telegram Received Announces Death of Angus Nicholson of Stanchel and Well Known in Charlottetown.

A telegram to Mr. Angus Nicholson of Stanchel, Lot 67, on last Wednesday morning conveyed the sad intelligence of the death of his brother John M. Nicholson of Wilcox, Arizona and that his body was being sent to his home.

Mr. Nicholson was a son of the late Allan Nicholson of Stanchel and a brother of Donald Nicholson of Springton and Mrs. Donald Stewart of Hartsville. Mr. Nicholson had many friends in this city where he lived during the last few years he was on the Island doing business for the New York Life Insurance Co. Since going to the Pacific Coast four years ago he has carried on a drug business in partnership with his brother Dr. Nicholson, formerly of Clifton, New London, but now of that place.

Mr. Nicholson was for a number of years one of our most successful school teachers teaching in different parts of the Island. To the bereaved family, relatives and friends THE GUARDIAN tenders its sincerest sympathy.

Live Within Your Means.

I don't like stinginess I don't like economy, when it comes down to rags and starvation. I have no sympathy with the notion that a poor man, or a working man should hitch himself to a post and stand still, while the rest of the world moves forward. It is no man's duty to deny himself every amusement, every luxury, every recreation, every comfort, that he may get rich. It is no man's duty that he should make an iceberg of himself—to shut his eyes and ears to the sufferings of his fellows—and to deny himself any enjoyment which results from generous actions merely that he may hoard wealth for his heirs to quarrel about.

But there is economy which is every man's duty, and which is especially commendable in the man who struggles with poverty—an economy which is consistent with happiness, and which must be practiced, if the poor man would secure independence.

It is almost every man's privilege, and it becomes his duty to live within his means not to hp to them.—Wealth does not make the man, and should never be taken into account in our judgment of men. But competence should be secured when it can be; not so much for others to look upon, or to raise us in the estimation of our neighbors, as to secure the consciousness of independence and the constant satisfaction which is derived from its acquirements and possession.

I would like to impress this single fact upon the mind of every laboring man who may peruse this short article: that it is possible for him to rise above poverty; and that the path to independence, though beset with wits and self-sacrifice, is much pleasanter to the traveller than any one he can enter upon. The man who feels that he is earning more than he is spending, will walk the streets with a lighter heart, and enter his home with a much more cheerful countenance, than he who spends as he goes, or falls gradually behind his necessities in acquiring the means of meeting them. Next to the slavery of intemperance, there is no slavery more galling than that of poverty and indebtedness. The man who is everybody's debtor, is everybody's slave, and in a much worse condition than he who serves a single master.

For the sake of the present then, as well as for the sake of the future, I would most earnestly urge upon every working man, to live within his means. Let him lay by something every day—if but a penny, let it be a penny—it is better than nothing, infinitely better than running into debt a penny a day, or a penny a week. If he can earn one dollar, let him try fairly and faithfully the experience of living on ninety cents—he will like it. "People will laugh." Let them laugh. "They will call me stingy." Better call you stingy, than say you do not pay your debts. "They will wonder why I have not better furniture, live in a finer house, and attend concerts and the play house." Let them wonder for a while; it won't hurt them, and certainly it won't hurt you. By and by, you can have a fine house, and furniture of your own, and they will wonder again, and some billing and fussing around you, like so many pleased fools. Take my word for it as well as the word of others. Try the experiment. Live within your means.

are equally influenced by the almost magical pain-subduing power of Nerviline—equal in medicinal value to five times the quantity of any other Rheumatic remedy. Penetrates at once through the tissues reaches the source of the disease and drives it out. Nerviline is undoubtedly the king of pain for it is unequalled by any remedy in the world. Your money back if you do not find it so. Druggists sell it.

I. "Where has little sister gone to? asked a dear little Tignish girl of her father.

"To Heaven, my dear," replied the parent.

"And where has brother Jack gone to?"

"To Summerside, dear."

"How far is Summerside from Heaven?"

"Oh," said the man with a deep sigh, "there are no figures big enough to express the distance."

II. Just as a traveller was writing his name on the register of a Halifax hotel, a bed-bug appeared and took its way across the page. The man paused and remarked: "I've been bled by Charlottetown flies, bitten by Antigonish spiders, and interviewed by St. John graybacks; but I'll be darned if I was ever in a place before where the bed-bugs looked over the hotel register to find where your room was!"

III. "Do you know what becomes of boys who steal and tell lies?" said a Georgetown divine sternly to a street urchin.

"Yep," replied the lad, "when they gets to be men they become politicians and lawyers." The lad had evidently been reading the newspapers.

IX. "I never was so insulted in my life!" exclaimed a Souris lass.

"What did he do?" asked her dearest friend. "We were all alone and he threatened to kiss me." "Well!" "Well, we were all alone and he didn't do it."

V. "Do you see that house down there?" asked the proprietor of a Montague hotel, pointing to a building some distance down street. "Yes, I see it," replied the journeyman. "What about it?" "Nothing much," replied the hotel man, "only there isn't a man in this village that dares go near that house after sundown."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed the man of samples. "Haunted I suppose?" "Worse than that," replied the other. "The village band practices there every night."

VI. A Tignish doctor had a very peculiar case the other day. He attended a grass widow who is afflicted with hay-fever.

VII. My friend Funnicus Funnyclove wishes me to publish the following wants: (1) A pair of suspenders for the breeches of promise. (2) A barber to shave the face of the earth. (3) A mosquito-bar for the bed of the ocean, and another for the cradle of the deep. (4) A dentist to work on the jaws of death. (5) Sea horses to feed from the trough of the sea. (6) A few seeds from the flower of speech. (7) A pen that will write with inky darkness. (8) A pair of corsets for the waist of time.

VIII. A certain son of the "ould son," who lives in Georgetown, went out last Thursday on a lark to celebrate the advent of a new era. He didn't get home till 2 o'clock in the morning, and was barely in the house before a nurse rushed up and uncovering a bunch of soft goods, showed him twins. The Irishman looked up at the clock which said two, then at the twins in the nurse's arms, and said: "Oim not superstitious, but thank the powers that Oi didn't come home at twelve!"

IX. A young Benedict in Charlottetown, was asked by his intimate friend as to how he was getting on with his new wife.

"Well," replied the young man muckly, "All I've got to say is that I wish my mother-in-law was an old maid."

X. Years ago on a cold wintry morning a country school-master journeyed to Summerside. On driving into the yard of the Hotel where he had decided to "put up," a youthful descendant of the Emerald Isle rushed out and was thus addressed by the traveller:—"Adolescents! Unbitch the quadruped from the vehicle. Stabilize him. Give him an adequate supply of the nutritious element. And when the Aurora Borealis adorns the horizon I shall amply reward you for your amiable hospitality." The boy rushed into the house exclaiming: "Dad! Dad! Come here quick! There's a Dutchman in the yard."
