Happenings of The Week

Despite the note of austerity the marriage of Princess Elizabeth and Lt. Philip Mountbatten will be a joyous one.

The return to the Palace after the ceremony will be by the same route which will be lined along its entire length by contingents of the three services.

Princess Elizabeth will be attended by eight bridesmaids and two pages. The number of bridesmaids follows tradition.

Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten has been received into membership of the Church of England.

Miss Katherine Paton, daughter of Lt. Col. J.R. and Mrs. Paton whose marriage is taking place next Friday in St. Peter's Cathedral.

On Wednesday evening Miss Jean MacLeod invited friends in for a social evening for Miss Paton who was delightfully surprised when she was showered with many exquisite gifts.

The King and Queen and Princess Elizabeth each are to adopt a leper child for whose medical care and education they will be responsible.

A very cordial welcome is being given Dr. W. L. and Mrs. Bailey of Evanston, Ill., who have arrived to spend the week-end with Mrs. Bailey's sister, Mrs. (Dr.) V. L. Goodwill, 84 York Street.

Her Charlottetown friends will be interested to know that Mrs. (Dr.) Leo MacKenna of Vancouver is now in Toronto, having been called east by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. McKinnon.

Mrs. A. B. Lee Horne of Summerside is visiting her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) McFarlane in Cambridge, Mass.

Among the Summerside guests at the McGill alumni dinner at the Charlottetown Wednesday were Dr. and Mrs. McNeill, Dr. and Mrs. Simpson and Miss Wanda Wyatt.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cameron of Truro, N. S. spent the week-end renewing friendships in Charlottetown.

Miss Elsie Nicholson is arriving home tonight from New York.

A small throne was placed in the chamber of the House of Commons Monday at the right of the King's throne thus signifying officially for the first time that Princess Elizabeth is next in succession to the crown.

was the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, who sat at the right of his father, King George V.

Mrs. Harry Mathieson arrived home last evening from Montreal. While there she was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Bessie McLean of Boston, Mass., who made the trip by plane.

Distinguished visitors here this week are Major General H. W. Foster, C.B.E., D.S.O., and Mrs. Foster and Capt. Matheson of Ottawa.

Miss Margaret Irving left yesterday on a holiday visit to Mr. and Mrs. R. Seal, Hamilton, Ont.

Mrs. Arthur Duvar motored to Boston over the weekend on a visit to friends.

Regretful farewells were said over the weekend to Miss Muriel Weeks who left by car for Newton Centre, Mass., where her marriage to Mr. Bruce Ross is taking place early next week.

Prior to leaving the bride-to-be was showered and entertained widely among her hostesses being Mrs. (Dr.) J. W. McKenzie and Miss Lilian McKenzie who were joined by her brother, Major General E. S. Weeks of Ottawa who will attend the wedding.

Coming home from Vancouver, B. C. with the remains of her son, Arthur A. Boswall, Mrs. G. A. Sharp is being sincerely welcomed by her old home friends.

Mrs. Norman Ford, Brighton Road, was hostess at a smart afternoon tea at her home on Monday.

Liberal convention delegates were guests Monday night at a reception at which the wives of the federal ministers were hostesses.

Mrs. McManus of Memramcook, N. B., who is the guest of Mrs. W. E. Hyndman is being pleasantly entertained by her old friends.

One of the leading articles in the November issue of Good Housekeeping is by Miss Alberta M. MacFarlane, daughter of Mrs. M. A. MacFarlane, Summerside. The subject of the article is Church Suppers.

Following in the wake of visiting British newspapermen, reports are circulating in Ottawa that H. R. H. Princess Elizabeth will make a tour of Canada next spring or summer, shortly after her honeymoon with Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten.

No confirmation or comment whatever was obtainable in official circles in Ottawa, and no trace can be found of any official preparations for such a visit. It is obvious, however, that either Princess Elizabeth or her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, would prove most popular visitors to Canada, and Prime Minister King has in the past expressed hope that they might visit Canada.

From the British point of view, it is thought desirable that the future Queen should have firsthand knowledge of Canada and other Dominions and that her future subjects should get to know her in person.

Lieutenant Mountbatten is reported to be somewhat "gun-shy" of publicity, and a tour of the Dominion might conceivably help him become more used to the glare of publicity which must inevitably be cast upon his public life hereafter.

However, the projected visit is still in the realm of rumour, not fact as yet. But already Ottawa gossip has it that if Prime Minister King does indeed intend to retire soon, here would be a ready-made blaze of glory—a Royal visit—to serve as prelude to his exit.

Be careful to avoid over-cooking macaroni or spaghetti when they are to be used in combination dishes that will be heated again in the oven. Cook the macaroni until it is almost tender, but not quite. Then it will finish cooking in the oven. Slightly under-cooked macaroni and spaghetti make better eating than when over-cooked.

Rural Adventure

By Cameron Docherty

"One out of every three thousand persons in the U.S.A. is a drug addict. This does not mean people who take narcotics for medical treatment. During the war vast stores of every type of drug accumulated abroad and are being stored at our market because we are the highest income country in the world."

"Mr Chadwick told me that," Lotus said. "Did he tell you that opium is the biggest problem of the year for a year is about 440 tons, yet world production is nearly 2,600 tons. Well, that do you think becomes of the surplus?"

"But you think this that's coming into New Orleans is arriving by sea, don't you?"

"Yes, but we've searched every ship with a fine-tooth comb, we've examined every cargo from soy bean sauce to Oriental rugs. We've unearthed some petty racketeers and caught some petty dope smugglers but nothing that seems to connect with what we're after."

"Why would they bring it into port? Why couldn't they drop it over the side so many miles out?" she demanded triumphantly.

Her enthusiasm nettled only a super or smile from Stu Lawrence — he even chuckled softly.

"My dear girl, I hate to burst your bright little bubble, but that thought is as unoriginal and tired as time itself."

She stared at him with growing irritation. Why did he have to be so antagonistic? For a moment she hated him intensely.

Through the blue haze of smoke that filled the cafe Duval and drifted lazily into her seclusion corner, Lotus stared into Stu Lawrence's eyes.

"You don't like me, do you?" she said.

"He flushed uncomfortably and his thin lips seemed to narrow to an even thinner line. 'Of course, I do, why do you say that?'"

"Because from the very moment I first met you I sensed an antagonism on your part, a resentment that Mr. Chadwick would even refer to you as a woman of your type of work."

"That's a pretty flat statement," "You're vexed because I'm a woman; you don't want me to succeed, you don't want to have to associate with a woman who can be as successful as a man in anything. I can't understand that — Mr. Chadwick told me you had been in the Navy for four years."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"You must have come in contact with women in the service, you must have seen how well women handled the jobs assigned to them."

"That was war," she pointed out. "Isn't this war of a sort?"

"The silence grew between them. Lawrence, to hide his discomfiture, picked up his beer glass and drained it and Lotus watched his slim, nicotine-stained fingers grip the glass and relinquish it."

"Perhaps it was wrong of me to bring it up," she said. "As you say, it makes no difference in our work. Let's get back to business, shall we?"

"We seem to be at a standstill. I wouldn't say that. You may have hit the jackpot, for all you know, it leads to the solving of this case. I shouldn't be at all surprised if Chadwick took you on permanently," he observed dryly.

"She ignored the sarcasm. 'What I've done so far could hardly come under the heading of hard labor. I think it's fascinating.'"

"Yeah, nice work if you can get it. He offered her a cigarette. "I forgot, you don't smoke, do you?" He studied her as though she were an interesting and unusual biological specimen. "No, no important ones. I've a weakness for tall men and dogs of any sort, but I'm suppressing it temporarily."

"His face reddened. 'I guess I was mistaken about that. Oh, by the way, she watched his body stiffen as he looked beyond her, then he glanced at her apprehensively. "You'd better leave me as quickly and gracefully as you can. Your new friends here just come in."

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Doghouse Meal

Tempers Flare More at Breakfast Table Than at Any Other

If this column served no other useful purpose, it would be a godsend to husbands by furnishing them with an outlet for their domestic grievances, without which safety valve they would probably blow up and explode, thus making marriage a more messy business than it already is.

Now, although it is not generally known, the chief gripe of married men is breakfast. That is the fly in the ointment about which they write me innumerable letters that range all the way from the wail of martyrs, who have to cook their own breakfasts, to threats of mayhem, against wives who cook the morning meal looking like heck in soiled housecoats and with their faces still adorned with last night's cold cream.

This is something that no man ever expects to happen to him, but when it does it makes the skids to the divorce court for many a wife who turns over and bites their heads off a morning, instead of getting up and concocting coffee that is nectar and hot biscuit for her lord and master.

But, any way you look at it, there is something queer and uncanny about breakfast that is other meal possessors. Somehow it seems to break all the rules not only of nutrition but of human behavior. You would think that after a nice long night's sleep people would get up gay and happy and singing merry roundays. But they don't. They are almost invariably grouchy and ready to fight at the drop of a hat. You would think they would be hungry and want plenty of good food after their long fast, but they mince and growl over the meal and say things about the toast that reduces their wives to tears.

And when husbands and wives go through the ritual of bestowing a good-by kiss on each other of a morning, they look as if they could bite their heads off.

Now why this is thus and why breakfast is the only family meal that is eaten in the doghouse, is a mystery. No one knows why the nicest and kindest and most food for breakfast and eat off of the nicest china, nor why the children act like little demons, nor why people who are so suave and diplomatic at dinner are unbearable at breakfast.

It is just the way it happens. Maybe it is fate. But more family fights start at the breakfast table than anywhere else. If anyone has anything unpleasant to say, they always tell it at breakfast. It is breakfast that wives always ask for money and produce the bills, and tell nice long lies.

And how often do husbands bury themselves behind their newspapers at breakfast in a futile attempt to screen themselves from their families. And how often do they demand to know if their wives think they are made of money. And how frequently does the breakfast orgy end in their slamming the door behind them and going down to their offices where a pretty young secretary, who has already breakfasted.

All of which suggests that breakfast needs reforming, or to be abolished in the interest of domestic peace and harmony.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. What is a courteous way for a business man to dispose of a tire-some caller?

A. One good way is to instruct his secretary to interrupt the conversation at a prearranged signal, on the pretense that someone in another office wishes to consult him.

Q. Is it proper for a girl to accept expensive gifts from a young man who has been calling on her for some time?

A. She should never accept an expensive gift unless engaged.

Q. What is considered "the first rule of etiquette"?

A. Never to do anything that is unpleasant to others.

When partly cooled, insert wooden sticks.

However such prestige and popularity could provoke some strange, irregular or surprising climax, with emotionalism and erratic moves. A child born this day should be well equipped for an important place in life, with popularity and financial influence. Any tendency to eccentric or superior employes should be given early supervisory.

For Monday, October 27 Monday's astrological forecast encourages a confident and concentrated effort toward expansion, production and the quest of the highest ambitions, with the assurance of sanction and cooperation of those in influential positions. Cultivate these and seek expanded credit and at the same time enhanced personal popularity and prestige, the social and domestic life partaking of the good luck, so-called.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very productive and fertile year, with advancement, growth and enhanced prestige and power all along the way. It is a time for probation of superior employes and others of high station, whose solid support and friendly cooperation are in sight. Purely personal, sentimental, and professional affiliations should flourish as well. Enjoy the benefits of Lady Luck, who beams on all worthy effort.

A child born on this day is bounteously endowed with the "know how," the prestige and personal power for a successful and happy life, with much pleasure and influence.

That Body of Yours

TREATING AN ASTHMATIC ATTACK IN CHILDREN

While the cause of asthma is hard to find, in some cases the treatment of the attack by the use of hypodermic injections of 10 to 15 drops (minims) of adrenalin is successful and free from danger in adults.

It is however, distressing to see a youngster, having an attack of asthma, "Can a child die during an attack of asthma? May such a death result from faulty treatment?" Because of the anxiety and fear of parent and child during an attack, Dr. Bret Ratner, Professor of Diseases of Children, New York University College of Medicine, discusses general treatment and treatment during an attack.

Because, generally speaking, the dose of a drug in children is about one-half or less than for an adult, which would mean 5 to 8 drops of adrenalin. Dr. Ratner states a child should never be given an injection of more than 2 or 3 minims. However, if necessary, this small dose can be repeated in 20 to 30 minutes. Adrenalin in large doses actually tightens or partly closes the little tubes admitting and removing air from the lungs and may cause a pounding headache, rapid pulse, and weaken the circulation of the blood.

A rapid or immediate method of relieving an asthmatic attack is sprinkling a stronger solution of adrenalin on a handkerchief and allowing the patient to draw a few breaths of this into the lungs.

What other treatment can be given at home to a child having an attack of asthma, where adrenalin is not available or is not effective because bronchial tissues are so swollen that little plugs or plugs cannot be removed?

In these cases the old reliable syrup of ipecac is given. For infants and young children one-half to one teaspoon is given. If this does not cause vomiting two teaspoons are given. This is followed by a little water, which helps bring on the vomiting spell. In addition to the ipecac, give patient an opium and prop him up in a comfortable position. The child should be well covered and windows opened to give plenty of fresh air.

ASTHMA: CAUSES AND TREATMENT

The cause or causes of asthma were unknown until recently. Now that it is known that allergy, nose and throat defects, emotional disturbances can cause the attacks most asthmatics can be helped. Today's beauty hint has to do with making your hair a real "crowning glory." Most of you use your hairbrush, of course, but do you use it correctly? Brush away from the scalp, not down flat on the head. And use long, firm strokes.

A good way to protect shelves in the medicine cabinet is to line them with blotting paper or waxed paper.

Before re-papering a wall which has grease spots on it, cover the spots with a thin coat of white shellac so that no grease will penetrate the new paper.

INFANTS' APPAREL

The elderly spinners were looking after the evacuee children. Later a third arrived, an independent little Londoner, aged 11. On his first evening he was allowed to sit up with his hostesses after the children had gone to bed. Polite boredom set in. At about a quarter to 10 the lad could bear it no longer.

"Well," he said brightly, "if you two would like to pop out for a quick one, I'll keep my eye on the kids upstairs."

A GOOD THING

"I want," said the househunter, "a small house in an isolated position at least five miles from any other house."

"I see," said the house agent, "with an understanding smile, 'you want to practise the simple life.'"

"No," answered the househunter, "I want to practise the trombone."

STRETCHING WHEN YOU FIRST WAKE IS EXCELLENT PRELUDE TO RISING

Humid weather leaves everybody as limp as a wilted petunia, and it's easy to get up on the wrong side of the bed. It's an effort to get up. Well, just lie there and relax. I'm not going to urge setting-up exercises! Exercise generates heat... heat must be dissipated into the surrounding atmosphere. And when the air is heavy with moisture it doesn't favor rapid evaporation. So, on a hot, sticky morning, don't get up steam says Ida Jean Kain.

Stretching is nature's way of helping you to get up on the right side of the bed. You'll think I'm just making this up, but here are the facts: on waking from sleep, circulation is slow and the blood in the muscles is somewhat stagnant. So nature gives the impulse to stretch and s-t-r-e-t-c-h... and yawn. It's split second timing to get to work that throws a monkey wrench into the original plan for jogging the sluggish circulation into action. The unwarmed-up ring of the alarm prods you into action, still half asleep, and it's known as getting out on the wrong side of the bed.

Who says you can't stretch away the alarm? Of course you won't resist that idea, but give it a try. If you won't try anything new, you're old!

Well, as I was saying, stretching is nature's way of making it a good morning. A natural stretch and the general twist and pull that is part of it, contracts the muscles, squeezes out the old blood and lets new blood flow in. A following stretch raises the ribs and allows the air to get into the diaphragm. Then the old blood is carried away and the next big stretch brings a fresh supply of blood and nourishment into the muscles. And you're old!

that's the way stretching stretches and stretches the body, and does a lot to prevent neuritis, neurosis and rheumatism.

You can make up your own stretchers... stretch arms over overhead, legs down and pull... twist and turn and pull... then arm up, cross one leg over the other and stretch all along that side, then stretch along the other side.

Between stretches, let yourself go limp, so limp that you seem to sink right down into the mattress. Take it easy, but get in six big luxuriant stretches. It keeps anyone from starting the day tense or grumpy.

Follow with a cool shower... not too hot but not icy cold. Have a good breakfast to supply energy for the morning. And don't run after the bus! Happy day! Consult your doctor before starting any strenuous course in diet or exercise.

How Can I!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. Is washing soda ever harmful to the clothes?

A. Yes. Washing soda is a household necessity, but when used on laundry say if it is not rinsed out of the clothes thoroughly, the fibers of the goods will be weakened when the hot iron is applied.

Q. How can I keep the waffle iron clean?

A. It should be cleaned after each using, but do not use soap or water on it. A wire brush or a stiff-bristled kitchen brush is best for this purpose.

Q. How can I mix cornbread easily?

A. Cornbread can be mixed very easily if the mixing bowl is warmed before using.
