We'll Meet Again By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

(Continued) People in the restaurant pulled her away from her own thoughts for a moment. A white-clad officer of a ship was talking to a pretty girl with yellow hair and a charming smile. He said quite audibly, "I won't have a girl in every port now." And the girl's eyes mocked him grimly. There was a party of young people in evening clothes and while they talked and drank, a native slowly slid his fingers over the strings of his banjo. A boy and a girl held hands and for them there was no one else in the room. Slowly Gay walked back to the quaint house. She wanted to be happy and she didn't hate Evelyn. How mistaken she had been! Chris had not called her back and a thousand violins had lied when they had played "We'll Meet" and urged her to come. I love you, she said. That's why I came. There would be no sleep for her tonight in a room where Chris had ceased to love her and had begun to love Evelyn. But it was at least, his room, stamped with his personality and filled with objects for his comfort and use. INSTALMENT Taking off the yellow knitted hat again, Gay put her head against the pillow on the divan. But she was restless, fighting against a disappointment almost too great to bear, Chris and Evelyn Ewing were on their honeymoon. She went out on the balcony, feeling the wind stir her hair, and looked toward the sea. "I'll never remind you, if we should meet again, that once you loved me. You'll never know that flying to you tonight I saw the dreams that Alan tarnished made whole again. In the morning I'll go away and no one will know I've been except that woman downstairs who didn't see my face."

It was there that Chris found her when he came, standing on the balcony, her hands resting on the ledge, her hair disturbed by the breeze and her eyes looking toward the sea. He had come in quietly, not wanting to awaken his landlady. In the shadows he frowned because he did not believe what he saw. Was it gay in a white dress? Or was it the vision of her he had seen so many times, a vision which at times had been maddeningly real? He said, "Gay, is it..." She turned and caught her breath. Yes, he was the same. Chris... the same Chris with black unruly hair, a stern amusing mouth, an dwarf eyes, Chris... in a white linen suit with a cigarette burning between his fingers, standing in the shadows looking at her... Gay stood very still, looking for Evelyn. But Evelyn was not with him. Only a moment Gay held herself back, thinking, "Just one moment while I look at him, remember while I look at him, remember while I look at him, remember to him and put her arms around him, feeling the strength of the strongest arms that had ever held her holding her again. "Chris, I want to be with you. Let me talk. Let me say what I've been wanting to say for weeks and weeks."

"I want to be with you little or much. I want to climb to splendid heights again with you, and I'll go anywhere in the world and be a happy woman just to be with you. I don't want glitter, Chris. I want to look at everything as clearly and as honestly as you do. I don't care about success or money. If you can forgive me for being so blind and for clinging to something I don't want now... I don't care where I am as long as you're there..."

BACKACHE THE very best way to restore the kidneys to their normal state is to drink plenty of pure water and obtain a small amount of A-nuric, which is dispensed by almost every druggist. Dr. Pierce's A-nuric is expensive and should be taken after meals. It is much more potent than Biba. Read what Thomas Watson of 449 Simcoe St., London, Ont., said: "I lost many a night's sleep because of the too frequent passage of the kidney secretions. I felt tired all the while and often had dizzy spells. Dr. Pierce's A-nuric soon got to the seat of the trouble. The backache was gone, my kidneys acted normally and the dizzy spells disappeared. I had more pep, too."

HER KNEES SWELLED WITH RHEUMATISM

To Go Upstairs Was Agony There is nothing in which rheumatism is a greater handicap than in doing ordinary household duties—kneeling, stooping, running up and down stairs. How to overcome that handicap, and relieve rheumatic aches and pains, is the subject of the following letter:— "I have been taking Kruschen Salts for three months. When I started, I had rheumatism in both knees. They were very swollen. I could not rise from a chair without assistance, I could not kneel, and to go upstairs was agony. Now I can run upstairs and kneel as much as I like. Since I have taken Kruschen, I can work like a horse." —(Mrs.) H.S. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are effective solvents of uric acid. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the internal organs, and assist them to expel the dissolved uric acid from the system.

her until the sky was bright and the sea was blue in daylight. Black women were walking with baskets on their heads, and little black boys were playing in the streets with a tall sunburned young man in white and a rather tall girl in white walked down the narrow sunny street. The clergyman, standing on the white cathedral steps, remarked to his assistant, chuckling, Just look at them! Pretending to look as if they've been married longer than... five minutes! (THE END)
