GOOD RADIO RECEPTION.—The Island Radio Company announces that radio reception, which has been poor for the past week, improved tremendously last evening making it possible for loud speaker reception from such long distant stations as KCO San Francisco as well as many middle western stations which have as yet scarcely been heard this fall. Static disturbances were at a minimum and reception was uniformly good throughout the evening.

ENJOYABLE DANCE.—The Halloween dance and bridge in aid of the P. E. I. Orphanage held last night in Dixon's Hall was largely attended and proved to be a most enjoyable and successful affair. The bridge tables were well filled and the dance music program was up to the usual standard. The ladies bridge prize was won by Mrs. T. W. L. Prowse, the mens by Mr. Alex Scott, while the consolation prize went to Mrs. W. Scott. The affair was chaperoned by Mrs. (Col.) D. A. MacKinnon, and Mrs. Geo. L. Prowse.

He took her hand in his and gazed proudly at the engagement ring he had placed on her fair finger only three days before. "Did your friends admire it?" he inquired tenderly. "They did more than that," she replied coldly. "Two of them recognized it."

IN MEMORIAM
In loving remembrance of our dear Father, Mr. Malcolm MacKinnon who departed this life November 1st, 1924.
One sad year has passed
Yes, we remember well
We stood beside your dying bed
To take a last farewell,
With aching hearts we watched o'er you,
As your spirit took its flight
Away to that home beyond the skies
Where there is no night.
Oh, Father dear we miss you
There is a vacant chair
But we know we'll meet in heaven,
And there'll be no parting there.
Inserted by his wife and family.

BERLIN HEARS STINNES IS IN U. S.

Believed to be Seeking Support for Automobile Concern of Which He is Head

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Edmond Stinnes, eldest son of Hugo Stinnes, who during Germany's frantic inflation was her richest man, is in America. His departure from Berlin was revealed for the first time by today's newspapers, which described it as "secret flight" and intimated he had left his country for good. This impression subsequently was rectified by Stinnes' representatives here, as well as by his wife, who declared his intention of visiting the United States with his friends and associates and that he had come to Paris quite openly October 15, embarking on the Berengaria at Cherbourg two days later. His trip, they insisted, would last only a few months at most.

Both Frau Stinnes and her husband's secretary stated the erstwhile billionaire's journey was in no way connected with the Aga Automobile Company, of which he is head and whose disastrous financial affairs attracted international attention two months ago. After the German banking consortium charged with liquidating the huge Stinnes estate, which had become insolvent had refused credits to the Aga, Stinnes tried to interest an American group in the property, but the deal fell through. According to Jacob Goldschmidt, president of the great Darmstadt National Bank, who headed the "morale recovery" Stinnes, despite the denials of his intimates, undoubtedly is trying to find fresh capital for the plant in New York. Goldschmidt said German banks had declined to help Aga because it was not worth helping, being, as he put it, "a mere blacksmith's forge compared with American automobile factories."

When his concern became pressed for funds Edmund Stinnes sensationally offered half his stock, then estimated at five million marks, to his workers, who, however, never have accepted it. It is understood he has informed his brother Hugo he would drop the claim for six million marks he holds against the main Stinnes estate, provided Hugo could get the banks to finance Aga. Judging by what Goldschmidt said tonight there is no hope of this. The banker declared that the end of liquidation of the estate, which Edmund left his mother and brother, is in sight, and the collaterals and other properties to the value of about four million dollars will be left over for the heirs after all debts are paid. Against this comparatively insignificant remnant of the fortune once believed to total more than two hundred million dollars there comes Edmund's claim for six million marks or one million dollars.

Apart from this claim, and about three hundred thousand realized through the sale of insurance property, Edmund has only his stock in Aga, the "blacksmith's forge." Count Couvenove Calergi, an Austrian nobleman, who is chief promoter of an international movement for the United States in Europe, accompanied Stinnes, who one of his warmest supporters across the ocean.

Soviet Budget Is Now 3,778,500,000

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—Definite figures for the Soviet budget for the fiscal year 1925-26 are published in today's "Economic Life," but do not differ materially from the estimates given to your correspondent a month ago by the finance minister, M. Sokolnikov. The total, however, is rather larger, 3,778,500,000 rubles compared with 3,550,000,000 rubles.
The revised figure is about three quarters of a billion rubles larger than the first budget in 1923 but actually is not quite equivalent, owing to the diminished purchasing power of the gold ruble.
The budget is divided into ordinary and extraordinary receipts and expenditures. The ordinary receipts show the principal increase is from indirect taxation, excise and customs bringing in more than 100,000,000 rubles above M. Sokolnikov's estimate. Receipts from posts, telegraphs, transportation, state enterprises, etc., show an increase of another 200,000,000 rubles, making 300,000,000 rubles higher receipts than the estimate, but this is partially counterbalanced by the disappearance from the receipts of 100,000,000 rubles estimated for crops.
The latest crop total is given as slightly under 4,000,000,000 poods the estimate called two months ago, instead of 150,000,000 poods that figure, as then claimed by the Soviet statistic bureau.
Expenditures show 80,000,000 rubles increase on the army and navy, 27,000,000 on transportation, 35,000,000 on agriculture, 20,000,000 on industry, 10,000,000 on electrification, 10,000,000 on co-operatives and 10,000,000 on communal credits and other minor advances.

"Y" Juniors Enjoy Halloween Social

All the younger boys of the "Y" let loose last night when the gang enjoyed their annual Halloween social.
Starting at six thirty with an hour and one half's games in the gymnasium under the direction of one of the staff, they sure did go after those games! and when the time to eat came they were more than ready to go after what was provided in that line with a vengeance and succeeded in cleaning up what looked to be an endless supply of food, after which they broke up all vowing it to be the best yet.

MAKING CERTAIN.

A well known financier is a great believer in punctuality, and on a recent occasion, when an early forenoon conference was in prospect which he had to come to town to attend, he so impressed a passerby with the importance of calling him early that the lad decided desperate measures were needed.
Hence, at an unearthly hour there came a prodigious hammering on the financier's bed-room door and a voice, "Weg! loudly."
"Parcel for you, sir."
Wondering what the parcel could be, the financier took it in, and, seated on the edge of his bed, unwrapped it. Imagine his indignation upon reading the neatly-printed placard it contained:
"Nearly time to get up."
tives and 10,000,000 on communal credits and other minor advances.

Mountain Of Love Found In Remote Retreat In Sahara

USALAH, Oct. 30.—A definite romantic link between the white loaves of the Hoggar region, isolated in their mountain retreat in the centre of the Sahara, and the ancient Lybians, the great white race which once ruled North Africa, has been found by the Franco-American expedition headed by Count Byron Kuban de Prorok in one of the most desolate spots of the desert.
On a barren, brown stone cliff, overlooking the dried bed of the Aouglu river, has been discovered scores of inscriptions in the Tifinarg language of Hoggar, which is closely related to the ancient Lybian.
The towering cliff might be called the mountain of love, for the inscriptions deeply etched in floors and caves indicated that long ago it was the trysting place for the youths and maidens of the little known race.
The writings, as translated by Delaid Touareg, an interpreter, are messages of love apparently inscribed in the rock and were to be found and read by the beloved. Some are signed masculine names and others by feminine.
One woman said: "I Beltain proclaim love for Lail."
Another, evidently a despairing message to an unsuccessful suitor, read: "I surely have said all I can to you."
Near these stone love letters the outlines of feet were engraved in the margin of the cliffs, in pairs—the small foot, evidently the woman's, besides the larger or man's. Names were often scratched beside them.

Bethrothal Announcements
Professor Reygasse is of the opinion that these are betrothal announcements. When a maiden was pursued by suitors she ran to the edge of the cliff and posed as if to hurl herself over. Her suitor caught and embraced her and etched the outlines of his feet in the rock to inform the tribe he had won her.
The inscriptions give every evidence of great age, and were covered with a deep layer of crumbled rock. It is impossible to make any accurate estimate, but it is believed that the engravings belong to the early centuries of the Christian era. They are 300 miles further north than any Tifinarg writing hitherto discovered.

The evidence of a life having a place in it for romance in a region now indescribably barren and dead encouraged the belief which geologists have advanced that the Sahara was not always utter desolation. Three miles from the true mountain were found cave pictures of camels and gazelles.
The discovery of the carved cliffs is the climax of a thousand miles of exploration thus far, which have revealed along the route many prehistoric sites, and confirm the hope that Africa will shed much light on the origin of man.
Almost at every resting place were gathered specimens of Neolithic weapons and implements, and in some places Paleolithic axes; also primitive ornaments of fossilized ostrich shells were found.

Viewing the jumpers at the horse shows this week cannot compare as an amusement to seeing the jumpers in the smart shops, according to many smart women. For the jumper this fall is scheduled to have a widely increased vogue. It will be worn with many of the tailored suits made of the English and Scotch tweeds.

THE MARKETS

(Canadian Press)
MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—There was some inquiry from foreign buyers for wheat and oats in the local grain market today but the volume of business was small and the market quiet. Little business was done in cash grain. The undertone to oats was steady and prices were unchanged. The condition of the market for spring wheat flour was unchanged, prices for all grades being the same with a fair amount of business passing for local and country account. The feature of the trade in millfeed was the increased demand from United States buyers for Manitoba brain and large sales were made for November December shipment and some for immediate delivery.
A fair trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and prices were maintained. The baled hay market was fairly active with no change in prices to note. The tone of the market for fresh eggs continued firm. There were no further developments in the condition of the market for butter the undertone being firm with a fair amount of business passing for domestic account. The tone of the cheese market in the country was easier and prices at some of the boards were 3-16 to 1/4 per lb. lower than a week ago.
