BIRTHDAY PARTY—A very pleasant social gathering was held at the home of Mrs. John Finlayson, Kilmuir, on Monday evening, April 15th when a number of her young friends gathered to celebrate the birthday of Miss Jessie Finlayson who is spending a few days vacation at home from college. The affair was in the nature of a surprise party and the proceedings which entertained away a few pleasant hours were of a rather impromptu nature. The program although unrehearsed was splendidly performed and consisted of singing games, music and various other amusing stunts, at the close of which delicious home-made fudge was passed around by Miss Finlayson and heartily enjoyed by those present. During the evening a suitable and useful presentation was made, which completely surprised the recipient but her appreciation thereof was expressed in a few well chosen words. The happy gathering dispersed about 10.30 p. m. after wishing Miss Finlayson many happy returns of the occasion and complete success in the remainder of her college course, to which she returns in a few days time.

Britain Neglecting Caribbean Colony

In the Nineteenth Century for April, Sir Samuel Hoare, an authority on colonial governments, submits that if Great Britain is so bent upon retaining her Caribbean possessions it is a good time to plan better administration for them and to develop their resources. He begins with neglected Honduras, a Cinderella of Crown colonies. Not one in a hundred Englishmen, he says, knows that it is a part of Central America. For that matter, says the New York Times, most Americans would be puzzled to bound it with relation to Mexico and the Central American republics. More is known about the Fiji Islands than about British Honduras. In 1879, one Fowler wrote a narrative of a journey across the unexplored portion of the country, and in 1889, J. Bellamy talked to the Royal Geographical Society about an expedition to the Cockscorn Mountains. It was uphill work trying to interest anybody in "His Majesty's Settlement" upon the Caribbean Coast although in the eighteenth century there were spirited brushes between the Spaniards and the British for the timber lands. Yet the English Honduras has resources well worth conserving and developing.

Stagnating in a Swamp

A more backward colony than Belize and the hinterland is not to be imagined. The Colonial Office at Whitehall should blush at the picture Sir Samuel Hoare draws of Honduras, which has a Governor, an Executive Council, a Legislative Council, a Chief Justice, an Attorney-General and a civil service. Larger than Salvador, British Honduras has only twenty miles of public railway, and but a few hundred yards of metalled road, which, however, leads to a cemetery. Salvador has 1,000,000 people, British Honduras 40,000, 90 per cent of whom are Indian and negro. Over the border in Guatemala 500 miles of railway have been built, and even Spanish Honduras is connecting the Atlantic and Pacific by a modern highway. Belize is a sorry metropolis stagnating in a mangrove swamp. Compared with it, the Guatemalan capital is a modern and a splendid city. There may be half a dozen houses in Belize that are fitted with mosquito screens. The sanitary conditions are wretched, the natives ravaged by malaria and hookworm.

Contrasted with Guatemala

In the interior of the colony there is no medical service at all. At Quirigua, Guatemala, the United Fruit Company has spent $500,000 upon a hospital for its employees. With the help of the Rockefeller Foundation the doctors are fighting the hookworm. They have practically knocked out malaria and are conquering black-water fever. Many of the United Fruit Company's physicians and nurses are English and Scotch. Where the Spaniards have settled and governed there are buildings that defy the tooth of time, treasured memorials. "Not a stone will remain in the swamps of Belize," says Sir Samuel Hoare, "to tell of the British occupation"—unless he galvanizes the Colonial Office into reorganizing the administration.

weaknesses at bat, Jim Bagby, the Cleveland pitcher, said: "Tobin is a real bear. He has us pitchers guessing all the time. He seldom fails to cross us. If we play for him for a hunt, he hits out. If we figure he is going to swing, he lays it down. If the players shift toward right field for him, he hits the ball left. I think he is the hardest man in the American League to outguess."

Tobin's forty-six extra-base hits last season demonstrated he can hit the ball with vigor. The fact that he made 202 hits in 1920, being excelled by only seven other batsmen in the American League, is convincing proof that he hits consistently. His batting average was .340. The only men to top him were Sisler, Speaker, Jackson Ruth, Eddie, Collins, Jacobson and Joe Evans.

The HOOVER

From the deep folds and softly cushioned surfaces of even the finest upholstery, all lint and dust may speedily be suctioned away by the air attachments of The Hoover. But for the vastly more difficult task of cleaning rugs, so as to prolong their life, The Hoover brings into play all three of its forces. Gently it beats out all nap-cutting, embedded grit. Briskly it sweeps up all clinging litter, erects matted nap and freshens colors. Vigorously it cleans by air. Only The Hoover discharges all these duties. And it is the largest-selling electric cleaner in the world.
