When Vision is Dimmed

When one's vision is dimmed, how large a part of life's pleasures are lost. Reading can then only be indulged in when the light is strong; you go to the theatre and cannot half see what is doing on the stage; you go travelling and can only half appreciate the beauties of the scenery; and in hosts of other ways your weak eyesight is a hindrance to the full enjoyment of life. Had you not better arrest eye troubles on their first appearance, rather than neglect them till these things come to pass. Properly fitted glasses are a sovereign corrective—but only if they are adopted in good time. When the weak eyesight has settled deep down, glasses can alleviate, but they cannot always correct. Visit our Optical Department in Charlottetown on the first sign of weakening eyes.

QUEER TIME FOR BUSINESS

The vicar of a certain parish church in England appears to have been almost entirely confined to the monks, who, as the ruins of their monasteries prove, had a shrewd eye for the most sheltered and fertile spots in the land. They, too, were the only people who indulged in such work as vine growing. When Henry VIII. suppressed the religious houses the monks became fugitives and the English vineyards ran to waste untended. Another reason for the disappearance of the industry from this country is to be found in the fact that during the middle ages the prohibitive taxes imposed on all foreign products made the wines of the continent almost unbuyable luxuries, and therefore the English had to be content with the inferior produce of their own vines. As these duties were decreased the superior wines of more favored countries gradually drove our own out of the market. More than one attempt has been made to revive open air vine growing in England, but the uncertainty of the British climate seems to be an effectual bar to such experiments developing into a regular industry.—London Queen.

CAUSE OF ADAM'S FALL

A Scotchman of the name of Adam MacPherson, who was very fond of his "wee drapp" whisky, coming home rather late one Saturday night, stumbled over and got a nasty fall, which compelled him to remain in bed for a few days, according to London Tit-Bits. The old man and his wife were strict Presbyterians, and the minister used to come to the house on his weekly visits and remain for a cup of tea and a chat with the old lady. During their conversation they talked of Bible subjects, and the minister, talking of the garden of Eden, remarked:
"And, Mrs. MacPherson, what do you think was the cause of the fall of Adam?" (He meant Adam of the garden of Eden).
The old lady looked embarrassed, and glancing toward the bedroom in which her husband lay, lowered her voice in a whisper, leaned over to the minister and said:
"It was aye the drink, sorr; it was aye the drink."

WHAT BOILERS WERE FOR

In the eyes of all engineers of steamships the deck officers of their ships are profoundly ignorant. Here is one of the stories they tell: A young mate went into the engine room with a message from the captain to the engineer. The latter saw the other was interested and began to explain things to him. Being a civil and obliging man, he made an attempt to tell fairly tales to the stranger, and, moreover, he kept as clear as possible of all puzzling technicalities. He pointed out the cylinders, the various rods, the eccentrics, the shaft, and so on, explaining roughly the uses of the various pumps and auxiliary machinery, and the mate was genuinely pleased and interested and said so. Then, when going up on deck again, a thought seemed to strike him. Halting on the ladder, he called the engineer and explained his difficulty. "Thanks, awfully, for showing me round, Mac. You've made the whole thing as plain as a pikestaff. But one thing I don't quite grasp. What are the boilers for?" The engineer promptly replied, "Why, to keep the firemen from wearying, you idiot!"

To all whom it may concern.
This is to certify that I have tried one sample bottle of EMPEROR'S LINIMENT and find that it cures neuralgia in a few minutes; also, bad colds and all that it recommends itself for, and no one will go astray by purchasing this liniment, as it bears out its true merit.

Yours very truly,
