

The Guardian Pictorial Page

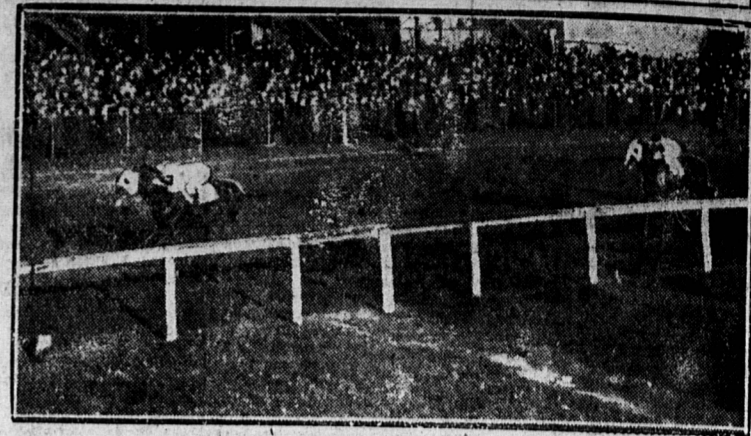

Ladies are taking up rowing in earnest as a new field of sport in England. Girls of the Cecil Club view the racing of their crew in a regatta at Lea Bridge from a point of vantage

The reservation flapper smile is shown by this little Indian babe. Perhaps you will recognize her as one of those who visited the summer resort during the holidays

Here is the prize-winning boy at an open air school in Toronto for delicate children. He is George Carter, who gained seventeen and three-quarter pounds since the school opened in the spring

Harry F. Sinclair's Zev, which was defeated at Latonia by In Memoriam recently, is shown winning easily the autumn championship stakes from a small field at Empire City

Great pomp and ceremony attended the wedding recently of Prince Paul of Serbia and Princess Olga, daughter of Prince and Princess Nicholas of Greece in Belgrade. The photograph was taken following the ceremony

There is not a flaw to be found in Elliot Levine, called a perfect baby by physicians at Beth Moses Clinic in New York. He is nine and a half months old

A remarkable colony of modern cliff dwellers has been found in Worcestershire. The homes are built in cliffs of red sandstone and consist of dwellings of five to seven rooms. Windows and doors are hewn out of the rock

Lord Renfrew, Prince of Wales, has been welcomed back to England after an absence of several months in Canada, where he visited his E.P. ranch in Alberta. He is seen stepping on the landing stage from the liner

A trip through High Park, Toronto, is a course in zoology. The latest addition to the animal enclosures are three white fallow deer. If they were natives of Canadian forests they might be called the Ku-Klux-Klan of the woods

Under the flare of torches, two couples dressed in the regalia of the Ku-Klux-Klan were married simultaneously at Brielle, N.J. A crowd of nearly 10,000 witnessed the wedding

Danny Caswell, young Cleveland millionaire, disinherited for his former marriage with a Follies girl, is now in Boston with his new wife, who was Miss June Castleton, above, also of the Follies

Lace and ruffles about the collars and cuffs are coming back into favor. An attractive style is made of cream-colored satin with pleated chiffon jabot and gauntlet cuffs with chiffon ruffles

One of the busiest places in Canada at this time of the year is the "mile of elevators" at Fort William where trainload after trainload of western wheat is daily deposited in the huge bins for future distribution

A book written in nineteen hours has won for J. Warner Bellah, an under-graduate until last June at Columbia University, the annual Alfred A. Knopf prize. Publication and circulation of his work is his reward

F. C. Gardencugh, of Barclay's Bank, London, is being mentioned as the most probable British delegate to sit on the allied commission to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations. He is shown with his wife