RINSO ABSORBS GREASE

Your Individual HOROSCOPE

By Frances Drake

MARCH 21 to APRIL 20 (Aries)—Mental faculties will be at high pitch this friendly day but continue to guard the apartment if you are out on guard. Unexpected news and happenings indicated. Religious and inspirational matters first favored. Gains to be promoted in finances.

APRIL 21 to MAY 20 (Taurus)—Don't lose your contact with the practical side of matters and you'll be in for excellent headway and lasting benefits. You should gain much by your natural ingenuity.

MAY 21 to JUNE 21 (Gemini)—Give your personal attention to all important issues if you wish to get results. Favorable vibrations now for private and heart interests and for making headway in YOUR job.

JUNE 22 to JULY 23 (Cancer)—One of your natural strong points is a keen imagination—an advantageous asset if not permitted to run wild. Today especially asks that you put a solid foundation under your ideas and undertakings.

JULY 24 to AUGUST 22 (Leo)—Venus is reaching a major benefic aspect to your natal planet, the Sun. These good influences top other existing Leo's friendly ones. Management and labor are favored alike in lines of trade and artistry and their harmonious cooperation will double your gains.

AUGUST 23 to SEPTEMBER 23 (Virgo)—Not especially auspicious except for your necessary routine and those matters that have immediate and urgent demand. Be decisive, direct and accurate. Don't overdo.

SEPTEMBER 24 to OCTOBER 23 (Libra)—Generous vibrations especially if you keep your usually calm judgment in the foreground. Practical work, rebuilding, improving, plans and preparations are on the more favored items.

OCTOBER 24 to NOVEMBER 22 (Scorpio)—You may not find conditions so favorable to your efforts today but if you properly allocate your work and other activities to avoid periods of strain, you will come through with flying colors.

NOVEMBER 23 to DECEMBER 22 (Sagittarius)—You may not find conditions so amenable to your efforts today but if you properly allocate your work and other activities to avoid periods of strain, you will come through with flying colors.

NOVEMBER 23 to DECEMBER 22 (Sagittarius)—Unusual care and alertness are needed now in shipping and other maritime interests, in dealing in chemicals, drugs and beverages. Favorable day for detecting errors subterfuge.

DECEMBER 23 to JANUARY 21 (Capricorn)—A mid-week day for cautious action, particularly in private and heart interests. This does not mean to crawl into a shell and be a do-nothing! Time foolishly lost can never be regained.

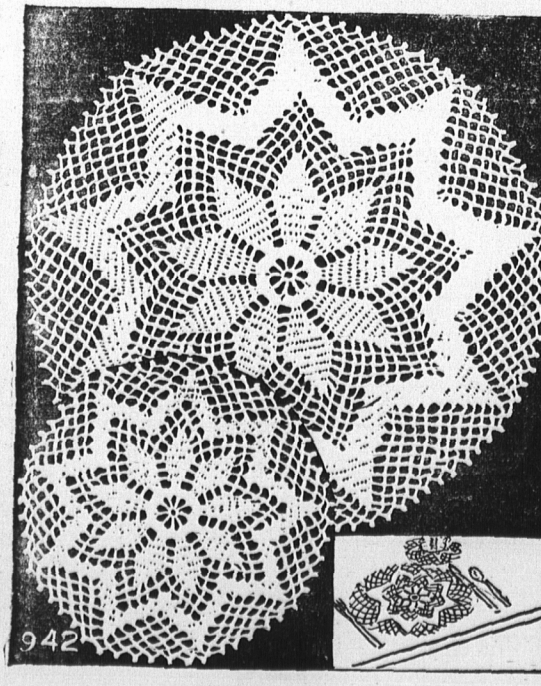

JANUARY 22 to FEBRUARY 20 (Aquarius)—Vibrations coincide with those of Capricorn. Move forward with steady, measured step to progress toward your goal decisively. Maintain a staunch exterior to offset opposing influences.

FEBRUARY 21 to MARCH 20 (Pisces)—Fine aspects to encourage you. Attend to regular duties in a complete and capable manner. During the evening enjoy your hobby or indulge in some wholesome entertainment also appreciated by family and friends.

A CHILD BORN ON THIS DAY—A child born on this day is full of vitality, energy and ambition which must be rightly used to secure the utmost from his talents. An inclination to curiosity should be sensibly directed. Domestic science and the fine arts are fields in which this individual is readily adapted. An interesting and profitable career indicated.

TAKE GOOD CARE OF YOUR CAT
A few pointers to remember about your cat. Don't fall to keep fresh water for your cat at all times; milk is not a substitute for water. Don't forget that cats are very easily poisoned by antiseptics, soaps or medicines that are harmful to human beings or dogs. Tar soaps containing carbolic acid, gasoline, turpentine or any powders containing these things may be fatal to a cat.

What magic do you keep that I should gain new power from you? And simply walking by your side My store of strength renew?

You radiate vitality, Your health, a glowing light Dispenses bright beneficence, Gives others greater might.

THE LOW-DOWN

The real low-down on millinery is entirely a back feature, drapes low over the nape of the neck in the hat itself, deep crowns which hug the head coming down close to the back hair-line, curtains which cover the hair and drop over the shoulders, drapes which tie in for a Cadogan bow effect. Brims gathered to an all-time low over the shoulders. Less front and more back is one of the strong millinery formulas.

BEDROOM ENSEMBLE in PLAIDS AND CHECKS

Scotch plaid or checked gingham combined with a matching material will make an inexpensive but attractive bedroom ensemble. Keep the draperies simple, but ample, over sheer white ruffled cottage curtains. Use the plaid or checked material to slipcover the chairs, to make the dressing table skirt, the deep flounce on the dressing table stool and bedspread. Use the plain material for the top of the bedspread and the seat of the dressing table stool. Bind with plain material.

HIGH-CHAIR GROWS UP

When baby's high-chair is outgrown, convert it into a useful kitchen stool. Take off the high back and foot rest, and enamel the stool to match your kitchen color scheme. You will find it very useful, and more easily carried about than a chair when doing your "chores".

CONTRASTS OFTEN SEEN IN DROPS SHOULDER YOKES IN SWEATERS

There is a feeling in knit-wear for taking advantage of the fashion for more color contrasts in the individually styled models. So as a result one sees models of contrast color used even at the neckline, in handkerchiefs, cuffs and yokes or in fronts of pullover or cardigan sweaters. The treatment that looks new and is easier to handle in knitwear than in woven sportswear is the drop shoulder yoke in sweaters. Sleeves are full fashioned or set in, not knitted all in one with the body of the sweater. The collar is extended out across the top of the shoulders in drop shoulder line. This is done with stripes, solid color or patterned yokes and sometimes by different yarn or stitches.

RUZS IN CONSTANT USE SHOULD BE CLEANED FREQUENTLY AND THOROUGHLY

home for dinner and she's that worried. "Away." The word conveyed an unpleasant sense of flight, but she did not mean it in that way. She must be the words loosely after the man's head.

"I expect the storm held him up. I wouldn't be back myself but I was nearer here than anywhere. "Please sir, the phone's down, so she's not getting any news from the bridge, where he was going. Monk and Abbot's Barton, where he drops in as often as for tea, hasn't got a 'phone."

THE LIKEABLE MAN

By SYLVESTER CAIRN

Gerald returned to lunch looking so wretched that Mrs. Parsons remarked on his appearance and his poor appetite.

"Got a foul head, that's all," explained Gerald. "I think it's stuffy." "A lovely day like this? My clothes dried as fast as I got them on the line! I can't see how you won't take anything else."

Gerald accepted it, hoping to get rid of the headache through the rain. But Dixon, so kind and generous and thoughtful, if only Dixon had been someone whom he disliked, or even a stranger!

In the afternoon he had to see about the alleged damage done by marauding pigs. His business done, he set out through the woods again, muttering at the sound, cursing his own lumpiness. It was a positive relief when the growl of thunder proved that his depression had a physical origin, and a chill wind whistled and the sun hid behind the clouds.

The distant thunder grew louder and a whiplash of lightning crashed across the sky. If Gerald, Michael did not. The dog covered to the ground and shrank at each lightning flash. Finally Gerald had to slip his hand through the collar and almost drag him along. But they reached shelter before the storm got to his height and Gerald no less than Michael was glad to get under cover. Now the lightning and thunder seemed to come simultaneously; the rain was a solid wall, whirling out the trees and the darkness seemed a tangible thing ripped open by those flashes.

By eight the worst of the storm was over, and Mrs. Parsons brought in his supper, chattering feverishly of the dangers of lightning, and of the damage done.

"The pond across the village street and some trees, and a branch of elm by the gate—untrustworthy trees, elms, I always says."

By Gerald was not interested in elms.

He wondered if Dixon would have the pluck to tell Elizabeth. He did not think it. Besides, Dixon had already tried to play on his gratitude; more likely to have a strain, making him feel a brute whatever he did. He only wished he had not been hit by the rain.

Supper over, he filled his pipe and tried unsuccessfully to read. But Dixon's face suddenly grew and flared, however, between him and the fire. Suddenly a loud knock reverberated through the cottage. He listened absently, glad of any distraction. He heard Mrs. Parsons fat comfortable voice raised and another thinner voice answering. Then Mrs. Parsons again.

"Very well, tell him yourself," and she turned to go. He caught the next figure of the Dixon's little maid.

"What is it?" Gerald felt a stab of fear as he looked so perturbed. "If you please, sir," Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. Dixon says to you know anything about him? He's away—not long time is likely to cut the fibers making holes.

For a Sunday night supper treat, some hot biscuits, quickly spread with butter, over them. Put the halves together again and serve them with a hot beverage.

REVERSIBLE

The most economical summer rug is one that is reversible. It may be turned next year and reveal a perfectly clean surface and will wear for many years before it shows soiled and wear due to this double feature.

FLOWERS

Flowers are God's thoughts of beauty taking form to gladden mortal gaze.—Wibberforce. eastern hands they talk in flowers, and tell in a garland their loves and cares.—Percival. Flowers are love's truest language.—Park Benjamin. There is not the least flower but seems to glow in a garland and to look pleasantly in the secret sense of the goodness of its heavenly Maker.—South. Every rose is an autograph from the hand of God on His world about us. He has inscribed His thoughts in these marvellous hieroglyphics which sense and science have, these many thousand years, been seeking to understand.—Theodore Parker.

DAINTINESS ROUTINE IS IMPORTANT NOW

Let's launch a campaign of our own right here at home. Let's be fresh and calm and sweet no matter what our cares and frets. If we aren't really calm, let's look as if we were. That's the idea. But we're to be fresh and sweet-well, there's no setting by there except with the rest of things.

How about your daintiness routine? Are you on a summer schedule? Your frocks go to the laundry cleaner, we're sure. Underarm freshness needs more attention too. You may need to use your anti-perspirant cream often as once a day when the thermometer's really up to tricks.

But millions of other women have been making time to endure the same loss. They, too, have kissed for the last time the lips that would never again speak words of tenderness to them.

They, too, have folded over a still breast the hands that have stood between them and want, and gone out to meet a world in which they faced not only desolation and loneliness, but the necessity of supporting the fatherless little children who hung to their skirts.

But they did not weep and bemoan their fate and think of escaping it by deserting their little ones. They strengthened their souls and went out and did whatever work they could find that would buy food for their children and keep a roof over their heads.

And they told so hard that when night came they were so exhausted they fell into dreamless sleep. And so they lived through the first hard year, and then the second, and the third, and the fourth, and the fifth, and the sixth, and the seventh, and the eighth, and the ninth, and the tenth, and the eleventh, and the twelfth, and the thirteenth, and the fourteenth, and the fifteenth, and the sixteenth, and the seventeenth, and the eighteenth, and the nineteenth, and the twentieth, and the
