Teachers Convention at Hunter River

The local convention of the Teachers Federation of Queens County, was held at Hunter River on Tuesday, August 28.

In the absence of the president, Mr. Gordon Darrach occupied the chair. Fifty four Teachers were present and listened with interest to the different speakers. Miss Jean Rodd was appointed to enroll the teachers.

The following committees were then appointed. Nominating committee Margaret Fleming, Carrie Woodside, Wilfred Nicholson. Press Committee Marion McLean, Ernest Dunning.

Mr. Howard Court was then called upon and first introduced to the teachers the new inspector - Mr. James Murphy; he then gave a very helpful talk on the value of having a well planned time table; and a well kept register. He then emphasized the importance of study groups and asked the teachers to co-operate and make such a success. The teachers of the different school fair centres met in groups for discussion. The last speaker of the morning session was Mr. Gordon Darrach who read a paper on the Fundamentals of Elementary Language Work which is as follows:-

The object of language work is to teach correct grammatical forms and the object of Grammar is to explain why they are correct. The home is the chief agency in teaching language. Habits of expression formed in childhood are likely to remain with us through life. Fortunately, indeed is the child who has been taught to speak correctly at home and extremely unfortunate is the child who has been brought up in a home where the language is abused and mutilated.

The next important agency is the school. The school takes hold of the child after his language habits have been finely established. We cannot expect the school to do everything but we do expect it to do much in teaching a knowledge of the language, and the art of expression. Language is used to express our thoughts and as such is used in every lesson. So that language should be a close second to the subject being studied. There are a sufficient number of occasions to teach correct language in connection with other subjects so that a separate language class is not necessary. Nearly all subjects lend themselves both to oral and written recitation. In fact all teachers should see that the two habits of oral and written expression should be cultivated equally well. Some people are able to speak fluently and unable to write well. Others can write well and yet could not speak to a public audience.

The written recitation, I am sure all have given a copy for a composition and have found that the work is either too slovenly or too stiff because the pupil pays too much attention to the form. Both these faults may be corrected by compelling the child to write two drafts. The first criticism that the work is slovenly is due to the failure of the teacher to require a final draft, legible and readable in form.

The second criticism that the composition is stiff and formal is due to the failure of the teacher to require the pupils to make a rough draft first. When the pupils have to write very legible, when they have to stop to make corrections, all the time fearing that they may make a mistake, they will write as stiffly as a bashful young man when he visits very precise people and fears that every word he says he is making a bad break. If the teacher would permit and show the pupils the use of the two drafts, allowing natural work in the first and requiring careful work in the second the result would be better.

The two essential principles for language study are, the pupil must be free and must be interested. To get a pupil to feel free three things are necessary. In the first place they must have an opportunity to write their thoughts just as they occur to them without having to be bothered about legibility. That is a teacher should allow a second draft, which we have already discussed. In an oral recitation the primary aim is the lesson itself, so that to get the best result a child should be allowed a free rein to deliver message in as good a form as possible. Too many adverse criticisms passed on the form make the child fearful and backward. If there are mistakes, kindly attention should be called to them and suggestions made for their correction. In the second place, the teacher should praise good work more than he censures poor work. If the pupil is praised for good work he will soon become proud of it, will like to do it, and will take criticism with good grace. The third factor for freedom is abstention on part of teacher from marking every error. If all errors are marked a child will become discouraged. Only those errors should be marked which a child is able to correct from previous work.

Interest. We show interest in a conversation. (1) when we are interested in the subject. (2) When we know more than our audience. (3) When our audience is interested. So that subjects for composition should be chosen from subjects that are really interesting to the pupil. By letter writing, telling some personal thrilling event, stories that happened in the community long ago, giving direction for playing a new game, we have the author knowing more than his audience. The audience may be made to appear interested by having the papers prepared to be read to the class. Then the class is the audience instead of the teacher.

It is often said that we should never present incorrect forms to children. Such a rule is "probably good for pupils who have already had in mind the correct form only. Then the incorrect form might side-track them. But if children have been accustomed to incorrect expressions rather than to correct ones, there is nothing wrong in presenting the incorrect form and calling special attention to it, as a warning impressing its wrongness, and showing the children the correct form which should take its place. It is quite noticeable that most children use a variety of incorrect expressions that are correct everywhere. Consequently in teaching language it would be well to have what might be called "The taboed list." Children should then be induced to free themselves of such expressions. Some expressions in common use are: He don't know nothing; he had went at that time; I see him yesterday; He done that easily; He learned me to swim. The psychological moment for teaching a language fact is a moment when the corresponding error is occurring or when a new process, e.g. letter writing is begun and the teacher is desirous of getting things started correctly, so that errors will not occur. At those points the pupils will see the relation of the language facts to their immediate problems.

The meeting then adjourned to meet at 1.30 P. M.

In the afternoon the first speaker on the program was an address by Miss Wilson who gave some helpful topics on the Red Cross; she also thanked the teachers for their co-operation during the year for sending in such good returns during the last campaign.

Mr. H. H. Shaw, Chief Superintendent of Education introduced a prominent speaker - Dr. Warner of Boston who gave a very helpful and instructive address on the preservation of the teeth and the proper mastication of the food, and the food of people, especially the growing child.

Then following remarks by Sup't Shaw who urged the teachers to follow up the course in Physical Drill and also to compete for the trophy which is donated by Lieut. Governor Hertzog for the beautifying of school grounds. He then spoke in considerable detail of the new text books and the course of studies.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved to Dr. Warner for the excellent address.

After the election of officers the meeting was brought to a close.

Douglass Gibson, third year, Toronto University student, lost his life while seeking to "shoot" the Five River falls. A companion reached shore.

Abandon Search For Amundsen

(Canadian Press)
OSLO, Sept. 6.—Further search of the polar ice fields for traces of Raouid Amundsen, and his five companions of the Noble rescue expedition has been abandoned. This was declared today at a meeting of government officials and polar experts at the ministry of defense. Search will be continued, however, along the Norwegian coast in the hope of discovering more relics of the seaplane in which the six men were travelling when disaster overtook them. A pontoon from the French naval machine, discovered a few days ago off Tromsø, convinced the officials that the men were dead.

CHAMBERLAIN EXPECTED TO RETURN FROM SEA TRIP IN GOOD HEALTH

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Following alarmist reports regarding the health of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, it is learned in medical and other well informed quarters that there is no reason to suppose that the Minister will not return from his trip to the West Indies and North America in good health.

An attack of bronchial pneumonia following strenuous work during the past year left Sir Austen in a weak condition, but it is believed that the rest and change will restore him to health and will enable him to resume his duties on his return in November.

J. Donnelly, Summerville, returned home Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew MacEachern, West River and Mrs. Daniel McEachern, Ch'town, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McEachern, Millview.

Mr. George Smith, Millview, was a recent visitor to the city.

Mrs. Catherine Worth, Mr. Ernest Worth, Rev. Mr. Raymond and Mrs. Raymond, Ch'town were recent visitors to Alberry Plains.

A party comprising Mr. Kelsey Burhoe, city, Mrs. Henry Burhoe, Alexandra, Mrs. Dunbrach and three children, Waltham, Mass., and Mrs. Vail, Moncton motorized to Montague last week.

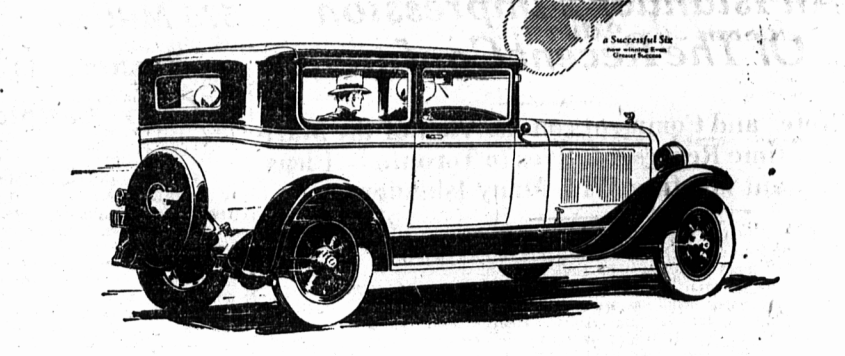

The many friends of Mr. Chas. McKenneth, Millview, are very sorry to learn that he had to undergo an operation for appendicitis. His many friends hope for his speedy recovery.

Miss Harriet Hayes, Waterville, was a recent visitor to Millview.

The stork is again on the rounds having visited the homes of Mr. and Mrs. John Curley, Hermitage, Mr. and Mrs. John Shea, Waterville, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Egan, Vernon River and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Duffy, Village Green.

"Gee" news is scarce so I think I will have to ring off and sign N.A.O. K. e-e-e.

IMPROVED in Performance and Appearance

OUTSHINING even its famous predecessors in smooth, effortless performance . . . more smartly styled than ever before—

—today's Pontiac Six is the most impressive example of value-giving in the whole history of the low-priced six!

Substantial gains in motoring pleasure and economy result from important mechanical advancements, such as a new Marvel carburetor, new manifold, etc. More intriguing beauty and the much desired air of rugged compactness have been achieved by the use of smaller, smarter wheels and larger tires.

And, beneath all its brilliance of beauty and performance, Pontiac Six is a supremely dependable car . . . a car that sails through a wearing, tearing, day-long drive and finishes with the same spirited freshness with which it started the trip.

Every day people are coming in to drive this greatest of all Pontiacs—to express admiration for its new and alluring beauty—to marvel at its increased ability and acceleration. And when you come in, too, will instantly realize that General Motors has again produced a finer automobile—has established a still higher standard of what you have a right to expect in a six so low in price.

Liberal Party In Britain A Nonentity

SWANSEA, Wales, Sept. 6.—Right Hon. Arthur Henderson extending the greetings of the Labor party to the Trades Union Congress today said that politically Labor was now a national party and the only serious alternative to the present Government.

"Talk of violence, irresponsibility, even evidence of fanaticism and suggested integration in our ranks won't divert us from our objective," declared Mr. Henderson. Continuing, he said, that if he read the signs of the times correctly, Labor now stood at the threshold of power and therefore it was all the more important to maintain close contact between industrial and political sides. The coming months, he believed, would see Labor's greatest political adventure.

Hopefield and its Suburbs

I sing the praises of the charming boulevards of Hopefield, its never falling brook, its busy mill, the noble woods upon the distant hill.

Here by the brook stands the store of Mr. Chester McEachern, filled to capacity.

A sportsman of more than local note, a horseman of high reputation, among the leaders, and a farmer above ordinary introduces Mr. Norman MacPherson.

A word for our mail corner, always prompt to duty's call, efficient and obliging, happy in his flying Whippet, this again is our friend Mr. MacPherson, mentioned above.

Mr. Austin, who has been preaching all summer in Wood Islands preaches his last sermon next Sunday.

MacPherson's Bridge at Little Sands, is being replaced by a new concrete structure built on cross-section piles. The road on both side of it is closed necessitating a long detour. It will be opened again for traffic in the course of a week or so.

Most of the grain in this locality is cut and will be safely stored in a few days. The harvest is one of the best.

Mr. and Mrs. Murdock MacDonald recently motored from Connecticut, and were the guests of Mr. William MacDonald, of Little Sands, who is a brother of Mr. MacDonald. They returned to Connecticut, where their home is, last week.

Mr. J. E. Purchase of Mt. Vernon, has recovered from his recent illness much to the joy of his many friends.

Mr. Murdock MacPhee of Hopefield, threshed part of his oat crop which showed a remarkable yield.

The Picture of Health

With the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the school girl's nerves are now fully restored and she returns to school "the picture of health."

What a blessing this great restorative has proven to hundreds of thousands of girls during this critical period of their lives when their nervous systems are under so great strain.

Besides headaches, digestive troubles, lassitude and general weakness, there is always the dread of St. Vitus' dance or some form of nervous helplessness.

But you can depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood and restore the nervous energy.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

is his first visit. Leaving as a boy of 14 years, and coming back 38 years later he still found many childhood friends in Tryon who although hardly recognizing him remembered distinctly Fred Craig who was a boy with them. They had a beautiful trip free from accidents of any kind and the whole party are delighted with P. E. I. its scenery, people etc. They leave Friday on the return trip and will be accompanied by Mr. Malcolm Matheson, and Miss Euphemia Matheson, Bradabane. Mr. Matheson who was a former Postmaster at Bradabane is 86 years of age and is still able to step out and enjoy a motor trip to the U. S.
