FINGER PRINTS IN DUST GIVE POLICE CLUE IN ROBBERY.

MONTREAL, April 27—Finger prints in the dust found on a clock in the store of Pearson Bros., a Notre Dame street jeweller, led to the arrest of Alber Leclair, the man being caught by Detectives Martin and Lebine as he alighted from a Montreal train at Quebec on Saturday night.

Leclair is suspected of being the man who pulled off the novel stunt of entering a robbery in the purpose of committing a robbery in one of them. At Pearson's a clock was in the way and in removing it the finger prints showed plainly in the dust, Bertillon expert Eugene Laflamme, is a preparation that we can recommend to those who feel "fagged out." It tones up the system, promotes the appetite, aids digestion, purifies and enriches the blood. It is not a "cure all" but is an excellent medicine to take at this season of the year.

HUGHES' Burdock and Sarsaparilla

decided on examination that the prints were those of Leclair who had passed through his hands before. A hunt was made for the man with the result that he was caught at Quebec with a suit case in each hand which he said to have contained jewelry which he will have to account for. He was arraigned this morning before Judge Leet, pleaded not guilty to theft from three Montreal stores and was remanded for enquete on the 2nd.

Forty-one Years "IN SOLITARY"

A Boston despatch of April 19, inst., read as follows:—From the window of his cell in State prison Jesse Pomeroy, a life prisoner, saw his first game of baseball today in forty years. The match was played between prison nines.

On May 8 (next month) this remarkable prisoner will have completed forty-one years in solitary confinement. This is the world's record of Jesse Pomeroy, confined in a small, poorly ventilated cell in the Massachusetts State's Prison at Charlestown, Mass.

When Pomeroy was a boy of 15 he was accused of torturing children in South Boston, Mass., and later when the bodies of several children were found showing they had been tortured to death, the lad was accused of murder, found guilty and sentenced to solitary confinement for life.

For many years the different Governors of Massachusetts have been appealed to in an effort on the part of the friends of the prisoner to have him freed or at least to have his terrible condition of life remedied at Charlestown. Nothing has ever been done. Whenever a movement was started to free the prisoner, stories appeared in the newspapers telling of crimes that Pomeroy has committed since in prison and a damper was put on efforts to make his existence less miserable.

AGITATION TO HELP HIM.

After forty years of life in a dingy prison cell, a movement was, last May, started to help Pomeroy. Women's clubs in various cities took to the matter to see if something could be done, while nearer home, District Attorney Joseph Pelletier, of Boston, lectured about New England advocating that something should be done for the prisoner.

District Attorney Pelletier said in one lecture at the Revere House, Boston: "I don't advocate turning Jesse Pomeroy loose, but he should not be kept in solitary confinement. No man should be kept in solitary confinement. Yes, he did commit crime, but there are other crimes among us that are being committed and some of these are just as bad, I think Pomeroy has been used cruelly, and I am doing all I can to help him." All efforts, however, were fruitless.

MOTHER STILL LIVES
Pomeroy's aged mother, Mrs. Ruth Pomeroy, of 47 Pearl Street, North

Weymouth, Mass., is the most pathetic figure in the Pomeroy case. She is 81, bent almost double with rheumatism, and is despondent at her failure in her 41 years of effort to free her son. All these years she has had no other thought. She has been to see in person, every Governor who has been elected in Massachusetts since her boy was sentenced and she has never missed the one visit a month which the prison officials allow her. Outside of the prison guards Mrs. Pomeroy is the only human being the poor wretch of a convict sees in his solitary cell. From one year's end to the other, he is allowed 30 minutes of exercise outside his cell, with a guard each day, but he sees no one else, and can not talk to his keeper.
