A RICH FIND.

A correspondent writes:—A farmer near Uigg Station was putting in his grain a few days ago and found nicely tucked away under a stook of grain a five gallon still full of beer. The still has the appearance of long service in the moonshine business. There is a dense forest on the rear of the small farms, and a gentleman who was home from Boston was out there picking blueberries and found a still near a spring in this forest. When he came home he reported his find, and it is supposed that this is the same still, and the person who found it got tired carrying it and hid it till he went home for a horse and get it after night. But he got badly left. The owner can have it by proving property.

CHURCH WORK — Rev. R. H. Stavert returned on Monday evening from a short visit to his old congregation in Harcourt. N. B. Harcourt was one of the congregations which voted strongly against church union. On Sunday last Mr Stavert conducted the services in the Presbyterian churches at Harcourt Mill Branch and Coal Branch and at the close of the regular services dispensed the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. In all three churches large congregations were present and a deep interest was manifested, a deeply solemn and revelent atmosphere pervaded all of the audience. This it is believed was due largely to the feeling of gratitude which was welding up in the hearts of the people because they realized that now after the church union contest was over the freedom which had been purchased for them by the blood of their forefathers was still their At the three services Mr. Stavert received thirteen new members in all into full communion and also had two names which had been wrongly removed from the communion roll restored. Presbyterian services were also held Thursday, Friday and Saturday during his stay in the congregation. Mr. Stavert also baptised ten children. The people in the different sections of the congregation have reaffirmed their loyalty to the standard and doctrines of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and with renewed zeal are rallying to the work, so that the outlook for the future is bright. The election for seven new elders was held and arrangements are being made to have them ordained at the earliest possible date.—Com.

David Copperfield
COLOR CUT-OUTS

A STRANGE HOME COMING

This is one day's chapter of the story of "David Copperfield." Children who cut out the picturts every day will soon have a whole set of paper dolls with which to act out the story.

"Why Peggotty," cried David, isn't mother home yet?"

"Yes, yes, Master Davy," Peggotty stammered. "She's come home. Wait a bit, Master Davy, and —— I'll tell you something."

"Peggotty," David cried, frightened at the way she looked. "what's the matter? Where's mother?"

Peggotty got down from the cart, took David by the hand and led him, wondering very much, into the kitchen, where she shut the door. "You see, dear, I should have told you before," she said, looking very white, and frightening David more than ever. "I should have told you before, but I couldn't. You have a new father."

(This lovely dress of Mrs. Copperfield's should be made a pale blue, trimmed with pink. The bonnet also should be blue with pink rose buds.)

"SHIMMYING"

The causes of "Shimmying" of front wheels are varied. Often however, when everything seems done that can be done to stop it, there is one point overlooked.

That is the alignment or axis of the front axle. I do not mean the alignment of the front wheels as this often has little to do with shimmying unless the wheels are told out to such a degree as to wear the tires, when the trouble will cease.

I refer to the tilt of the front axle. There is a certain limit to its lay either forward or backward. It will change as the front springs flatten or settle. Stand at the side of your car at the front wheel and look at the king bolt or spindle body bolt, that bolt on which the front axle spindle body turns and to which the front wheel is attached. Its position should be slightly leaning toward the rear of the car, meaning that the top of the king bolt lays back and the bottom comes forward. If it is absolutely perpendicular place a wedge of steel between the spring and the front axle with the thick end of the wedge at the rear. If it lays forward at the top it may be necessary to instal new spring shackles at the rear of the front spring with holes drilled one and a half inches farther apart than in the old shackles. If the pin tilts too far back place the wedge with the thick end at the front. Drill a hole in the wedge to receive the spring bolt, and bolt the spring down very tightly.

DeSABLE NOTES.

The Department of Marine and Fisheries put in a waterway for the trout to get up in Ross' mill dam at Vernon River. It's a complete job and it's up to the Department to enforce the law against fishing out of season, as it is often done in this pond.

J. K. ROSS GEO. MILLER
ROSS-MILLER BISCUIT CO.
—MANUFACTURERS—
FOX AND DOG BISCUITS, STOCK FOODS
Nutritional Biscuits For Children

Charlottetown, P. E. I.,
Sept. 10, 1925.

Sales Letter

Dear Sir:

We wish to introduce our new improved fox and dog biscuit, which we are placing on the market.

After many years experience in the manufacture of fox and dog biscuit, Ross and Miller have opened a large factory at Napanee, Ontario, equipped with all the up-to-date machinery used in the manufacture of biscuit, including one of the largest revolving ovens in Canada.

The biscuits contain pure cod liver oil and are thoroughly and uniformly baked under a low temperature to save the valuable vitamines. They are much relished by foxes and dogs and are guaranteed by the manufacturers to be sanitary and 100% digestible.

The biscuits are made of a strong flour, rich in gluten, together with a good percentage of whole wheat flour. The idea is to get back to the "Old Grist Mill" process of nourishing flour, containing the most valuable properties of the wheat. The pork and beef crackling used in these superior biscuit is sterilized, making it fit for human food. The ground bone meal is of the finest quality, rendering it easily assimilated.

The Ross-Miller Biscuit Company place these biscuit upon the market with the confidence that they will give every satisfaction. Our standard fox and dog biscuit, prepared under the direction of expert scientists, is certainly the last word in nutritional biscuit.

The testimony of ranchers who have tested this biscuit is favorable in every case. We ask you to test their merits for yourself.

Two wholesale distributors have been appointed to handle our goods, Carter & Company, Charlottetown, for Queens and Kings County, and, Brace, McKay & Company, Summerside, for Prince County.

Yours for service,

J. K. ROSS,
Manager.
