Dorothy Dix's Letter Box. FRIENDS GAINED AND HELD ONLY BY PROPER COURTING. If You Remain Inside of a Shell Don't Expect People to go Out of Their Way to Make Themselves Pleasant to You. A correspondent asks: "How can I make and keep friends?" Well, making friends is like making a success in business. It isn't a bit of good luck that befalls you. It is the result of years of hard work, of effort and self-denial and prudence and tact and making our wares seem desirable to others. We have to sell ourselves to those we meet. There is nothing in a casual glance that would cause any one to break his neck to have us for a friend. Those who complain that they have no friends are virtually always of the standoffish kind. The sort that expect others to do all the running and make all the advances. They have to be courted and flattered and fêted and dragged out of their shells and they never stop to ask themselves what is so wonderful about them that any one would take the trouble to throw them out of the glacial crust of ice in which they have increased themselves.
